'Spenser' rent was $2,000

"Spenser: For Hire," the television series which shot some scenes in Winchester Aug. 14 and 15, has made the town's "affordable housing" program $2,000 richer.

Selectmen accepted a check for that amount from Warner Brothers, producer of the series, Tuesday night. The check is written specifically to the affordable housing program, which has town meeting approval for seven units to be built in the next year.

Scenes for the series were filmed in several Winchester locations, including the town hall auditorium where a boxing match was staged.

The auditorium will become the "Cornwall, N.H., boxing arena" when the segments filmed in Winchester are aired. The series will move to Saturday night and the Winchester segments are scheduled Oct. 4 on NBC.

Town forest water pipe to be topic

Selectmen will discuss a water pipe through the town forest during their next meeting at 7:30 p.m. Monday.

A. Horace Weene and his attorney, Robert Russo, appeared before selectmen Tuesday to ask permission to run the pipe along an existing path through the town forest. The water line is needed to develop an A & T Realty subdivision of 18 lots on the south side of Sussex Road, just west of the town forest.

Russo said the new pipe would follow the route recommended by both the department of public works and the planning board, as well as the developer's own consulting engineer.

Weene said the pipe would be installed with a "very narrow backhoe" to create a trench "just wide enough to accept the pipe."

He said if any trees have to be removed, they will be "at a minimum."

Selectman Bob Deering said he found the definition too vague. "I'd like the words 'minimal trees' to be better defined," he said.

Weene and Russo said they have "no problem" with Deering's request. They said they have been working on getting water to the subdivision for about a year and the onset of winter may mean no work actually begins this year.

Selectman Judie Muggia suggested a decision be delayed a week because selectman Wade Welch was absent Tuesday night. "I know the chairman has questions for you," she told Weene and Russo. "He very much wanted to be part of this discussion."

Selectmen unanimously voted to postpone consideration of the question until Sept. 8.

New parking plans may cost downtown spaces for 25 autos

By GEORGE DERRINGER

There may soon be fewer places to park in Winchester center.

Selectmen struggled Tuesday with a new downtown parking plan that would result in the loss of about 25 on-street parking places, according to selectman Frank Sopper.

Another discussion is slated for 7:30 p.m. Monday Sept. 8.

State laws require 20 feet of empty space between parking places and crosswalks but Sopper said the laws make no sense and don't save lives. He said the town should seek a special dispensation from the state.

Presented a plan by town engineer Jake Ciarcia, selectmen decided not to take any action Tuesday but to ask Ciarcia for a new plan that would "be consistent" throughout town in all areas where parking spaces are painted on the pavement.

> "There must be some other way," Sopper said. "I would think the business community would be upset."

Sopper said he could understand why 20 feet of empty space might be needed at school crossings but not in the business district. He said the law was unenforceable and the state does not enforce the regulation in other towns.

"There must be some other way," Sopper said. "I would think the business community would be upset" with the regulation, he said.

Selectman Bob Deering agreed other towns don't adhere to the regulation but said, "Once the subject is brought up, I can't sit here and say we'll not enforce it. If we knowingly relax the regulation from 20 feet to three feet, we've subjected the town to a possible liability suit."

Deering said he didn't think the plan would require the loss of as

Appeals board to rule on pick-up trucks at home

By MAUREEN QUINLAN

New residents William and Adele Muller of 164 Ridge Street didn't know they were violating town by-laws.

The Mullers were recently informed by acting building commissioner Arthur Gallagher that they are in violation.

Gallagher said he drove by their home and observed a boat in their side yard and a commercial vehicle, a pick-up truck, parked in their driveway.

According to the town by-law, a commercial vehicle is permitted at a residence if it is parked in a "completely enclosed building," a garage.

Another town by-law stipulates boats are only allowed in the rear of a yard.

The Mullers have 20 days to appeal to the zoning board of appeals and try to get a special permit. They are scheduled to come before the board at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 16, in the Board of Health clinic room at town hall.

> According to the town by-law, a commercial vehicle is permitted at a residence if it is parked in a "completely enclosed building," a garage.

William Muller said, "If I knew about it I wouldn't have moved here." The Mullers recently moved from Woburn where they were allowed to park their truck in their driveway and their boat in their side yard.

Muller said he parks his truck, which he uses for recreational purposes, in his driveway during the day. He said it is difficult to get the truck in his garage. But he parks it in the garage every night.

Muller said police told him he could park his truck on the street as long as there is no writing on it. Muller called the situation "ridiculous."

He said the real estate agent he dealt with never mentioned the town by-laws. "I'm annoyed at the real estate agent for not telling us."

Muller said he is prepared to fight. But, he said, "I'll probably look for another house (in another town)."

White Street to be re-paved

By GEORGE DERRINGER

White Street will be resurfaced, as promised to area residents three years ago.

The mechanics of the process were a bit confusing but the intent of selectmen was clear during discussion Tuesday night.

John Murphy, precinct chairman and a resident of the area but not White Street, told selectmen last week about broken promises to the area. State crews drove heavy equipment across White Street three years ago and cracked the pavement during construction of the Swanton Street bridge.

Tuesday, selectman Mark Lombardi recalled how he and former selectmen Mike Saraco had inspected the street and been told the department of public works (DPW) would resurface it after the bridge was completed.

Disputing an Aug. 28 letter from DPW director Dom Serratore, Lombardi said funds for White Street did, in fact, exist in the budget during the past three years.

"We promised those people we'd resurface the street. We owe it to them," Lombardi said. "The budget had extra money for a lot of things. Mike Saraco and I feel betrayed."

Serratore's letter said the DPW

Selectmen unable to choose new conservation commissioner

By GEORGE DERRINGER

It will be another week before a new member of the town conservation commission is named.

Selectmen could not agree Tuesday on any of seven candidates to fill a vacancy on the commission. The vacancy was created by the death of Margaret Howard, the chairman, and selectmen must appoint a member to complete her term until March 31, 1988.

Four more candidates were interviewed Tuesday night. Robert DeWald, a chemistry professor at Tufts University, was first.

DeWald said he strongly supported adherence to the state Wetlands Act and wanted to protect the town's open space. He has a special interest in the Aberjona River, he said.

"Where the river crosses Salem Street in Woburn, the water is crystal clear," Dewald said. "But here it's very dirty. It would improve the looks of the town if we had clean water running through the Mill Pond."

Susan Levine, an attorney, musician and writer, said her skills in law and writing would be helpful to the conservation commission.

Exchange student nearly marries in Malaysia

By ERIC MORTENSEN

I have always believed the function of politics is not to lead the people according to a specific scale of values but to help create an environment in which various value systems can coexist.

The Malaysian political race was won by the party that had adhered to this policy in the past.

The Malaysian population consists of three major races and requires an intricate government to satisfy their intertwined lifestyles. As an American Field Service (AFS) international and intercultural short-term exchange student, I had the honor to witness the recent elections.

Three children stand in front of the Malaysian home they share with 12 other people. (Eric Mortensen photo)

Malaysia has been my home for about nine weeks. Yesterday I returned to my village from a "vacation" in the eastern state of Terengganu. There I stayed in a kampung (village) home with 13 people in the one room.

The prominent figure of this household was a venerable old man, obviously having great prestige. He was a gentle man, garnished with wrinkles and a radiant smile that revealed a quagmire of conjealed teeth, never sullied by a toothbrush.

He acted as my liaison to the aged family members. At times, he plunged from his Malaysian vernacular into a cadence of exquisite English.

Navigating his way through innumerable errors, he spoke in a concentrated state, throttling every word and wreaking havoc on my native tongue.

In an effort to ameliorate the situation, I gallantly attempted to speak Bahasa Malaysia. It was a juxtaposition of failures in eloquence.

I returned to my kampung today just in time for a wedding. I tried to go incognito, wearing my traditional Malaysian garb, but as an "oran-putih" (white man — and the only one for dozens of miles) I had no chance of avoiding stares.

Most people at the wedding knew me so I escaped some unwanted attention. But I affected the children the same way a sandbox might interest a herd of energetic three-year-olds.

This perpetually jovial gang of naive little kids has, over the weeks, become a group of good friends. They always stick together, like glutinous rice, and are convinced a pinch of my "putih" hair, illegitimately snatched from an arm or leg, would make a splendid souvenir.

The wedding itself was under an enormous pink pavilion and the caterers (the entirety of the groom's family) provided an endless supply of exciting entertainment. Attractions ranged from martial arts ("silat") to traditional dancing to the sport of sepat tekraw — and even the gravity of Islamic prayer.

The wedding certainly proved a fascinating excursion. AFS gives students like me a chance to experience foreign cultures through total immersion in them.

Halfway through the wedding ceremony, a good friend notified me of my parents' attempt to arrange a marriage — for me!

The other party in the plan was the beautiful sister of the groom, which did not help matters much.

Just think. An impressionable 16-year-old boy, with nobody to stop him, matched with a gorgeous Asian girl — with the guarantee of a long, relaxed, peaceful village life ahead.

What's wrong with this picture? Moral values — blah!

The wedding couple, seated at center, is surrounded by family and friends after a rural ceremony in Malaysia. The crowd thought Eric Mortensen of Winchester, an AFS exchange student in the area, would make the perfect husband for the young lady standing just behind the bride. "Oh, the bride is supposed to look sad," Mortensen explained. "It would be bad luck if she smiled." (Eric Mortensen photo)

THINK SMALL— INCREASE INCOME

If you own a rental home or condominium or plan to buy one, you might be interested in the results drawn from a study done by the country's largest real estate management company. Here is what they found.

The major conclusion was that rental-home purchasers who think small will pocket more rent. Nationwide, single houses in the $70,000 range and condos in the $50,000-$60,000 range turned out to be the most efficient rental income producers. The typical $70,000 single home brought in a rental income of 9% of its market resale value. Houses above $100,000 ranged from 8% down to 5% as their sales value increased. The same relationship evidences itself in condominiums. Modest town houses yielded 9% of their resale value in rental income whereas top-of-the-line condos in the $200,000 class barely earned 5-6%.

In high-demand-low supply areas of the country, incomes often reached 14% of sales value. When you consider rental income—it appears that two smalls are worth more than one large.

Street to be paved by town

would resurface White Street during the current fiscal year but would use the "chip seal" method, not a new asphalt pavement. The cheaper method is also planned for a number of other town streets.

Town manager Chad Maurer said he understood the promise to White Street residents was to re-pave the street, "using the method of that time," which was asphalt or blacktop.

Lombardi, however, said very few streets were re-paved last year. Instead, the selectman said, most of the paving budget was used in the downtown area for the paving project completed last week.

"One of those spots out there, in the downtown area, is White Street," Lombardi said. "Paving in the center came out of all the neighborhoods."

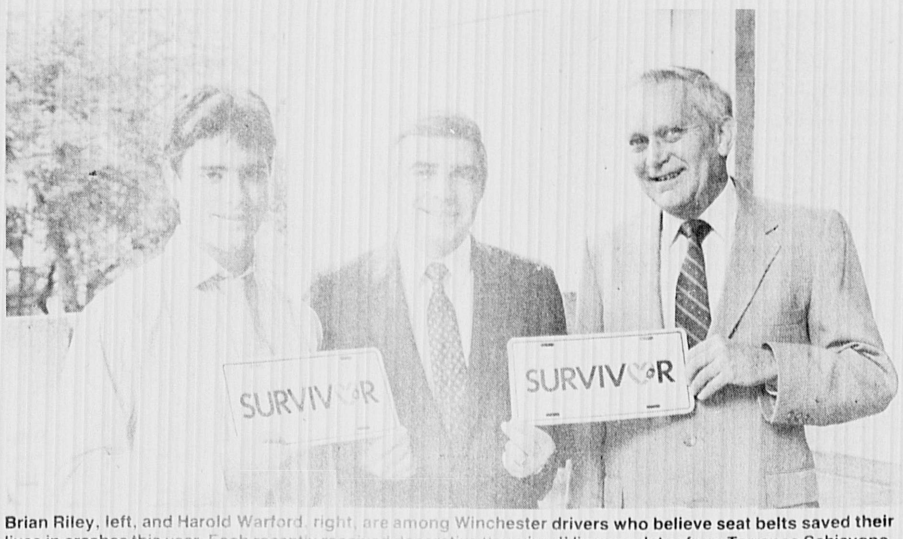
Maurer said re-paving White Street with asphalt would cost about $8,000 but money from the "chip seal" budget could not be used for it because town meeting created two separate paving accounts for different purposes.

Selectman Bob Deering agreed with Lombardi, saying White Street residents were promised asphalt paving and they should get it. "We're not doing this (paving with asphalt) because people said they don't want chip seal, but because they were promised asphalt," Deering said.

Deering also suggested the state might have a responsibility to provide funds because contractors working for the state had ruined the street three years ago.

Selectman Frank Sopper moved that White Street be removed from the plan for "chip seal" resurfacing but Lombardi objected, fearing that such action could result in no new paving on White Street at all. Sopper's motion failed to win a majority.

The intent of all four selectmen present, with chairman Wade Welch absent, was clear. One way or another, White Street will be re-paved soon.



Brian Riley, left, and Harold Warford, right, are among Winchester drivers who believe seat belts saved their lives in crashes this year. Each recently received decorative "survivor" license plates from Terrance Schiavone, center, director of the Governor's Highway Safety Bureau.

Three Winchester people say seat belts saved lives

Two Winchester teens and a Winchester couple have joined a growing number of Massachusetts "seat belt survivors" who have been spared serious injury this year because they buckled up, according to Terrance D. Schiavone, director of the Governor's Highway Safety Bureau.

"These people are living proof that seat belts save lives," Schiavone said as he presented them with decorative "survivor" plates. "More people in this state are buckling up now than ever, and we are beginning to see those results."

Brian Riley, 17, of 512 South Border Road, and driver Ara Bagdasarian, 17, of Connecticut were both buckled up when Bagdasarian's car skidded off the road, "flew into the woods," and hit three trees July 6 in New Hampshire.

Though his automobile was totalled, Riley and his passenger suffered only minor injuries. They are both certain they would have suffered serious injuries or death had they not been wearing seatbelts.

Harold Warford, 53, and his wife Ruann Warford, 50, also say safety belts saved them from more serious injuries following an accident Feb. 12 in Woburn. Warford was driving from Reading to Winchester when he collided with another automobile. Though his car was heavily damaged, he and his wife suffered only minor injuries.

Warford did not wear a seat belt before the law went into effect and said the law probably saved his life.

Riley and Warford are mong 160 "survivors" who say they have been spared from serious injury and even death since the seat belt law took effect Jan. 1.

More than 91 drivers and passengers reported that they had never or hardly ever used seat belts prior to the new law.

Winchester exchange student turns down Malaysian wedding

In fact, if you are even accused of intimacy with a member of the opposite sex in Malaysia, parents begin wedding arrangements. This is definitely not the best situation for secret romances. (Don't worry, Mom and Dad.)

This must sound so alien and foreign. It is, but I have become accustomed to life here. I am no longer an adapting visitor.

I have become part of the family, the society, the everyday life of my beautifully rural kampung.

By the time this is published, however, I will be back in Winchester, ripped from the home I worked so hard to become a part of.

AFS is not a vacation. Do you enjoy carrying water from the well that's 10 minutes away to your house — or do you prefer a faucet?

Do you want to wake up with a lizard on your forehead — or do you prefer an air-conditioned room with a waterbed?

Is privacy a relevant part of your daily life?

I'm not condemning creature comforts. But if you join AFS, you will realize that "happiness" is an ambiguous word.

More to come.

LOCATION

The old Realtors' adage, "location, location, location," reflects the fact that location is one of the most important considerations in determining the price of a home.

The neighborhood in which a house is located is a major factor, but not the only. For instance, if a house is on a busy street, it may not appeal to buyers concerned about children or pets playing in traffic. If it's in an area that is not convenient to the major business district, or if there's no public transportation into town, some people might rule it out on that basis. While a nearby school may be an attractive feature to families with children, having a school directly across the street may not seem so desirable. It's important to remember, however, that you can get more house for the money if you're not bothered by location factors that could cause others to rule out the property.

If there's a move in your future, contact the professionals at Bixby & Porter Company Realtors. Call us at 729-7000 or drop by our offices at 33 Thompson St., Winchester.

A cormorant has apparently taken up residence at Wedge Pond in Winchester. The predator bird, known for greed, has been seen diving for fish in the pond. Sometimes his neck is visible and looks more like a periscope than a bird. Several residents have wondered what the "strange new bird" at Wedge Pond really is. (Wes Schmale photo)

Winchester Troop 503 honors new Eagle Scouts

Three young men from Winchester have earned distinction as Eagle Scouts.

Arthur C. R. Gleason, Charles R. Almquist and Michael B. Hall, all members of Winchester Boy Scouts Troop 503, were honored recently with the highest rank in scouting.

The Eagle award is the highest given to a young man who has attained the ideals and goals of the Boy Scouts of America. The path to the award is difficult and challenging; fewer than one scout in 1,000 attains the distinction.

Eligibility for the Eagle award requires completion of many tasks, a minimum time of service and demonstration of leadership qualities.

A scout must earn 21 merit badges, including 11 which are mandatory, and must serve his community through an outstanding service project.

Hall's Eagle service project was to refurbish the kitchen facilities at the Crawford Memorial United Methodist Church.

Hall planned the project with church authorities, prepared a budget and work plan, recruited a team of helpers from among his fellow scouts and friends, and completed the project over three weekends.

Almquist's project was to categorize the Air Force ROTC reference library at the Massachusetts Insitute of Technology (MIT). More than 400 books were sorted by subject area and title.

The resulting data base greatly increased the utility of the library and provided it with a means of better record-keeping.

Gleason's service project was directed by Thomas Raphael, institutional representative of Troop 503, and consisted of a comprehensive computer-based inventory of the furnishings of the troop's host institution, the First Congregational Church.

In his project, Gleason listed, evaluated and photographed the contents of each room in the church.

Glenn Dorsam receives Eagle Award in scouting

Glenn Dorsam of 25 Prince Ave., was presented the Eagle Award in scouting by Paul Gregorieff, scoutmaster, at a ceremony in Dorsam's honor at the Unitarian Church.

Representative Sherman Saltmarsh presented Dorsam with a citation from the House of Representatives. The Eagle Charge was given by Richard Glenn, president of Gered Brown Bros. Inc., Detroit, Mich. Other guest speakers were Roger Sudbury, Emile Beauchamp, John Fredericks and Tom Reidy.

A reception at the Dorsam home followed.

The Eagle Award is the highest award given to a scout who has attained the ideals and goals of the Boy Scouts of America. To achieve this goal, a scout, in addition to earning 21 merit badges, must serve his community with outstanding service.

Glenn served as a troop leader for a year, worked as a volunteer at Winchester Hospital and authored and produced an educational booklet which provides a history and guide to the plantlife and wildlife of the Fellsway Reservation. This booklet is available locally.

Dorsam will study the biologiccal sciences at Michigan State University this fall, where he hopes to also become a strong competitor in track and field events.

Dorsam is the son of Anne Franciose-Perrault of Winchester and Paul Dorsam of Bayside, Long Island.

Council seeks parent volunteers

The Parent Aide Program at Woburn Council of Social Concern seeks volunteers to work with parents in the community who are experiencing constant stress.

There are often situations when loneliness or confusion make it difficult to cope with daily responsibilities of parenting. At such times it is good to reach out to a friend, a parent aide, a person who will listen and offer an unbiased support. Parent aide volunteers act as role models, supportive friends, understanding advocates and caring companions.

Being part of a parent aide program offers a volunteer an opportunity for personal growth and development and for exploring a possible career in human services.

The next training session will start Sept. 8. For more information call 935-6495.

LIBRARY NEWS

Register for 'Fall Storytimes'

Registration for the second session of "Fall Storytimes" at the Winchester Public Library's junior library will begin at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 16.

Different story hours are planned for two-year-olds and for three- and four-year-olds, with both sessions beginning the week of Oct. 14 and running six weeks.

Two sessions of stories for two-year-olds, called "For You 2," will be conducted, one Wednesdays and one Fridays from 10:30 to 11 a.m. An adult must accompany children at the sessions.

Stories for three- and four-year-olds (and five-year-olds not yet in kindergarten) are scheduled from 10:30 to 11:15 a.m. Tuesdays and from 1:15 to 2 p.m. Thursdays.

Story hours will feature simple crafts, fingerplays, short films, musical activities and stories. Attendance is limited to children who did not attend the first session of story hours this fall. Advance registration is required.

Fall schedule underway

The library is now on its fall schedule.

The adult department is open from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday and from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

The junior library is open from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. six days a week and until 8:30 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday only.

Conservation commissioner unnamed

"I'm trained in negotiations," she said. "To be effective in government, it's important to be an advocate for your own position but also to understand opposing sides."

Levine said her "enthusiasm for the outdoors" would also be an asset. "The town is in danger of becoming not-so-pretty," she said.

Donald Mowat, a mechanical engineer, agreed with the views of Levine and DeWald and said he felt no need to repeat them in his own interview with selectmen.

Debra Rogers, owner of the Domino's Pizza franchise in town, said she studied environmental science and forestry in college. She said she specialized in soils and hydration issues.

A week earlier, selectmen interviewed Elaine Vreeland, Walworth Williams and Roger Wilson Jr. for the conservation commission vacancy.

Tuesday, however, only three candidates were nominated: DeWald, Vreeland and Levine.

Any town resident may apply for the commission. Nomination by a selectman, however, is needed before a formal vote by the board.

DeWald was nominated by selectman Mark Lombardi and also received the vote of selectman Frank Sopper.

Vreeland was nominated by selectman Bob Deering and Levine by selectman Judie Muggia.

None of the candidates got three votes, a majority of the five-member board of selectmen. During the next meeting, scheduled at 7:30 p.m. Monday, Sept. 8, all three names will be put back in nomination. If all five members are present, one may win a majority. Chairman Wade Welch was absent Tuesday night.

In other business Tuesday, selectmen:

• Approved a Sept. 13 fireworks permit for the Italian Fiesta. The fireworks will be displayed from Leonard Pool.

• Approved sidewalk completion orders for Hill and Pond streets.

• Argued whether fire chief Robert McElhinney should attend meetings of the North Suburban Emergency Medical Consortium, which Winchester declined to join. Town manager Chad Maurer said McElhinney should attend in case the town wishes to participate in the future. No decision was reached.

• Learned of four permanent appointments by the town manager. Elizabeth Anderson of Woburn will be a records clerk in the treasurer's office, Edward M. Hogan of Medford a skilled laborer in the highway division of the department of public works, Paul J. Ferraina of Winchester a transfer station operator and Donna M. Cuff of Winchester a school crossing guard.

Parking plan could cost center up to 25 spaces

many as 25 spaces.

Town counsel Doug Randall was asked if non-compliance with state laws could put the town in a precarious legal position. "If you vary from the regulation, that would be some evidence that the town is negligent," Randall answered.

"What if we don't paint white lines on the crosswalks?" Sopper asked.

"Then you don't have legal crosswalks," Randall said. The attorney said a lack of legal crosswalks could also endanger the town's legal position because "someone might claim the town has failed to provide adequate crosswalks.

Deering said he was "appalled" by Sopper's suggestion that state law be bypassed.

"We would gain 25 parking spaces but subject our residents to possible personal injury," he said.

Selectman Judie Muggia said the center has enough parking spaces but they are not used well.

Selectman Mark Lombardi objected most to the plan because the 20-foot regulation appeared to be used only on some streets. He said people could park up to the corner on Park Street but had to stay 20 feet from the corner on Main Street.

"I'll go with 20 feet, if you do it uniformly, at least in the center," Lombardi said.

Selectmen decided to ask the town engineer for a complete plan, redesigning all parking spaces in the center to meet state regulations. Sopper also asked that someone find out if the state actually enforces its regulation in any town and if others towns have been sued because of non-compliance.

Another consideration of the downtown parking plan is scheduled during the meeting at 7:30 p.m. Monday, Sept. 8.

Bill Caci, realtor at The Home Team in Winchester, meets with Phil Rierdan, president of The Condominium Network, which the local firm has joined. Caci, Kathy Murphy and Dorothea Sopper have been trained as condominium specialists, Rierdan said.

Bereavement group planned

For six Tuesday evenings beginning Sept. 16, a bereavement support group will be conducted by Jean M. Trainor, bereavement coordinator at Hospice Care Inc. in Arlington, and Dorothy Riehm, pastoral visitor at St. Eulalia's Church in Winchester. Persons who have experienced the loss of a loved one are invited.

Please call Jean M. Trainor at 648-3172 or Dorothy Riehm at 729-8220 for additional information or to make a reservation to participate.

Mental illness group to meet

The Alliance for the Mentally Ill will meet at 7:30 p.m. Monday, Sept. 8 in St. John's Church, 74 Pleasant St., Arlington Center.

The main speaker will be Dr. Arnold Robbins, a Cambridge psychiatrist. He is medical director of the Massachusetts mental health department's Mystic Valley area, and is chief of psychiatry at Multigroup Medical Associates, Chelmsford. He is also a clinical professor of psychiatry at Boston University Medical School.

The Alliance for the Mentally Ill is an educational and support group for families in Winchester and surrounding towns.

Admission is free.

Sachem booters open in 4-1 win over Arlington

By STEVE GOUDSOUZIAN

After a grueling week of double sessions, the exhausting two-a-day practices that initiate the coming of each and every high school Sachem soccer season, the Winchester Sachems played Arlington High Aug. 29 at Skillings Field at 10 a.m.

Things looked promising for the Sachems this year as they lost only four seniors from last year's squad and are composed mostly of the two Under-16 spring teams that won the state tournament the last two years.

This year's Sachem squad consists of many veteran players and quite a few new faces. The defense had to cope with the loss of Jim Hennely, but with Kent McCord, Steve Goudsouzian and Mark Bortman returning, the defense looked very strong. The defense was solidified even more as Matt McCanamee and sophomore David Ducharme joined the varisty this fall.

The halfback line saw some new faces this year as Coach Gene Bouley felt halfbacks Christophe VerHaegen, Paul Erbafina and David Reineld needed some depth. Junior Steven Reeve moved up from fullback and the team took on Rob Kean, Brian Riley and Karim Ek. The goalkeeper situation was without change as Scott Racek returned for his final year.

The forward line lost much of its punch due to the loss of starters James Campo and Alfonso Serrano. This year's forward line features many of the sophomores and juniors who won the state tournament last spring. Sophomores Kenny Fowler, Mike McGeehan and Vandy French and junior Paul Capadonna joined seniors Anthony Cuccinatti, Jude Cappachetti, Mike Rice and Emile Walsky.

Friday, the Sachems were without four key players. Chris VerHaegen was away and the team lost seniors David Reinfeld, Anthony Cuccinatti, and Jude Cappachetti to various injuries.

The game started slowly for the Sachems as Arlington began to pass effectively around Winchester. Slowly the skill of the Sachem players began to dominate.

As sophomore McGeehan broke down the right wing, he crossed the ball in front of the net where it was knocked in the goal by Rice. This would be just the first of three points McGeehan would accumulate.

The Sachems began to control every aspect of the game. The junior halfback line of Erbafina, Rob Kean and Reeve, along with stopper Kent McCord dribbled and passed right by Arlington as they distributed the ball from sideline to sideline. Erbafina dribbled right through the heart of the Arlington defense and narrowly missed a goal.

As the Sachems were rolling along, Arlington struck back. Arlington had a corner kick, and as the ball curved in front of the goal, it was headed out by Winchester.

As the defense started to clear out of their zone to pull Arlington offsides, an Arlington fullback shot from 30 yards out. The ball sailed over the head of goalie Racek and off the crossbar. The ball rebounded in front of the net and an Arlington forward pounced on the ball and scored from only a few feet away.

The Sachems stormed back in true Winchester fashion. Off a throwin deep in the Arlington end, Reeve threw the ball in to Goudsouzian, who crossed the ball toward the goal. The ball was intercepted by Arlington, which could not clear the ball.

French aggresively pounced on an attempted clear as the ball deflected off his body and bounced toward the goal. The ball bounced off the crossbar as a mad scramble ensued. McGeehan squeezed off a shot as the ball hit it the crossbar again but Kenny Flowler was in position to pound the ball in the goal.

Erbafina dribbled again right through the middle of Arlington's defense for the second time but was tripped just as he was about to shoot. Winchester received a penalty shot and Erbafina put the ball past the diving goalies.

Winchester's final goal was scored when Fowler, deep in the left corner, crossed the ball where McGeehan headed it past the goalie.

The Sachems cruised to a 4-1 victory to start their preseason on the right foot. This week the Sachems face East Boston and Medford to finish their preseason.

Their first regular season game is Tuesday, Sept. 9, at home against Wakefield.

Power skating clinic planned

The Watertown Youth Hockey League is planning a "power skating clinic" at the Watertown Arena. The clinic will be run by Bobby Sheehan, former N.H.L. player.

Sheehan is recognized and respected in this area for his power skating programs and his exceptional ability to motivate and instruct children, both young and old.

The clinic, sponsored by Watertown Youth Hockey, is open to the public, although preference will be given to Watertown skaters who register early. Registrations are being accepted for the clinic, which will run for 15 weeks one hour per session. The program costs $150 per skater. Registration deadline is Sept. 12. Register by contacting Jim Sarno at 924-8614

Sachems, five others in the grid jamboree

Winchester High School's football Sachems will meet Arlington in a 15-minute scrimmage at 8:30 p.m. Friday, Sept. 12, at Waltham.

The Sachems' game is one of five scrimmages scheduled that night with a Middlesex League member in each game. Woburn will face Newton North at 6:30 p.m. while Belmont will host Boston Latin at 7:10 p.m.

Watertown will meet Waltham at 7:50 p.m., just before Winchester's appearance, while Lexington will face Concord-Carlisle in the final scrimmage at 9:10 p.m.

In case of rain, the fourth annual league jamboree will be the following night, Saturday, Sept. 13.

Sachems have big shoes to fill after two 9-1 seasons

By DAVID DEMARCO

After consecutive 9-1 seasons, the 1986 Winchester Sachems have big shoes to fill this football season.

Although the varsity squad may lack experience, the physical talent is there for Winchester to at least duplicate its previous records.

The Sachems opened their preseason last Saturday as Chelmsford came to participate in a controlled scrimmage. Winchester looked sluggish and non-aggressive in its first action of the year.

Chelmsford, however, was fired up and seemed better prepared, mentally, to execute its offense.

However, the Sachems used the scrimmage to run a set series of plays designed to adjust the offense, rather than to beat the defense.

Winchester does not have the same outstanding size as in previous years but the Sachems come into the 1986 season with better overall physical strength and cardiovascular conditioning.

Juniors who seem ready to see some action at the top high school level are Greg Winn and Frank Janci at linebacker, Todd Crandall at noseguard and John Fiose at end.

So far, halfback Scott Garvey is the only sophomore who seems ready to see varsity action. He ran very well during Saturday's scrimmage.

The Sachems have scheduled a game scrimmage at 10 a.m. Saturday, when they will host Billerica High School.

Experience should help Sachemettes soccer players

By DAVE DEMARCO

If depth of talent is any indication, the Winchester High School girls soccer team should have another outstanding season under head coach Chris Scanlon.

The Sachems have 15 returning seniors, many with extensive varsity experience. They will be led by tri-captains Debbie Maida, Leslie Strazzullo and Robyn Rodgers.

Winchester finished the 1985 season with a 19-1-2 record and is looking for even more this season.

"We have a lot of seniors and we're going to try to improve on last year's record," said Scanlon.

The seniors include Charlotte Reese, Katie Binding, Meghan Guarnotta, Kellie Dewar, Jean Cullen, Melissa Skeehan, Alyssa Parker, Jo Anne Shusta, Nancy Sampson, Stacy King, Lauren Suvak and Kim Small.

Juniors who are expected to contribute this fall include Debbie Nowell, Emily Doherty, Beth Small, Jen Ciotti and Sandra Bennett.

Amy Binding, Cara McDonough and Denise Chabot are among the sophomores who look promising.

The Sachemettes will scrimmage at Needham at 3:30 p.m. today in a rematch of last year's tremendous three-hour semifinal game at Natick.

Winchester will open the regular season at 6:30 p.m. next Tuesday at Wakefield.

Olson seeks spot on Union squad

Chris Olson of Winchester, a graduate of Winchester High School, is seeking a spot on the Union College football team this fall.

A freshman at the school in Schenectady, N.Y., Olson is a 6'3", 220-pound offensive tackle.

Youth hockey tryouts will be Sept. 17

Tryouts for Winchester Youth Hockey's teams have been scheduled Wednesday, Sept. 17, at the O'Brien Rink in Woburn.

The schedule of tryouts for both boys and girls shows mites (age 7-9) at 5:10 p.m., squirts (10-11) at 6:20 p.m., peewees (12-13) at 7:30 p.m. and bantams (14-15) at 8:40 p.m.

A second call-back is scheduled Saturday, Sept. 20, with mites at 7:10 a.m., squirts at 8:20 a.m., peewees at 9:30 a.m. and bantams at 10:40 a.m.

Anyone who has not registered for the 1986-87 season may pick up an application at the Winchester recreation department office at McCall Junior High School.

Boys and girls aged 3-17 are eligible. A number of programs are available to teach skating, stick handling and other hockey skills.

Swimmers summer success

Local swimmers on the Community Stars and Stripes swim team of Medford (CSSM) have done well this summer.

In a meet at Framingham, Billy Shuh, 10, swam with the 11- and 12-year-olds but still held his own.

He was eighth in the 50-yard freestyle, seventh in the 100-yard breaststroke, 100-yard freestyle and 50-yard breaststroke, 10th in the 100-yard backstroke, sixth in the individual medley, third in the 50-yard butterfly, ninth in the 50-yard backstroke and third in the 100-yard butterfly.

In a meet at Cape Elizabeth, Maine, Victoria Tobakis, 11, was part of the winning team in the 200-yard freestyle relay and the runner-up in the 200-yard medley relay.

She was also second in the 100-yard butterfly, fourth in the 50-yard butterfly and the 100-yard breaststroke, fifth in the 100-yard individual medley, sixth in the 50-yard backstroke, eighth in the 100-yard backstroke and 200-yard individual medley, ninth in the 50-yard freestyle and 11th in the 100-yard freestyle.

Amie Joseph, 11, a new member of CSSM from Winchester, swam well and took first in the 200-yard individual medley, second in the 100-yard individual medley, third in the 100-yard freestyle, sixth in the 100-yard breaststroke and 14th in the 50-yard backstroke.

All swimmers trained hard at regular practices at 5:30 a.m., their coach said.

COMMENT

Winchester Kernels

Most of the great street paving project is over, thank heavens.

During the project we heard complaints from employees who couldn't find a place to park, even if they tried to get to the town hall lot, and from a few business owners whose streets were temporarily closed.

But the project is mostly over. Apparently the brick crosswalks still need white lines along them to make them "official" crosswalks in the eyes of state government. A new crosswalk will be painted near the post office on Waterfield Road.

When it's all done, it should look nice. And we'll all be thankful.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

A rose is not a rose

TO THE EDITOR:

I am writing in response to an article that appeared in the Aug. 28 issue of The Winchester Star. In this article, our incumbent Rep. Saltmarsh takes credit for "a record high in state aid for Winchester."

It was only months before (Daily Times Chronicle 2/4/86) that this "ranking member" vowed to improve the formula which is currently used to offset revenue-sharing losses due to federal cutbacks. To date, this improvement has not occurred.

Saltmarsh now embraces the same formula he criticized a few months back. The only difference today is that the legislature approved an additional $10 million to the original $49 million offered by our governor to replace lost federal funds. Nothing has been done to alter the favoritism older cities receive over suburbs like Winchester.

More disturbing to me is the knowleged that Saltmarsh voted against the Revenue Enforcement and Protection Program (REAP). This nationally acclaimed program has been credited for increasing our state's revenue in excess of $800 million.

It is interesting to note that if our representative had it it his way, we never would have had the famous surplus to which we owe our record state aid. Surely it is one thing to stand in the background of the governor and have your picture taken, but another to initiate imaginative legislation to insure our community's economic solvency.

Furthermore, Rep. Saltmarsh portrayed himself as a major proponent of education with repsect to the state's scholarship program. Anyone who not only votes against the Educational Reform Act (July 1985), but who also have one the lowest MTA (Massachusetts Teachers Association) ratings, 9 percent, of all our state representatives, can not be overly concerned with students and teachers.

As a result of our state's economic prosperity under Democratic leadership, the Commonwealth is now in a position to help those communities from which the prosperity came. Every community is in line to receive aid, regardless of whom their representative may be.

In fact, I find it ironic that neighboring communities, in spite of our incumbent's years in office, are going to receive more than us!

Sincerely,
Paul C. Casey
Candidate for State Repreentative

Coach thanks three volunteers

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to express my sincere thanks to these three volunteer coaches, Paula Russo, Susan Trischita, and Jeane O'Brien, who so well assisted the high school girls soccer program during an double session week because of the vacancies of two sub-varity positions.

Without their assistance and the outstanding cooperation, responsibility, and hard work of the so-plus athletes who participated, we could not have had a successful week during such an important part of our season.

A special thanks to Paula Russo for working both sessions each day.

With appreciation,
Christopher Scanlen

BEACON HILL

BEACON HILL ROLL CALL
Volume 12-Report No. 35
Massachusetts House and Senate
August 29,1986
Surtax

The House and Senate. Repeal of the 7.5 percent surtax has been one of the most controversial topics of the 1985-1986 legislative session. Much of the debate has centered around how quickly it should be repealed, but some has centered around whether the state can afford the repeal.

Near the end of the 1985 session, the legislature passed and Governor Dukakis signed into law a bill phasing out the surtax over two years. The measure also included a new system of vanishing exemptions replacing the personal exemptions allowed under current law and increased the no-tax status level.

On July 10, the vanishing exemption portion of last year's bill was declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Judicial Court on the basis that it results in a graduated tax which is prohibited by the Constitution. The administration and legislative leaders are apparently working on an alternative to the vanishing exemption plan which would meet constitutional requirements.

In the meantime, several unsuccessful attempts were being made in both branches throughout 1986 to accelerate repeal of the surtax and eliminate it immediately rather than over two years. Finally, in June, Dukakis proposed an immediate repeal and an acceleration of the vanishing exemptions which quickly received House approval. The whole issue, however, became clouded by the July SJC ruling.

Meanwhile, leaders of the earlier movements to immediately repeal the tax said the situation was politics at its worst noting that the Democratic leadership in the House rejected several Republican sponsored moves for instant repeal and than a short time later passed the exact same repeal only when it was proposed by the Governor. Opponents of the earlier repeal responded that sufficient surplus revenue projection figures were not available at the time Republicans proposed the repeal.

The bill repealing the surtax immediately has received near final House approval and is currently in the Senate Ways and Means Committee.

This week, "Beacon Hill Roll Call" reviews local legislators' votes on surtax proposals from 1986 and on the two year repeal approved last year.

On all roll calls, a "Yea" vote is for the bill or amendment. A "Nay" vote is against it.

Separate Bill(H 3103)- In May, the House 74-55, rejected a separate bill providing for immediate repeal of the surtax.

Representative Sherman Saltmarsh voted yes.

Budget Amendment(H 5800)- In May, the House rejected 79-47 and in June rejected 86-62, budget amendments providing for immediate repeal and accelerating the new vanishing exemptions. The language of the amendments is the same as the repeal bill which has already been filed by Governor Dukakis and which later was approved as a separate bill.

Saltmarsh voted yes on both roll calls.

Dukakis Bill(H 5880)- In June, the House137-6, approved the immediate repeal and acceleration of vanishing exemptions proposed by the Governor.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

Retroactive Repeal(H5880)- In June, the House rejected 108-34 and in July rejected 113-35, amendments providing for retroactive repeal to Janurary 1, 1985. Both amendments were proposed during consideration of the Governor's bill.

Saltmarsh voted yes on both roll calls.

Main Budget(S 2000)- In May, the Senate rejected 24-7, a main budget amendment to immediately repeal the surtax.

Senator Richard Kraus voted no.

Supplemental Budget(S 1988)- In June, the Senate rejected 25-9, an amendment striking the entire $359 million supplemental budget and replacing it with Governor Dukakis' version of the immediate surtax repeal and acceleration of the vanishing exemptions.

Kraus did not vote.

Deficiency Budget(S 2058)- In July, the Senate rejected 21-11, a deficiency budget amendment providing for immediate surtax repeal.

Kraus voted no.

1985 Passage(H 6510, S 2500)- In December 1985, the House approved 147-5, Senate approved 32-4, the bill phasing out the surtax over two years, providing for the new system of vanishing exemptions and increasing the no-tax status level. The bill was later signed by Governor Dukakis.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

Kraus voted yes.

National Geographic: a great magazine

By TERRY MAROTTA

One of the great magazines of all time is National Geographic. Back in the old days it was the only place you could find pictures of naked ladies. Today it's the only place you can find pictures of a sea worm's insides.

I greet its arrival in the mail each month with great enthusiasm. I love its maps, its first-person accounts of people climbing to the poles with icicles of spit descending from their chins, its pictures of diminutive mummies sealed in thousand-year-old skins. Each month I marvel anew at what it has come upon in the wide world.

But this month I marvel all the more. Because this month the Official Journal of the National Geographic Society, as it so primly calls itself, contains not just a 37-page article but also a 12-page survey on one of the last great frontiers: the sense of smell.

The piece enlightens while it diverts. It shows pigs; fish; flowers; a linup of bare-chested men holding one hand high in the air while a series of small matronly ladies bury somber expert noses deep in their armpits. And it treats a subject long of great personal interest to me.

I grew up with a mother who was part bloodhound.

It wasn't just that she could tell if we kids had been experimenting with liquor or cigarettes after an evening out; she even knew what we'd been eating. "Hamburgers," she'd mutter as we bent to kiss her good night.

Even today, when I walk into her place, without so much as looking up at me, she'll say, "New wool. No wait, there's more: fabric finish. You've been out clothes-shopping."

I used to mind being nose-frisked this way, but now I'm used to it. Now I even nose-frisk others, having inherited, as it turns out, my mother's eerie abilities.

I can tell, for example, if my spouse is returning fresh from the office or if he's stopped somewhere else en route home. I know if he's been closed up in meetings all afternoon and if the tension level has been high. I can tell if he's had any alcohol, of course, and even what kind.

He says he can manage quite will without these olfactory reports, thank you very much. He doesn't appreciate us Sherlocks of Sniff.

National Geographic does, though. In this September issue, they solicit, welcome, and even celebrate the discerning researches of noses all across America.

The survey presents us with six scratch-and-sniff panels, which we're meant to give a thorough nosing-over and then describe in an array of terms such as floral, musky, foul, woodsy and burnt.

There are no right answers, the directions say; you simply charaterize the different odors and tell whether they seem pleasant, and whether they call to mind food, or cologne, or deep and vivid memories.

The survey also asks a few other things like which hand you throw a ball with, whether or not you're pregnant and what your zip code is.

They don't ask party registration or mother's maiden name, but these questions are as good as the others, it seems to me, and that's what's fun about the Science of Smell. It's in its infancy. It's wide open. It's terra incognita, like the New World before Columbus.

Why do schizophrenics hallucinate odors, for example? Nobody knows.

Why do some people smell like Play-Doh no matter how much they wash? Nobody knows that either.

How do salmon sniff their way home to the spawning grounds through the thick and aromatic soup of so many miles of water? It's a mystery to us still.

In an era where so much has been pinned down, calculated, and laid open, where the moon in its misty beauty is found out for a dry and chalky rock, it's nice to know there are frontiers left to explore.

The opportunity to further the reach of knowledge in its purest form is what National Geographic offers to its readers this month.

I don't know about any of you guys, but my mom and I ready to volunteer our services.

Burke named full professor

The University of Lowell Board of Trustees recently approved the promotion of Janet Burke of Winchester to full professor in the psychology department.

Music School opens registration for fall

Labor Day weekend traditionally signifies the start of fall activities, and the Winchester Community Music School reminds families that registrations are now being accepted.

The school offers private instrumental and voice lessons, eurhythmnics, music theory classes, and small ensembles at McCall Junior High School. Lessons begin after school hours and continue through the early evening, serving students ranging in age from preschool to adult.

Founder Corie Nichols of Winchester said the school serves all ability levels and has grown in response to community need. Beginners of any age are encouraged, as well as those who are intermediate or advanced. Private lessons make it possible to progress at an individual pace.

Instruments taught include: banjo, baritone, bass, cello, clarinet, guitar, flute, french horn, saxophone, oboe, organ, percussion, recorder, trombone, trumpet, tuba, viola and violin.

Voice lessons are also given and a jazz ensemble workshop offers high school students an opportunity to learn about improvisation.

Specifically geared to young children are the eurhythmics classes for three and four-year-olds with a "Music and Play" group offered this year for two-year-olds and their parents.

Small classes in music theory are particularly valuable for instrumental playeres, singers, and listeners, as they learn about sight singing, ear training and conducting.

For information contact Corie Nichols, 10 Oxford St., Sandy Thompson, 48 Samoset Rd. or Nancy Goodwin, Wolcott Terrace.

Winchester Community Music School is registering students. Oboe student Tom Moore practices under the direction of his teacher, Laurie Wadsworth.

ABOUT TOWN

Two complete maritime course

John P. Berry of 17 Baldwin St. and Thomas C. Pigott of 23 Bellevue Ave., cadet candidates at the Massachusetts Maritime Academy, have successfully completed a two-week orientation program on the Taylor's Point Campus.

The intensive program culminated in a graduation ceremony Aug. 30. The orientation is the initial step that must be completed before a candidate can be recognized as a fourth class cadet in the regiment.

The two-week indoctrination included introduction to marine engineering, marine transportation, military customs and courtesies, and the standard etiquettes required of a merchant marine officer.

Camelio adds to art awards

Winchester Art Association member Carol L. Camelio has added to her collection of awards this summer. In June, at the South Shore Art Center's "Celebration of the Arts" in cohasset, she received the Quincy Cooperative Bank award for excellence for her painting 'Philodendron.'

Last month, another of her paintings, "By the Window," received the "best in show" award at the Essex Art Festival in Essex.

Both paintings are 24"x30" acrylic on canvas studies reflecting the artist's elaborately detailed style.

Camelio will display some of her work Sept. 6 and 7 at the Medford Art Council's "Festival by the Mystic."

"Whatever Happened to the Healing Arts: Industrialization of Psychiatry in the U.S." was the topic of his paper for the World Psychiatric Symposium in Copenhagen, Denmark, on Aug. 21.

The paper discussed the positive and negative effects of recent changes in the medical and psychiatric field and their influence on the care of patients.

Khajavi also presented a paper July 22 at the International Congress of the Association for Child & Adolescent Psychiatry & Allied Professions at the University of the Sorbonne in Paris.

The title of his paper there was "Health Revolution in the U.S. and its Impact on the Mental Health of Children and Adolescents."

Earlier in the summer, Khajavi presented another paper at the International Symposium on Latest Findings on the Etiology and Therapy of Depression at the University of Basel, Switzerland.

His paper was called "When Addiction Imitates Depression and Complicates Treatment."

Leda Sullivan and Carlyjane Watson at the Winchester Art Association gallery with their exhibit "Light and Liberty." An opening reception is scheduled from 6 to 8 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 7. (Carlyjane Watson photo)

'Light and Liberty' exhibit is at Art Association gallery

Exhibited this month at the Winchester Art Association is the work of Leda Sullivan and Carlyjane Watson.

Sullivan's works are studies of light and its constant challenge in the medium of painting.

Watson's photographs are "pursuit of liberty" images taken at the Statue of Liberty centennial celebration.

Sullivan began painting and studying ceramics simultaneously in 1972 after 20 years of a career as a wife and mother. She was looking for a challenge. Oils met this need and also renewed a childhood interest in drawing.

She is primarily self-taught, taking occasional workshops with the artist Helen Van Wyk and classes with painter Lorainne DeGroot Stevens. The results are strong still-lifes that gleam with reflections and landscapes that reverberate light and shadows.

Her subjects include the translucence of glass, the gentle folds of drapes and the Amalfi Coast in Italy.

Sullivan has taken this second career as a artist seriously and actively exhibits with the Reading and Chelmsford Art Associations as well as with Winchester. She has received awards at for both her painting and ceramics at numerous League shows. As a result she now juggles very successfully her new careers as painter and ceramics instructor with those of wife and mother.

Watson is exhibiting a body of work that combines her passion for photography and her passion for the Statue of Liberty. She spent three days at the centennial celebration and these photos are her account of that experience.

The photographs include Lee Iacocca, the Tall Ships and many special images of people and places throughout New York.

Watson studied under Frank Diperna at the Corcoran School of Art, Washington, D.C., and received her degree in fine art photography from NVCC, magna cum laude. She works as the yearbook and photography adviser at Winchester High School.

In addition she runs a small photo studio in which she specializes in enviromental portraiture and special occasions photograph with "a touch of love." She was recently the recipient of a Massachusetts Arts Council grant.

The opening reception is scheduled from 6 to 8 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 7. Members of the Winchester Art Association and the general public are invited. The show will run until Sept. 18. Gallery hours are noon to 4 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday.

Area K of C leader says scholarships are offered

"The Knights of Columbus accepted its first student loan application in 1971 and to this date has granted over $64 million to its membership," announced Grand Knight James Rafferty of Winchester Council.

He continued, "The Order began to provide money for higher education when in the early 1970s banks became reluctant to grant student loans. Our members in Massachusetts are among the highest in loans granted in the Order.

"The loan program is funded by the Knights of Columbus and the federal government pays the interest on the student's behalf throughout the time he or she is enrolled in school and during the grace period prior to repayment. Eligibility for these loans is subject to the rules and regulations of the U.S. Department of Education."

Grand Knight Rafferty said, "If the adjusted gross income (AGI) of the student's family is $30,000 or less, the eligible student qualifies for the Knights of Columbus federally subsidized loan. If the AGI of the student's family is greater than $30,000, the student qualifies for a loan only if the school determines, after taking into account the expected contributions of the student's family and other financial assistance, that the student needs a loan to meet his or her educational costs. The school must be one that is recognized by the U.S. Government under the Guarantee Student Loan Program.

"The student may borrow from the Knights of Columbus $2,500 per year with a maximum cumulative amount by an undergraduate up to $10,000. However, it is emphasized that any GSL borrowed from other lenders in addition to the Knights of Columbus may not exceed the federal maximums of $2,500 per year with a maximum cumulative amount of $12,500." He added, "All loans must be repaid within 10 years based on principal and whatever interest accrues on the outstanding balance."

Grand Knight Rafferty concluded, "For further information concerning the loan program, write directly to: Knights of Columbus Student Loan Committee, P.O. Drawer 1670, New Haven, Conn. 06507. Eligibility for the loans is restricted to members of the Order in good standing, their wives, sons and daughters, and to the widows and sons and daughters of members affiliated at the time of his death."

Italian cuisine at Fiesta Fair

One of the main features of the Winchester Senior Association's tenth annual Fall Fiesta Fair Wednesday, Oct. 1 is the Italian dinner at the Knights of Columbus Hall catered by Paul Brennan.

Helen and Ray Murphy are co-chairing the busy event for the ninth consecutive year. Their active committee consists of Helen Hodgdon, food coordinator at the center; Tom Rogers, assistant to Helen Hodgdon; Ann Ciampa, fair chairman; and Anne Feuss, chairman of the ways and means committee. Harry Chefalo accepted the responsibilities as ticket chairman.

The dinner is open to the public with continuous serving from 5 to 7 p.m. The committee hopes at least 600 diners will come to enjoy the menu of fruit cup, lasagna and meat balls, salad, rolls, wine, dessert and coffee or tea.

The Knights of Columbus organization has been extremely generous to seniors in providing their facilities for this gala evening on the first day of the fair. Appreciation is extended to them in full measure for their courtesy through the years.

Early publicity is given to the event in order to make adequate plans for food service. Obtain your ticket from Harry Chefalo and/or a member of his committee or at the Jenks Senior Center reception desk.

Raffle tickets for the fiesta fair will be on sale at the Jenks Center reception desk. Regina Karnilla, center, chairperson of raffle items, Marion Arrell, right, Lillian Monsen and Isabel Fitzgerald, left, will all participate in the raffle this year.

Friday, Sept. 12, the seniors will bowl at the Woburn Bowlerdome. New members are welcome.

Cori Taggart

Alita Neff, Jenks Center librarian, will be in charge of the book sale at the Fall Fiesta Fair Oct. 1 and 2.

Books for sale

As at last year's fair, the center librarian, Alita Neff, is collecting a wide variety of paperbacks and hard-covered books to sell at the Fall Fiesta Fair.

Raffle tickets for fiesta fair are available

Ticket-selling of raffle items is a popular table at the fair. This year the raffles consist of a beautiful hand-stencilled quilt, a $100 bill and a lovely crocheted afghan.

In addition, tickets will be sold for a large Bengali rug, a donation from Komo Boodakian Co. Inc. The latter will be saved for the mini fair Saturday, Dec. 6.

Tickets for all items can be obtained at the Jenks Senior Center reception desk.

Snack bar will open at fiesta fair

A large committee will assist Randy Kazazian, proprietor of the snack bar.

The snack bar will be open throughout the fair for foot-weary shoppers, to be refreshed with sandwiches, Danish bread, finger desserts, cold drinks, and coffee or tea.

Education committee plans events

The Jenks Senior Center education committee met Aug. 12 with Margaret Leader as chairperson. A visit to the Lowell National Restoration is the first activity scheduled for Sept. 8.

Terry Marotta, a Winchesterite and now fortieth on the list of candidates for a journalist in space, will be the speaker at a special meeting. With several hundred candidates, Marotta is one of the finalists for this great adventure into space.

Early in the new year, a hobby exhibit is scheduled. Everyone who has a special hobby or has accumulated collectibles, is invited to exhibit materials.

The education committee invites you to add your hobby to the exhibit early in the new year. It might well be among the first activities in the new meeting room in the building addition.

Volunteer at Jenks Center

A recent American Association of Retired Persons (AARP) bulletin said, "Age is synonymous with opportunity. Leisure time must be seized with enthusiasm and filled with service to others."

Today, many older men and women at the Jenks Senior Center are investing their time and their talents in programs that better the lives of people in the community. Retired accountants council older taxpayers in filling out their IRS forms. Those who have been in the field of health run the keep well clinic and are members of the health committee. Many serve in other important capacities.

There is little that we can't do as a united group. There is a wealth of accumulated talents and experiences very much needed today.

Volunteering is not unlike beginning a second career with the companionship of other volunteers. It is one of the best ways of keeping in touch with younger people through various types of associations.

The Jenks Senior Center has many opportunities for volunteers who are motivated, reliable, and committed to service, and whose efforts in behalf of others make a difference in multiple ways.

Call the center at 721-7136, for more information.

Seniors programs scheduled

Crafts and stitchery resumes Sept. 5, Friday afternoons.

Irma Ganchi will begin her expert service of assisting with clothes repairs Mondays from 1 to 4 p.m. She offers assistance with alterations as well. The first session will be Sept. 8.

Tuesday at 10 a.m. Sept. 9, weekly, Mathee Hodge offers instruction in rug hooking and braiding, a new program at the center. Rug materials and frames will be supplied. There is no charge for the class and it has to be limited to a dozen people.

At 10 a.m. Thursday, Sept. 11 the book club will meet. New members are welcome. Friday, Sept. 12 there will be a social security workshop on Medicare and Social Security benefits with Francine Kollias in charge of the workshop. New seniors are invited to attend.

Friday, Sept. 12, bowling begins at the Woburn Bowlerdrome. All seniors are welcome to join this enthusiastic group of bowlers. Shoes are provided for seniors at the alleys.

The monthly dance at Jenks Senior Center will be from 8 to midnight, Sept. 13. Dick Brogna and his band make the evening a lively one. All are invited to enjoy dancing to the rhythms of favorite songs.

Foliage trip set for Oct. 8

A three day foliage trip to Western Mass. and Southern Vermont, over the Mohawk Trail is being booked by the seniors for Oct. 8 to 10.

The group will stay at the Williams College Inn. The Clark Museum on the college campus houses one of the largest collections of Renoir paintings.

Broachures are at the Jenks Center. Helen and Ray Murphy are in charge.

Jewish seniors meet in Lexington

A Jewish senior citizens group based on Lexington with members in the surrounding towns meets the first and third Tuesday of each month.

The group's next gathering is scheduled from 1 to 3 p.m. Sept. 16 at Temple Emunah.

More information is available from Rachel Kessler at 862-8329.

Yoga classes at Jenks Center

The yoga and creativity group at the Jenks Senior Center will conduct an open meeting at 10:30 a.m. Monday, Sept. 8.

Cori Taggart will demonstrate Reiki healing. At 9:30 a.m., there will be exercises for beginners and intermediates.

Medicine is a critical issue

The use of medication is a critical health issue of older persons. While older Americans account for only 11 percent of the population, they use almost 25 percent of prescription drugs and a large number of over-the-counter medicines.

Older people are particularly susceptible to adverse effects of medication use. Consumers should be encouraged to ask their doctors and pharmacists about possible side effects of medication and what to do if adverse reactions occur. They should also be encouraged to throw out old medication.

Seniors need to prevent injuries

While unintentional injuries account for only 2 percent of older persons' deaths, they have twice the death rate from injury and three times as many days of restricted activity and bed confinement as any other age group.

The chief causes of injury are falls, motor-vehicle related accidents and burns. Many of these injuries and deaths are preventable if environments and behaviors are modified.

What To Visit

Houses speak of sea history

Named for the rage of wild berries which greeted Captain Walter Neal and a small band of English exporers in 1640 — the museum presents a creative and ongoing record.

Strawbery Banke is a delicious hodge-podge of history.

Magnificently restored homes, such as the Sherburne House built in 1695, snuggle up against dusty old houses, rudely modernized with asphalt siding in the 1950's.

No specific historic era is captured here. Instead slices of time — Colonial, Federal and Victorian — collide with each other.

Yet, boasting its 17th-century name, Strawbery Banke Museum works.

Named for the rage of wild berries which greeted Captain Walter Neal and a small band of English explorers in 1640 — the museum presents a creative and ongoing record, touching four centuries of life in one of the country's oldest neighborhoods.

"We're kind of pleased we didn't have the money to rebuild Strawbery Banke the way Williamsburg was done," says Paul Bowman, a tour guide at the 10-acre site.

"It's not a showcase of history," he says. "Our interest is to show what and how history happened."

The setting is Portsmouth, New Hampshire yet the tale told here is one shared by other American cities.

It began as a fishing and trading outlet in the mid-1600s for London's Lanconia Company, grew to a colonial village, and became a major seaport and commercial center for the Northeast through the 18th-century.

During the War of 1812, Strawbery Banke, then a noted shipbuilding mecca, launched a new line of ships into New England waters — sleek, low-slung privateers which stalked enemy vessels loaded with supplies.

As the 1800s continued, the city's energies centered on industry. Beer bubbled as a major product as Frank Jones, then one of the largest malt makers, brewed 250,000 barrels of ale a year.

The face of Portsmouth changed dramatically as the century turned.

The once vibrant seaport became known to local residents as Puddle Dock and had become a shabby urban corner.

Bars and brothels vied for courtship by the few visiting fishermen and sailors still able to find work. The waterway, flanked with decaying buildings and crumbling wharves, was filled in and became a city dump.

Surrounding homes became run-down rooming houses to immigrants arriving here through the 1950s when the neighborhood was prime target for urban renewal.

The story might have ended there.

But in 1957, Portsmouth librarian Dorothy Vaughan lit local concern for this threatened parcel of history.

"I decided to lay it right on the line, and tell them what Portsmouth was throwing away each time a house was torn down or a piece of furniture was thrown away," she said in an address before the Rotary Club.

Her commitment fanned the preservation fever which created the Strawbery Banke Museum, opened to the public in 1965.

Today, all but five of the the neighborhood's 37 structures — ranging in age from 1695 to 1945 — stand on their original foundations.

The Sherburne House is the only documented 17th-century building remaining at Strawbery Banke.

It is a transplant of style from English cities at the time and features a hauntung post-medieval countenance with its steeply pitched roof, large pilastered center chimney, small diamond-paned windows of leaded galss and its two gables perched on the front roof.

Eighteenth-century homes sprout at Strawbery Banke.

The Chase House, built about 1726 by John Underwood, a mariner from Kittery, is one of the grandest Georgian structures here.

An elegant three-story structure, the home boasts a gambrel roof, quoined corners and magnificent doorways.

Interior details speak of a remarkable architectural sophistication, including in the parlor full-length sliding shutters, wainscotting, and a denticulated mantelpiece and cornice.

On a less grand scale is the Wheelwright House, another example of 18th-century Georgian building.

This home, built during the American Revolution, represents more a basic middle-class dwelling.

It is not a large house yet its features reflect, on a simpler scale, the same style and taste found in the grander homes of town.

The Goodwin House is a showplace of 19th-century grace. Begun at the start of the War of 1812, it was built by a bricklayer, James Hazeltine, in another part of Portsmouth.

In 1832, the home was purchased by Ichabod Goodwin, New Hampshire's Civil War Governor.

The house, moved to Strawbery Banke in 1970, retains numerous original Federal period features, including its graceful spiral staircase, and a beautiful fanlight over the front door.

The Goodwin Mansion is furnished with items of various ages, recreating as closely as possible its appearance when Goodwin and his wife, Sarah Parker Rice Goodwin, lived there.

While many of these homes have been skillfully and creatively restored, others have not.

Each house here had a life, with changes made architecturally to meet changing needs and styles of each successive generation.

The Joshua Jackson House, home to the local blacksmith from 1727 to 1758, has not been restored. The additions made by later occupants — plasterboard, wall paper, electric wiring — have been left alongside such 18th-century features as crown cornice moldings and doorway pilasters and capitals.

Also unrestored is the home of Dr. John Jackson. It still boasts its 20th-century remodeling — asbestos shingles.

Tour guide Bowman views these examples from this mid-century as important to Strawbery Banke's

Tavern bred Revolution fervor

The most ambitious building project visitors will find underway at Strawbery Banke is the long awaited restoration of the William Pitt Tavern.

First known as the Earl of Halifax Tavern, this three-story structure is probably the most historically important building at Strawbery Banke and was one of the tallest in Portsmouth when it was completed in 1766.

Located at the origination point of the first stage coach service from Portsmouth to Boston, the site was a major meeting point.

As tensions grew between Great Britain andd her American colony, the tavern became "a hot bed of revolutionary fervor," said Paul Bowman, a tour guide at Strawbery Banke.

The building was renamed around the start of the American Revolution in 1776 after William Pitt, the noted Parliamentary defender of the colonies, and in 1789 the Grand Lodge of New Hampshire Masons was formed here.

George Washington, John Hancock, William Whipple, and the Marquis de Lafayette were among the great men of the day known to have stayed at the tavern, which at that time was one of the most commodious in Portsmouth.

The first president, said Bowman, "supposedly visited ten houses in Portsmouth.

"He must have taken a lot of cat naps. He was only here for two days."

Throughout the season guided tours focusing on the work in progress offer museum visitors the opportunity to not only learn the fascinating history of Pitt Tavern but to witness the careful restoration process first-hand.

With restoration expected to be completed by spring, 1987, the building will ultimately house exhibits on 18th-century tavern life.

What's new at

The 10-acre Strawbery Banke waterfront neighborhood is open daily in 1986 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. through October and offers a variety of personalized, guided tours of the museum, its buildings, exhibits and gardens.

The 45-minute tours are offered twice an hour between 10 a.m. and 5p.m. and focus on such topics as architecture, the landscape history of the neighborhood, decorative arts, archeology, and neighborhood history.

According to Associate Director Vincent Lombardi, the tour system offers visitors an alternative to exploring the museum on their own.

"This will offer visitors more options during their visit.

"A few will probably want to discover the place on their own, but most I think will want to take advantage of the guided tours being offered by our staff, who can answer questions and point out many fascinating aspects of the place that the average visitor might not notice," he said.

A new boat shop, featuring demonstrations of wooden-boat-building techniques and the nation's only operating cooper clench nail machine is underway at Strawbery Banke.

Other projects include a renovated carpentry shop, where for the first time visitors can watch Strawbery Banke's restoration carpenters at work; and the completed final phase of the large, Victorian flower garden behind the Goodwin Mansion.

The museum hosts a wide variety of educational family events and activities in 1986, including the following:

future.

Although they may be unattractive to today's visitors, "think about how important they'll be in 200 years when none of this is left," he says.

The structures here present a valuable framework yet it is the social history — the lifestyles, the hardships and successes, the people themselves — that tells the more impressive tale.

Just as no single capsule of history is showcased here, no isolated category of inhabitant commands center stage.

Throughout its years, this neighborhood was home to the elegant and famous, but more often to the ordinary citizen.

And Strawbery Banke dishes up facts and impressions about these people, from the earliest traders to the immigrant families crammed into divided quarters that once housed single families.

Knowledge of the more affluent and noteworthy residents is gained from letters, speeches, and diaries.

Dedicated and creative research recaptured the other slices of life presented here.

Examination of property deeds and tax records identify the chain of owners for many of these homes. Wills, estate inventories, church records, and numerous other documents add further details.

More recent residents provide a vital link to the past. An exhibit on Puddle Dockers in the Joshua Jackson House was based in large part on the oral history delivered by former neighbors.

Strawbery Banke's official guidebook presents the recollections of Warren Trueman, a 20th-century resident of the Jackson House, along with his four sisters

Get hooked on North Shore Fish

REVIEW

The uncanny way that playwright Israel Horovitz has of eliminating the fourth wall is truly amazing. Audience members are never simply observers but part of the action, and this was never more true in his newest work, North Shore Fish, in its world premiere at the Gloucester, just before the turn to Rocky Neck art colony.

This performance space, a large brick warehouse overlooking the harbor, provides a wonderfully realistic setting and the local flavor for the bittersweet comedy, which plays through Sept. 28.

Featuring sterling performances by Geraldine Librandi, Theodore Reinstein and Mark H. Rogers, and directed with total understanding and compassion by Grey Cattell Johnson, the action takes place in a fictional fish processing plant in Gloucester called North Shore Fish in the ill-fated plant. One generation of women after another work in this predominantly Catholic enclave ("Our people make the difference!"), their dreams of getting out of this "break-your-heart-town" and of a better life thwarted even before they are born.

"Floey" Rizzo (Geraldine Librandi) is tough, aggressive, street-smart, wise-cracking and, most of all, a survivor. Her mother's loyalty to the plant, where she toiled for 30 years, was recently rewarded with dismissal.

Floey has kicked around plenty and doesn't mind flashing a bit of skin. Indeed, she opts to change her clothes openly, arousing Martino (Mark Rogers), the clean-up and maintenance man.

Once Floey harbored dreams of college, but her life and future were pretty much preordained. And when Floey caustically refers to "the Cape Ann Catholic system," she means "getting pregnant!"

At the top of her craft, Librandi must be rated as one of the most accomplished actresses currently performing on the New England Stage.

Good-looking Sal Morella (Ted Reinstein) is the plant foreman. Although inextricably married to Carmella, he is always on the prowl for new conquests.

Relations between Sal and Floey are highly volatile and an unsettling undercurrent prevails evolving around the affair Sal was having with Dorothy, a federal inspector, before she committed suicide in the freezer room of the plant. It is rumored that she was pregnant.

The other workers to know are pleasingly plump Josie Evangelista (Michelle Faith), whose husband "Cookie" has left her and has been seen around town playing the field.

Also, there is 65-year-old Arlyne Flynn (Mary Klug) with her jutting chin (picture-perfect characterization) who philosophizes, "Everyone's nice after 65...they're kinda worn down." Arlyne broke up with her husband years ago when he wanted to move inland and she refused to leave the water and her family.

With dialogue studded with rough language, they banter about "Coke" who wrote a book (Iacocca); that, despite complaints, "working here puts food on the table;" whether the fish plant is "going down the tubes;" about which denomination is the worst...the Italians, the Portuguese, Irish or English...or the Jews.

Into their midst comes the new federal inspector, Catherine Shimma (Tara Dolan), who drives a car with the vanity plate "GOLF" and who proves to be the catalyst. Haughty and sophisticated, even Sal knows he cannot make inroads with her. She finds the packaging unsatisfactory, complains about the "shelf life," can't approve of rewraps, and threatens to close the plant down.

And that's only the beginning of the plot! To discover what happens to whom and why, fill in on the assembly line. It's a tremendously rewarding trip.

Newley glows in 'Stop the World'

REVIEW

The recent trend of bringing musicals into the Hub for eight performances in five days, sort of a "hit and run" tactic, then bouncing out of town even before readers can be informed as to how good a show is, is most regrettable.

This has occurred twice at the Wang Center for the Performing Arts in recent weeks, first with Evita and, most recently, with multi-faceted show business personality Anthony Newley recreating his original Broadway role in Stop the World, I Want to Get Off.

For this revival, the first since its spectacular success on Broadway 26 years ago, the book, a major stumbling block, has been considerably streamlined and updated, making for a tighter show with improved momentum.

Gone are those excruciating periods of seat-squirming dialogue between musical numbers. The score continues to be highly satisfying under musical director Tom Fay. Only the screechy chorus remains obtrusive and still mars this vehicle.

With book, music and lyrics by Newley and Leslie Bricusse, and redirected by Newley, 'Stop the World' has been hyped as an "unconventional musical fantasy." Unconventional it is, but fantasy it is not. Certainly males would identify with the storyline more readily than females and it is probably more appealing to the 50-plus age group — those who have lived life.

Newley remains a startling personality who acts well and sings with individuality and verve, even though he no longer attempts those high notes. He is an exceptionally attractive and dynamic performer, projects a brilliance of spirit, and a strikingly magnetic charisma.

All the women in his life are played by Suzie Plaksin, a stunning woman with Cyd Charisse gams, who is distinctive, appealing, and wonderful!

The other dozen women — this is a one-man show — serve as a Greek chorus, handsomely costumed by Carol Oditz, commenting on the action.

'Stop the World' represents the life cycle with its seven stages of man. It is the story of Everyman, who runs, runs, runs until he runs out of gas and meets his Maker. It is an uncomplicated tale, yet fresh in conception and produced with theatrical simplicity.

Newley, as Littlechap, portrays a man whose increasing frustration with the way his life is going, and the rapidity, pleads "stop the world!" and, as his career rockets, his personal life is ripped apart by his own doing.

Against a huge drop curtain of Pierrot's Traveling Mime Company and David Chapman's unique set, resembling a disparate collage of antiques sprayed completely white, Littlechap is London-born and bred. He gets his first job as a tea-boy, and soon meets Evie, his boss's daughter.

In an act of frivolity, he puts her in "the family way;" his days of sowing oats are over and his is obliged to marry her. He rues that he is not cut out to be a husband or a father and anguishes over his imprisonment and domestication.

Evie's second pregnancy results in Littlechap's promotion to manager in his father-in-law's factory in Sludgepool. Littlechap plunges forward to make a success of his life in the inspirational song, Gonna Build a Mountain.

On a business trip to Russia, he meets Anya, a government official, to whom he makes love and reveals a wish for a son. Evie becomes pregnant once more but the child, a boy, dies at childbirth.

Ilse, a domestic from Germany working in his home, rejects his amorous advances and creates trouble for the unhappily married Littlechap. Career-wise, he becomes managing director of his father-in-law's firm and thoughts of a life in politics give him renewed vigor in the song, Once In A Lifetime.

Having returned from a trip to the United States, where he meets and is rebuffed by Lorene, a female business colleague, he decides to run for Parliament as a candidate of the Opportunist Party and wins. And, after 35 years, he retires from business, observing, "Your work your whole life to retire; then when you do retire, the one thing you miss most is your work!"

Laden with honor and knighted by the Crown, age brings an end to Littlechap's service and his last days with patient and understanding Evie. He has learned to appreciate her after all these years, eloquently expressed in the beautiful song, Someone Nice Like You.

Alone with memories and reflections of the past the mumbo jumbo rhubarb and hokus pokus of life in the memorable number What Kind of Fool Am I?, Littlechap dies, thus bringing the circle of life one full turn.

The king stag bewitches

REVIEW

Somewhere over the rainbow lies the magical Oriental kingdom of Serendippo and the enchanted forest of Miracoli. Reigning majestically over this land of fantasy, mirth and intrigue is the ultimate master magician, noted Romanian director Andrei Serban.

With rare sleight of hand and creative genius, Serban guided the American Repertory Company to a most auspicious season's curtain-raiser in 1984 with Carlo Gozzi's commedia dell'arte fable, The King Stag.

Along with the company's magnificient ensemble, and the infinite talents of Julie Taymor, who created costumes, puppets, masks, and choreographed the movements of puppets, shadow puppets, marionettes and kites, Serban molded a bewitching entertainment of rare and exquisite beauty.

By Dann Kosow

Clockwise from left: Carlo Gozzi's fairytale fantasy The King Stag is back for an encore through Sept. 11 at the American Repertory Theatre, 64 Brattle St., Cambridge; playboy Sal Morella (Ted Reinstein) strikes out with employees in the bittersweet comedy North Shore Fish at the Gloucester Stage Company; Spanish balladeer Julio Iglesias plays the Great Woods Performing Arts Center stage Sept. 4 and 5.

Happily, the 18th-century charade by the ART has returned to the Leob Drama Center in Cambridge for a limited two-week engagement through Sept. 11. Don't miss it!

The tragicomic fairy tale relates the plight of good Deramo, the king, in his quest to find true love. With the magical counsel of a Buddha-like mask whose facial expressions signify "yea" or "nay," Deramo has already rejected 2748 bridal prospects.

The ambitious Tartaglia, his evil prime minister and confidant, yearns for his whiny daughter Clarice to be the chosen one, but Clarice is in love with the courtier Leandro, son of Pantalone, second prime minister to the king.

The peasant wench Smeraldina would forsake the love of birdcatcher Truffaldino to seduce the king into selecting her and, at the same time, elevate the station of her brother, Brighella, the king's valet. But it is fragile Angela, daughter of Pantalone, who truly loves the king and who he finally accepts as his betrothed.

In rage, Tartaglia plots the king's death. He charms him into revealing his secret of transferring his soul into the body of an animal and, on a hunting trip, goads him into exhibiting his magical prowess. Once the king's soul is inside the body of a noble stag, the traitorous Tartaglia kills the stag and transfers his own soul into the body of the king.

While naive and childlike on the surface, The King Stag is spiced with satirical overtones and sophisticated ideas — a sounding board for citizen's rights, excessive power in the wrong hands, and the desire to be loved for one's self.

It is an exploration of wisdom and dreams, the real and unreal, the ancient and the modern, a fusion of the Oriental, Greek and Roman theatre, even morality plays.

The ensemble, is captivating and, also worthy of kudos is the original music composed by Elliot Goldenthal, the English version of the test by Albert Bermel, and the atmospheric lighting by Jennifer Tipton.

Agatha Christie rides again

Mystery, murder and mayhem once again stalks the stage when Nickerson Theatre in Norwell opens its fall season with one of Agatha Christie's best-known whodunits, "Spider's Web," Friday, Sept. 5, running through Oct. 11.

The acknowledged first lady of crime, Agatha Christie spins the tale of Clarissa, the bored wife of a diplomat who entertains herself and her guests with preposterous stories of intrique and adventure.

Her daydreaming turns to reality, when she is suddenly forced to reckon with a corpse found in her drawing room. With her husband's reputation in mind she persuades her guests to help dispose of the body.

Comedy and suspense interweave as she simultaneously attempts to conceal the murder from a police inspector and discover the murderer's identity.

Performance times are: 8 p.m. Tuesday through Thursday; 8:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday; 7 p.m. Sunday; and 2 p.m. Saturday and Sunday.

Tickets are $16 for Friday and Saturday evenings, $13 for all other performances.

For tickets and a detailed brochure on the 1986-87 season, call or write the Nickerson Theatre, 30 Accord Park Drive, P.O. Box 272, Accord Park (Norwell), Mass. 02018; (617) 871-2400.

The theatre is located off Route 3, South, Exit 14 in Norwell, and convenient parking is available.

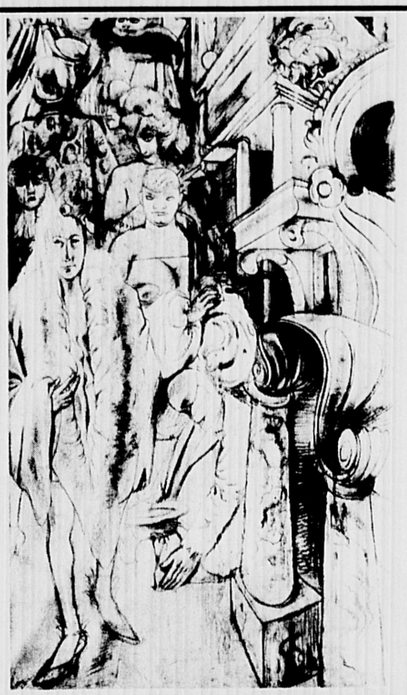
What About Art?

By Meredith Fife Day

German images of grim times



Otto Dix's beautifully articulated line describes the chaotic world of post-war Germany in a preparatory drawing for the right side of the triptych, Metropolis. The 1927-1928 work in charcoal, pencil, and red and white chalk is on loan from Galerie der Stadt, Stuttgart, to Busch-Reisinger. (Photo courtesy of Busch-Reisinger Museum.)

The first major exhibition of its kind in the country, German Realist Drawings of the 1920s is on view at Harvard University's Busch-Reisinger Museum.

The exhibition of over 100 drawings by 30 German artists was put together from public and private collections in Europe and America. It was organized by Peter Nisbet, assistant curator of Busch-Reisinger, with guest curator Carol Selle.

The exhibit first opened in May at New York's Solomon R. Guggenheim Museum and will travel to the Staatsgalerie, Stuttgart, Germany after its Sept. 28 closing in Cambridge.

"Neue Sachlichkeit" (the "New Realism" or "New Sobriety") was the name given to the 1920s movement formed by these exhibiting artists.

Having been deeply affected by both their experiences of World War I and the conditions they confronted upon returning home, their work directly and powerfully reflects a bleak and oppressive political, social and cultural milieu.

Most of the artists were trained in a classical tradition.

"These drawings represent the last harvest of that traditional academic training in which drawing, especially of the human form, was considered the basis of an artist's education," explains Selle.

However conservative their training, these artists' acquired skills — which were considerable — were used for personal expression filled with drama, emotion and unflinching determination to record the brittle and turbulent world of the Weimar Republic.

The exhibit is organized to focus on individual figures and on exemplary cities that reflect Germany's enduring regionalism.

Never having had a dominant capital comparable to Paris or London, Germany's regional emphases and representative cities are explained at the exhibition's entrance:

•The artists of Cologne were politically radical, deploying a "constructivist" schematic realism for their message, influenced by strong Catholic traditions.

•Karlsruhe, near the French border, nurtered an identifiable style of realist drawing resulting from rigorous training at the local Academy.

•The works from Munich were characterized by an idealizing manner due to that city's long-standing inclination to classicism.

•Berlin represented the modern metropolis, defining the characteristic realist subjects, the portrait, politics and urban life in all its extremes.

A final category, Dresden And Others, supplements the four exemplary cities and completes the regional groupings of work.

Of the individual artists represented, Max Beckmann, George Grosz and Otto Dix are most familiar to audiences in this country.

The works of Rudolf Schlichter and Karl Hubbuch provide a new and extraordinary experience for many Americans. Their penetrating portraits and unclouded, unerring look at the human condition in those dismal times have a graphic force and directness that compels, often saddens and, at times terrifies.

The physical environment is given as much attention by the exhibited artists as the human face and form.

Inspired by their surroundings, by the Renaissance graphic art of masters and by 19th century German artists, the realists also used contemporary movements — Cubism, Futurism, Dadaism and Surrealism — and political events in recording their world.

As if the visible environment and the country's collective psyche were one, the artists depicted city and industrial life with tense, haunting images of factories, political demonstrations, and bulky, angular buildings and signs.

As Selle describes them, the artists "drew incessantly and recorded their impressions standing up, sitting down, leaning out of windows, sitting in cafes, in the streets, and in their studios."

Their endeavors leave an indelible mark of the vision of a world filled with anxiety, fear and despair. As difficult as they may be, at times, to look at, these drawings have a graphic presence, personal expression and historical significance that is commanding.

The Busch-Reisinger Museum is located at 29 Kirkland St., Cambridge, two blocks north of the Fogg Art Museum. Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday and 1 to 5 p.m. Sunday. Tours are offered the first Saturday of each month.

Physicians
WEIGHT LOSS
Centers
FUTRA-LOSS DIET SYSTEMS

Kathryn Maggio who has lost 83 pounds in 20 weeks has joined our staff here at Physicians Weight Loss Center.

Physicians Weight Loss Center guarantees an average weight loss of three to seven pounds per week if the patient follows the prescribed diet plan. Essentially, this means that in a 15 week period a person could lose between 42 and 98 pounds.

Anyone who has ever tried to lose weight would be skeptical of such promising figures, but Physicians Weight Loss Center has the proof to support their claims. . . the successful patients.

In recent years, a variety of diet centers have sprung up across the country. People are quick to pay large sums of money for promises that are not kept. To gain back in a short period of time the weight that was lost should and would make anyone cautious. Physicians Weight Loss Centers are different.

Our short term goals are realistic and attainable and more importantly, our long term goals are 'forever'. . . the rest of their life.

We work with men and women, young and old . . . some with only a few unattractive pounds and others with severe medical problems that can only be cured by a loss of weight. Everyone who expects to be successful on our program must admit one thing up front before they enroll.

This is, "that they need help." Many of our patients are referred to us from medical doctors who have other patients of theirs who succeeded at PWLC. We often work closely with other doctors in monitoring a patient's progress and reporting back to them.

If you've got a weight situation that you're not happy with, Physicians Weight Loss Centers can help . . . give them a call at 646-4500. Most likely you'll agree later that it's the most important call and appointment you've ever made.

MEDICAL STAFF MONITORS PROGRESS

Anyone considering a weight loss program or a diet of any type should first check out its safety. Medical supervision within the staff is a must and Physicians Weight Loss Centers have excellent credentials.

Each center is staffed with medical doctors, registered and licensed practical nurses, staff counselors. The Center is essentially an out-patient medical weight loss clinic. There is close initial screening before a person is accepted in order to ascertain for sure that the program is correct for him or her.

All medical services are performed in house on all potential patients as well as throughout the program. The center is open Monday thru Friday from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. in order to accommodate the working people who get off around 5 or 6 p.m.

Many of our patients work full-time and travel 10 to 15 miles to our center. They have already seen and felt the worth of the program and don't mind the travel time.

Bloodwork and EKG's are performed on all potential patients. Once a person begins the diet, daily supervision helps create a monitored environment for weight loss and physical condition. This is a highly important aspect of the center's program. Vitamins and minerals are provided daily, also.

A potential patient usually expects to be constantly hungry, maybe irritable and short on energy while losing their weight, but this is not the case with our program.

A patient will find himself eating balanced and nutritionally sound meals. Only fresh foods and vegetables are allowed.

The program employs several diets which are calorie and carbohydrate restricted along with an adequate amount of protein, vegetables, fruits, and starches creating well balanced meals daily. The program teaches natural eating habits such as: eating out, social eating, church covered dish meals, or just eating at home with the family.

A person with Physicians Weight Loss Centers will purchase and prepare their own meals. Food choices include fish, chicken, turkey, beef, lobster, shrimp, oysters, fruits, raw vegetables, cooked vegetables, bread, cheese, cottage cheese, melba toast, and others all in well-balanced and reasonable portions.

WEIGHT LOSS CAN BE FOREVER

For many people losing weight is not the hard part. Keeping those pounds away is where many dieters fail.

Anyone can lose weight but unless good eating habits are established during the weight loss, chances are the weight will return. Helping overweight patients eat and think like a slender person is one of the primary goals of the Physicians Weight Loss Centers.

Most people are overweight due to bad eating habits which have become ingrained over the years. Eating to soothe anger or depression, eating at a set time every day or eating just because the food happens to be in sight are all habits which can cause weight problems. Many people may not even realize, these habits exist.

The centers place much emphasis on changing these bad habits into more healthy and constructive food attitudes. Physicians Weight Loss Centers Behavioral Guidance leaders conduct sessions weekly which are designed to increase each patient's awareness of their diet defeating eating habits.

Once the person recognizes these habits are present, he/she can then attempt to change the patterns in order to promote a more slender lifestyle.

For instance, many dieters make the mistake of setting unreachable goals, such as striving to lose 15 pounds in one week. When this goal is not achieved, they will forget about losing weight altogether. Through their classes, Physicians Weight Loss Centers stresses that a person should set short term, reasonable goals for weight loss.

At Physicians Weight Loss Centers perhaps one of the most vital part of the program occurs when the patient reaches his or her goal weight. Once a person successfully reaches their goal, the center stresses maintaining this weight.

After following their diet plan, a period of calorie adjustment follows which stablizes the body's weight. In addition, a full one year maintenance schedule is established and encouraged.

In the year that follows, if over three pounds are gained, Physicians Weight Loss Centers wants to see that patient back, at no additonal charge. The counselors will help the patient lose those few pounds before any more weight is gained.

COUNSELORS PROVIDE SUPPORT

Anyone who's ever attempted to lose weight knows what a difficult and lonely task it can be. Physicians Weight Loss Centers can help make weight loss a more pleasant experience.

Along with medical supervision the center's staff offers a great amount of support and encouragement to their patients. Staff members have been trained to work very closely with each individual patient from the very beginning of the diet.

More importantly, every staff member at the center has been required to be on the diet at least for a short period of time; because of this, they have a firsthand knowledge of the experiences of a dieting person and they are better able to understand and help their patients.

Once you have reached your desired weight, the counselors continue to provide the support and encouragement needed to maintain this weight.

"You need all the guidelines and support you can get."

"But it can be done. Your success is our success."

Select china pattern to last a lifetime

When it comes time to register for wedding gifts, perhaps one of the most challenging decisions is the selection of china.

This investment is expected to last a lifetime, so not only must a person be certain that she chooses quality, she also must choose a company and a pattern that will please her as much 40 years from now as it does today.

When it comes to selecting a pattern, perhaps the best way to proceed is to scan all the patterns and narrow the choice to four or five favorites, according to Kay Pollet, manager of a department store registry.

The selection then may narrow even more when price and warranty are taken into consideration. Does the manufacturer offer any type of guarantee? Is there any assurance that the pattern will be available 40 years from now? What are replacement costs for chipped or broken pieces?

To determine quality, Pollet recommends the following steps:

— Inspect the surface of the plate for tiny pin marks or black spots.

— Look at the quality of the glaze. The surface should be totally smooth, without runs or ripples.

— Tap your fingernail on a plate and listen to the sound it makes. It should not "thud" like stoneware.

— Look at the application of the design. Any bands, whether gold or platinum, should be absolutely even, without bubbles or brush marks. Make sure the pattern is centered and balanced.

— Compare the colors of two pieces of the same pattern to make sure the colors are consistent from plate to plate.

— Look at the configuration of more complicated pieces. Handles should be straight and perpendicular to the ground and should be large enough for your fingers to fit through.

Tips on choosing flowers

Wonder why the bride tosses her bouquet?

The custom started as a form of self-defense, according to Barbara Tober, editor-in-chief of Bride's magazine. She explained that, in times past, a bride's adornments were believed to have mystical value, so friends and strangers tried to grab pieces of her outfit.

Eventually, some clever bride found that by flinging her flowers away from herself, the crowd would have something to fight over — and she could escape intact. Passed down through the years, this custom now signifies that the young lady who catches the bouquet will be the next to marry.

But clever brides today who want to keep their bouquets as mementos can have a florist make duplicate versions. The bride tosses the duplicate and keeps her own bouquet.

The bride and her attendants traditionally carry bouquets at all but the most informal weddings, according to "Bride's Book of Etiquette" (Putnam Publishing Group, New York, 1984), which offers planning information on every bridal topic, including flowers. Following are some tips from the book.

A bride at an informal wedding usually chooses flowers for her dress or for her wrist instead of a bouquet.

Even brides who carry bouquets often wish to have flowers to wear with their going-away outfits. Florists can construct bouquets so that the center flowers can be removed to form a corsage, or brides may order a fresh arrangement for travel.

A bride's bouquet can be any size and shape and include as many or as few flowers as the bride wishes, but it should be scaled to her height and complement her dress. Giving the florist a complete description of the dress and fabric swatches, if possible, will help him to recommend an appropriate bouquet style.

The bridesmaids and honor attendant usually carry arrangements similar in style and design to the bride's. But the bride's bouquet traditionally is made up of only white flowers, with the honor attendant's flowers a different shade from the bridesmaids' flowers. Again, fabric swatches given to a florist will help him match the color of the flowers to the dresses.

Other flowers considered necessary: corsages for the mother of the bride and the mother of the groom; boutonnieres for male attendants and fathers.

Flowers for the reception and ceremony may be as simple or elaborate as the bride wishes. In general, elaborate floral decorations are reserved for very large, formal weddings. But a simple chapel may need more decoration than an ornate cathedral. Discuss with church authorities what is permitted. Then ask your florist to visit the wedding site to offer ideas.

For the ceremony, it is customary to have at least one vase of flowers on either side of the altar. You also may wish to have pew decorations.

What's new in veils, wreaths and other bridal headwear

Sleek and shining hair adorned with a fashionable headpiece is the crowning glory for a beautiful bride.

A bride-to-be should experiment with how to wear her headpiece before the wedding, according to Joyce Cohen, fashion editor of Bride's. That way, she'll discover a look compatible with her dress, personality and the shape of her face.

Circular wreaths adorned with delicate silk flowers and a veil are one of this season's most popular and versatile bridal styles. Wreaths match virtually every dress and hairstyles can be adapted easily to fit the round shape.

The sophisticated-looking bride may want to pull her hair up over the wreath. Wispy tendrils can be brought forward to cascade gracefully among colored ribbons that match the tones of bridesmaids' dresses. For a younger look, wear the wreath like a crown on top of the head, over hair that flows long and full.

Flowers with pearl sprays affixed with combs to the back and sides of the head look especially attractive to church guests who can see the bride only from behind during the ceremony. Flowers or ornaments then can be removed for a different look during the festivities afterward. Cohen advises using silk flowers in the hair. Body heat and hairspray can cause real flowers to wilt and turn brown.

Veils continue to be popular, thanks to the rebirth of formal wedding ceremonies. Veil styles should reflect the same mood as the dress.

Fingertip and flyaway lengths that come to the shoulder or elbow continue to be popular, but this season veils tend to be shorter and have more volume than in the past. They often are layered and accented with surface interest, such as pearl trims, sequins or crystal beading.

Detachable veils also are quite popular. When secured to a wreath with a comb, the nine yards of tulle that looked picturesque at the altar can be removed easily for the reception.

Bridal millinery also has more dash this summer. Caps have received a much-publicized fashion boost, thanks to prime-time weddings on nighttime soap operas. Wide-brimmed picture hats provide a feminine touch for a warm-weather garden wedding.

Cohen suggests taking the bridal headpiece to a hairstylist several weeks before the wedding to try out styles that might be appropriate. It's a good idea to avoid a drastic haircut close to the wedding date. A radical change may be too difficult for a nervous bride to handle.

Whether the bride is a first-timer or an encore bride, her choice of hairstyle — short or long, elegantly braided or pulled back in a chignon — is the key accessory for her bridal headgear. Whatever the coif, it should look natural enough to keep the bride from appearing theatrical and to avoid obscuring the intricate details of her dress.

Whatever hairstyle the bride chooses, healthy hair is her most important styling component. Conditioning is essential for shiny, healthy hair, according to a spokesmen for Rave hair products. A penetrating conditioner will ensure that hair will glow with the same vitality as the new bride and be manageable enough to accommodate even complicated hairstyles.

If you have fine hair, consider using a soft home perm to give more texture and hold your style longer.

Honeymoon seclusion is now second to adventure

Honeymoons once were meant as a time for the bride and groom to get to know one another — but today's couples are more familiar than they were in past generations.

Today the honeymoon is more of a vacation — a time to unwind after the hectic pre-wedding schedule and to regroup before going back to work.

Where to go on the honeymoon is an important decision, and the bride and groom should consider cash flow, as well as what type of atmosphere they want. A small island may afford privacy but also may be a little boring — there won't be any shops, movies, restaurants.

For shopping addicts, a more commercialized place, such as Acapulco or San Francisco, may be the choice, while an African safari might be the pick for a couple seeking adventure.

Travel consultant Maureen Kelley offers suggestions for honeymoon travel based on four bridal fantasies.

If you've picked Love on a Shoestring as your theme, perhaps you'll want to save airfare and consider a weekend honeymoon at a romantic location near your hometown. You'll save airfare but still have a romantic setting. If you feel you've got to leave the country to call it a honeymoon, how about a package deal to Cabo San Lucas? This Mexican getaway can be very inexpensive, and there are lots of great hotels and shops to choose from, Kelley said.

If you've chosen City Lights as your wedding theme, plan on spending more money, but you still won't have to go into debt.

If you like the city and don't want to spend all your money and time on the transportation, try a city nearby.

If Europe is your dream and you're looking for excitement, there's the Orient Express.

This super lavish, super luxurious train run by Society Expeditions carries you from Paris to Istanbul in 10 days and treats you to marvelous times, like a private dinner party at the home of a marquis in his French chateau.

A less expensive, but by no means cheap Orient Express ride is offered by Venice Simplon. The carriages are a little less ornate and the ride's a little shorter.

If you plan to fly to Europe you've got the time and the inclination, consider going "stand-by," which should cut the price of a round-trip ticket in half.

The Lavish Love Affair theme is the best of the best, so naturally you'll want to do Europe, sparing no expense.

If you've got about six months or more before the wedding, Kelley suggests making reservations at the San Pietro Hotel in the town of Positano, Italy. Located in the Gulf of Salerno, this famous inn is frequented by stylish stars and simply is the place to go.

Another great place to go is the Greek island of Mykonos. Providing a completely different kind of honeymoon from Europe, this very private island is known for its nude beaches. It's also non-commercialized, so don't expect the Bahamas.

If you're looking for a little Island Romance, there are lots of places to go, from Hawaii to the isle of Tahiti.

If you pick Tahiti, try not to go in the early spring, as the rain can make it rather miserable. June through October are considered the best months — the time to take advantage of several good honeymoon packages.

The U.S. Virgin Islands provide another favorite getaway. St. Thomas Island, the capital of the islands, is a shopper's paradise.

Not so far away and a little cheaper is Hawaii — the traditional honeymoon paradise. And for the ultimate island romance go to the Kona Village Resort, where you can get married and honeymoon all in one tropical setting.

And then there's Acapulco, a longtime favorite of the Love Boat crowd and great for fun on the beach, shopping, fiestas and romance.

If you make this your honeymoon spot, try Las Brisas. It's noted for private swimming pools and patios for each room, a private jeep to buzz around town in and a fully stocked bar. And, of course, you'll be treated to champagne and fresh flowers and fruit.

For information on all these trips, check with your local travel agent.

SELL HOME YOURSELF?

I'm sure you've heard it said: "Why should I sell my home through a REALTOR? I can sell it myself and save a lot of money." Right?.....Wrong!

This kind of thinking usually turns out to be financially unwise. The prospects will usually start by mentally deducting the commission and then start negotiating from there. On the average, a homeowner saves little or no money when he sells his/her own home. In fact, the opposite is often true. A lot of time is wasted showing homes to unqualified curiosity seekers and many possible sales are lost because the owner did not possess the experience to financially structure a viable sale in today's fast-changing money market.

As a private seller you're at a great disadvantage in the intricate areas of financing, negotiating and protecting yourself from all sorts of do-it-yourself pitfalls. You've got a strong investment in your home. It makes sense to list it with a REALTOR. He or she will sell without any disappointment and for the best price and in the shortest amount of time.

Louise Ruma-Ivers is the immediate past President of the Greater Boston Women's Council of Realtors, and a past Director of the Marketing Institute for the Greater Boston Real Estate Board. She is a member of the Arlington Historic Districts Committee.

Dot Stein is a Vice President of the Greater Boston Real Estate Board and a Director of its Multiple Listing Service. She was a long-time Arlington Town Meeting member, and a member of the Arlington School Committee.

Real Estate Happenings by Steve Collins

PRICING

Pricing a home for the local market? It pays to be realistic. It helps to sever all emotional ties that one may have with one's home. A real estate professional can certainly help in this respect because he or she knows the market. The over-priced house often will spend a longer time on the market. If the price is later reduced, one may end up with even less. The best opportunity to sell is when the home first goes on the market. Agents note its availability, visit it, and bring potential buyers. An over-priced property may be overlooked in favor of those homes priced more in line with reality.

CENTURY 21 COLLINS REALTY, INC. has built an outstanding reputation by satisfying even our most discriminating clients. Drop by and talk with us whether you are planning to buy or sell in the near future. Our office is located at 783 Massachusetts Ave., 648-6900. We are open daily, evenings and weekends.

HINT: If you plan to stay in your new home for more than five years, pay higher points for a lower interest rate.

Audi Remanufactured Parts. Built Like New. Priced For Less.

Remanufactured parts are better than "rebuilt" or "reconditioned" parts. They may even be better than original parts since technical advances are often incorporated into the remanufacturing process.

Each unit – alternator, water pump or one of over 300 other parts – is disassembled, cleaned and tested to exacting standards. During reassembly, parts that do not meet these standards are replaced. Then the assembly is tested again to make sure it works as well as the original in every way.

Our remanufactured parts carry the same 6-month/6,000-mile limited warranty as new Audi Parts.* The only thing that isn't like new is the price.

*Ask for Autobahn or Audi Limited Warranty at our Parts Department.

ENTERING THE SECOND CENTURY

Ask anyone who invented the automobile and the chances are they really won't be able to answer you. Most historians say the motor vehicle as we'd know it today was invented by a German named Carl Benz. He received a patent for his internal combustion-propelled vehicle on January 29, 1886.

As we enter the "Second Century of the Auto," we begin to realize just how important the automobile has really been. On this anniversary, we salute Carl Benz and all of those other early inventive pioneers who contributed to our "good life" and our love affair with the automobile.

State dims hopes for Loop housing

By GEORGE DERRINGER

Prospects aren't bright for state approval of low- to moderate-income housing on a portion of the former Woburn Loop right-of-way.

No definitive word has been received from Secretary of Transportation Frederick Salvucci, who must approve any use of former railbeds, but a letter he wrote to the state Executive Office of Communities and Development (EOCD) states his continued desire to maintain the right of way, especially given traffic congestion on Main Street to Woburn.

Winchester Housing Authority members and town officials went to Boston Sept. 3 to meet with Salvucci at a hearing. Instead, they met with one of his assistants.

"The WHA presented its arguments, as did Rep. Sherman ("Whip") Saltmarsh, the chairman of the state transportation committee and I," town manager Chad Maurer said during Monday's meeting of selectmen.

"The aide said the secretary would take the question under advisement," Maurer reported.

Town meeting voted to build two housing units on a portion of the Loop near Cross Street. The EOCD has required the town to provide seven units of low- to moderate-income housing.

Maurer pointed out that Salvucci, when a member of the advisory board of the MBTA, did not object to the words on the deed transferring ownership of the land to the town of Winchester.

"The deed says the commonwealth sees no value in the land for transportation purposes," Maurer told selectmen.

Housing Authority members have indicated they will consider either legal action or a direct appeal to the governor if Salvucci blocks the town's attempt to live up to its long-standing promise to provide family housing.

A formal written decision to the town is expected within the next two or three weeks, Maurer said.

Andreas Dinis, a studenty in Mrs. Wolfe's class at Vinson-Owen, looks less than thrilled with his yummy lunch.

Local schools' enrollment down

Winchester school system started school this year with 71 fewer students than last year.

Overall, the public school system has 2,986 students as of Sept. 8. Last October's count was 3,057.

Elementary enrollments this year stand at one student more than the 1,449 projected by school officials. Since last year, enrollment at Ambrose School has decreased from 258 to 245 while Lincoln School increased two students from 408 to 410.

At Lynch School, enrollment went up from 238 to 267 while Muraco School's pupil count increased from 273 to 292. At Vinson-Owen School, enrollment dropped from 245 to 226.

McCall Junior High School lost 34 students since October 1985. Enrollment at the grades 7-8 school is now 450, compared to 484 last October. School officials had projected an enrollment of 469.

Winchester High School has also had a decrease in enrollment this year. The school had 1,086 students Tuesday, compared to 1,151 in October 1985. The projected enrollment was 1,112 for the 1986-87 school year.

Superintendent Charles L. Mitsakos reported resignations and appointments at a recent school committee meeting.

Resigning are: Felicia M. Hall, foreign language teacher at the high school; James Maconochie, assitant coach, girls' soccer and head coach, girls' softball; Leonard Merullo, assistant football coach; Katherine Currier, elementary school teacher at Lincoln School, retirement; and Elizabeth T. McDonough, Ambrose School elementary teacher, retirement.

Levine is new conservation commissioner

Susan Levine, an attorney, was elected to the conservation commission in a 3-2 vote by selectmen Monday night.

She will fill a vacancy on the commission created by the death of chairman Margaret Howard this spring.

Selectmen deadlocked Sept. 2 and were unable to choose any of nine candidates and three nominees by a majority vote.

Monday, Levine won the support of selectmen Judie Muggia, Bob Deering and Wade Welch.

Selectmen Mark Lombardi and Frank Sopper voted for Robert DeWald, a professor.

The name of Elaine Vreeland, who was nominated last week by Deering, was withdrawn. Vreeland is one of 27 applicants for the part-time conservation administrator's post approved by the spring town meeting.

Levine spoke early in Monday's meeting, assuring selectmen she was still very much interested in the post.

In other business Monday, selectmen:

New parking plan still under debate

By GEORGE DERRINGER

Don't look for new lines on Winchester streets to mark parking spaces. They won't be there for a while yet.

Selectmen decided Monday to prepare a new plan for downtown parking that would not keep 20 feet of empty space between parking places and either streets or crosswalks.

They voted instead to "maximize parking without compromising safety."

The plan will be presented to the state department of public works for approval.

Last week, selectman Frank Sopper objected to a new plan submitted by town engineer Jake Ciarcia because its observance of 20-foot buffer zones would cost the town about 25 parking spaces.

Selectman Mark Lombardi presented a detailed analysis of the state's traffic manual, arguing that no wording in it requires a 20-foot empty space, although one is shown on "typical layout" charts.

Lombardi also said the manual is seven years old. And it was designed for state highways anyway, Lombardi said.

Beginning the discussion, selectman Frank Sopper said a week's study had confirmed his previous notion that Winchester didn't have to leave 20 feet, more than one parking space, as shown on the state's map. He left elucidation to Lombardi.

Quoting passages from the manual, Lombardi contended that it is "a good guideline" but specifically says cities and towns should write their own rules and regulations for their own streets.

In fact, unlike what selectmen had been told the previous week, the state manual says parking regulations are "generally left to the local rule-making body."

Lombardi also said the manual does not require crosswalks to be painted with white lines. It does require them to be clearly marked, however.

Selectman Bob Deering said he is not in favor of reducing parking spaces downtown but is worried about increasing the town's liability in case of a lawsuit. He said he was not interested in Sopper's earlier description of what Arlington and Lexington had done.

Town counsel Doug Randall said the town's liability would increase but the plaintiff would have to demonstrate that the town's violation of a rule was a primary cause of an accident. He said that might be "pretty hard."

On the other hand, Randall said, if no such state rule exists, the town's liability would not increase if 20 feet were not left between parking and corners "unless the town did something bizarre."

"Somebody's missing something," Sopper responded. "Of course our liability would increase if we violate the manual. But nothing in the book says we have to have 20 feet."

Town manager Chad Maurer agreed that the text of the state manual does not say 20 feet.

Finally, a majority of selectmen informally declared themselves in favor of reducing the 20-foot zone and submitting the new plan to the state for approval. Deering, however, asked how much empty space should be left.

"If 20 feet is really the requirement, we can submit a plan showing 19 feet and they'll say it's wrong," he said. "Then we'll find out if 20 feet really is a law."

Lombardi, however, said if a 19-foot plan is approved, "then we're stuck." He suggested a shorter distance.

Chairman Wade Welch said he didn't want the board to decide parking plans. Nonetheless, Sopper and Lombardi failed in a bid to ask the town engineer to make a new parking plan with only three-foot buffer zones.

Selectmen decided not to vote at all but simply to direct the town engineer to design a new plan "to maximize parking" with something under 20 feet empty space between parking and corners or crosswalks.

In a related but much less stormy discussion, selectmen quickly agreed to paint a new crosswalk on Waterfield Road, leading between the traffic islands on either side of a straight line from Thompson Street to the parking lot. Because selectmen propose to expand the islands, they must submit the plan to the state.

School board plans for town meeting

By MAUREEN QUINLAN

School committee members could face fall town meeting with one warrant article.

Members voted unanimously Tuesday night to reserve a space on the warrant to revamp the tennis courts on the high school grounds on Skillings Road.

No vote was taken to officially place the article on the warrant.

The vote Tuesday night reserves a space on the warrant to appropriate funds to repair and upgrade the courts. Chad Maurer, town manager, will receive notification from the committee to keep a space open. A formal vote is slated at the committee's Sept. 23 meeting.

O'Connell, former chairman of the selectmen, said reserving a space on the warrant will allow the committee to retract the article at the next meeting pending a majority vote.

O'Connell voiced concern about impact of the special town meeting, scheduled for Sept. 18, might have on the town.

He said the meeting "may have a devastating effect on the town."

"On Sept. 23, I may vote against the article," said O'Connell, citing the special town meeting as his reason.

Members voiced concern about placing the item on the warrant and then having to indefinitely postpone the article at town meeting. "Indefinite postponement" is town meeting jargon for defeating an article without voting on it.

O'Connell said with a formal vote Sept. 23, the committee will be able to ask for the deletion of the article.

Member Steve Powers brought the item to the committee's attention, calling the conditions of the courts unsafe.

"Those conditions are deplorable and it's shabby looking," said Powers. He indicated the courts are used for tennis and for daily gym classes.

Member Donna Brandt Landry said, "How can I vote on a place I haven't seen?"

Landry said she was interested in surveying the property herself and encouraged other members to do the same.

Powers asked members to drive by and look at the state of the courts.

He said the surface of the courts is unsmooth and very bumpy. He told members conditions have worsened in the last year.

O'Connell chimed in, "Sounds like Steve Powers lost a match on a bad bounce."

Members went into executive session to discuss Winchester Education Association contract talks on Horace Mann grants for teachers.

Ronayne will remain school board chair

By MAUREEN QUINLAN

School committee member Michael Ronayne will remain in the chairman "pro tem" seat after another deadlock Tuesday night.

Because of a prior work commitment, Ronayne will not attend the committee's next meeting Sept. 23. Ronayne entertained a suggestion that member Edward F. O'Connell, former chairman, act as chairman for the meeting. Noone opposed Ronayne's choice.

In the continuing battle for the chairman's post, member Alice McCarter nominated member William Jervey and member Donna Brandt Landry seconded the nomination. O'Connell nominated Ronayne and member Steve Powers seconded.

The vote split with Jervey, McCarter and Landry in favor of Jervey and Ronayne, O'Connell and Powers backing Ronayne. No further nominations were made.

In other action, Winchester High School students reported they plan to begin a Big Brother/Big Sister program at the high school this fall.

Community School Association members for 1986-87 school year are Diane Munini, chairman, Judy Bush, representative from the high school, Diane Thelly of McCall, Ann Hoagland of Ambrose School, Sheila Marion of Lincoln, Susan Haskell of Muraco, Linda Pickering of Vinson-Owen and Monica Salter of Lynch.

Six new members were appointed to the task force for cultural and ethical awareness. Jervey, a member of the force, requested the members in order to create a better cross

How town trash becomes energy

By TOM O'CONNOR

The trash-to-energy plant where Winchester brings its waste is the safest and most economical way to dispose of trash, North East Solid Waste Committee plant manager Joseph McCarthy said.

It also appears to be the cleanest way. The road to the North Andover plant and the grounds surrounding it show no trace of of the 6000 tons of rubbish the plant is capable of handling every week.

Officials at the plant held an open house at the plant Saturday.

North East Solid Waste Committee (NESWC), a group of towns, including Winchester, owns the plant.

The Refuse Energy Systems Company (RESCO), a subsidiary of Signal Environmental Systems Inc., designed, built and operates the plant.

The plant handles an average of 1200 tons of trash per day from the 21 member communities of NESWC.

The trash is enough fuel to generate electricty to meet the demand of 28,000 homes per year.

"This is a power plant that operates like other plants with one difference being we use an exotic fuel here," said McCarthy.

The "exotic fuel" is delivered by a stream of garbage trucks entering the cavernous dumping area where six trucks can offload at the same time.

The trash is dumped into a pit capable of holding three days worth, or 3600 tons, of garbage. The aroma from tons of fermenting garbage is contained by the containment building.

Sixty feet above the mass of trash sit crane operators who run giant claw scoops. From their glass enclosed perch they operate what looks like a bigger than life arcade game.

Instead of operating a crane to win a prize, they work to satisfy the insatiable appetite of the boilers with three ton bites of trash.

McCarthy says each bite is the energy equivalent of three barrels of oil.

The boilers are heated only by the burning trash. The plant uses no auxillary fuel. Steam from the boilers is then directed to the generator.

The generator produces 40 megawatts, or 40 million watts, per hour on a 24 hour-per-day basis on a year round basis.

With the use of an advanced system of moving grates the trash is mixed with air to burn at a temperature of 2,200 F. Gas and ash escaping from the burning process never see the light of day.

The plant has a pair of electrostatic precipitators that capture pollutants and ash before escaping from the 230 foot high stack.

Town meeting will be asked for $395,000 more to cover garbage costs

Winchester town meeting members will be asked to appropriate $395,750 during a special town meeting at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 18, at the high school.

Two articles are on the warrant for the meeting and both deal, in some way, with trash.

One article asks the town to appropriate more money for operation of the transfer station. Town manager Chad Maurer said Monday he will recommend that town meeting take $240,000 from "free cash," or unexpended funds, to pay for increased tipping and hauling fees.

The town's current free cash total is around $1.5 million.

The major reason for increased costs is the depressed price of oil. The North Andover facility which incinerates garbage for Winchester and 22 other towns is reimbursed for the electricity it generates according to "oil replacement" costs. When oil is cheap, the facility gets less income from the sale of electricity.

A second article to be considered Sept. 18 asks the town to appropriate funds to purchase trailers for hauling trash to North Andover.

Maurer says the current contract calls for $11 per ton in charges but the low bidder this year bid $26 per ton. He says the town can save money by owning its own trailers and hiring someone to haul them to North Andover.

Monday, Maurer said the low bid for five new trailers had been $155,750. Nobody submitted bids to sell the town used trailers, he said.

Three options are under consideration. The town could finance the purchase over five years, which would cost about $23,000 in interest over the period.

The town could also pay for all five trailers with free cash or could take the money from its "sale of land" account.

Selectman Wade Welch also suggested town meeting members be informed about the history of the North East Solid Waste Committee and its 20-year contract with Winchester to deliver trash to North Andover. Maurer said information would be provided by mail.

Elected moderator John Sullivan will not preside at the Sept. 18 town meeting.

He is the president of Massachusetts Refusetech Inc., the company which operates the North Andover waste-to-energy facility.

David Mortensen, a town meeting member, is a probable substitute but he must be nominated by selectmen and elected by the full town meeting.

Scholarship Foundation awards another $62,850

The Winchester Scholarship Foundation recently awarded $62,850 in scholarship aid to 30 Winchester young people as "further aid" for use in financing their higher education after the freshman year of college.

James Bowers, retiring chairman of the scholarship committee of the foundation, reported that the 30 recipients are attending 21 different schools, colleges and universities.

The further aid scholarships ranged from $1,000 to $4,000. These awards include an award to one student attending medical school, under the terms of a major gift several years ago made anonymously by a local physician.

These "continuing aid" awards are in addition to $36,035 in "initial aid" awarded in May to 25 students who graduated this year from Winchester public schools. The initial aid awards were given to 25 students attending 19 institutions of higher learning and ranged from $200 to $3,500.

In total, the Winchester Scholarship Foundation has this year awarded $98,885 to 55 local students.

The Winchester Scholarship Foundation is a public trust, funded by public gifts, and the outgrowth of a Winchester elementary school parents' association 40 years ago. Run by local volunteers, it seeks to "make the essential difference" to enable qualified graduates of Winchester High School and the Vocational High School to pursue their educations after high school.

The "difference" is defined as that need existing after all other sources of financing an education are exhausted — including family contributions, the scholarships and loans given by the student's school, the student's own savings, loans, government grants and student jobs while in school.

Awards are granted on the basis of need, character and a demonstration of the student's willingness to help himself or herself improve.

Awards are made annually by a four-person scholarship committee, on which the high school principal sits ex officio, advised by the financial aid officer from a local university. Extensive financial disclosures are required of applicants and their families, in return for which the foundation pledges strictest confidence.

Complimenting the scholarship committee on the completion of its work, retiring Foundation president David Mortensen thanked the Winchester community again for its support, which makes the scholarships possible.

"As a community, we go to great lengths to provide Winchester's young people with the best possible public education and to encourage them to develop a will and goal to strive for the best they can attain. What a shame it would be if we, as a community, do not then, once they graduate, do everything we can to assist these worthy young people to keep going after high school," Mortensen said.

"No one else will give the aid reflected by these scholarships. All other sources are exhausted first," he said.

Mortensen paid special tribute to the individual contributors and local civic organizations whose contributions made these awards possible, and to the many volunteers involved in the fundraising. Chief among these was Dr. Donald McLean, who chaired the fundraising drive. The Foundation also thanked The Winchester Star for its generous coverage of the Scholarship Foundation and its efforts.

The Winchester Scholarship Foundation will hold its annual meeting at 7:30 p.m. Sept. 16, at the Winchester Public Library. the public is cordially invited.

Contributions are greatly needed, addressed to Winchester Scholarship Foundation, P.O. Box 74, Winchester 01890. Information and applications for next year's awards can be obtained from Anthony DiBiase at the Winchester High School guidance department (Tel: 721-7020).

MORE EFFICIENTT APPLIANCES—BUT

All the hoopla about more efficient appliances isn't just talk. Today's freezers use an average 44% less energy than they did back in 1972 (before the Arab oil embargo sent fuel prices soaring). Dishwashers, clothes washers and refrigerators/freezers all use at least one third less energy now. From the latest calculations, gas dryers are using 16% less energy (for electric dryers the figure is only 3%, however). Room air-conditioners use 15% less energy.

The savings come from a variety of improvements. For example, pilot lights have been replaced with electronic ignition systems. People are using cooler water to launder clothes. Electronic sensors shut off dryers as soon as the clothes are ready. Gaskets and seals around freezers and refrigerator doors are tighter.

Despite these savings, you aren't likely to be ahead of the game. In the same period, average electric rates rose about 90% and natural gas about 200%.

ally Willing, left, and Claudia McCarthy, both of Winchester, invite prospective volunteers to Winchester ospital for a fall orientation meeting Wednesday, Sept. 17.

Friends of Winchester Hospital will host orientation Sept. 17

The Friends of Winchester Hospital extend a warm invitation to all men and women of the communities served by the hospital to attend their fall orientation meeting for prospective volunteers.

Wednesday, Sept. 17, Sally Willing and Claudia McCarthy, vice-chairmen of the Volunteer Services Board, will host two sessions, one at 9:30 a.m. and the other at 7:30 p.m., in the board room of the hospital to explain the kinds and scope of the services, the hours, and the requirements for becoming a volunteer.

The introduction will be followed by coffee and a tour of the hospital.

As Winchester Hospital has grown physically over the past 36 years, so the number of auxiliary services has increased. In 1950 when 146 women from Reading, North Reading, Stoneham, Wilmington, Wakefield, and Winchester met "to interpret the hospital to the community at large, and to assist ... in any way deemed advisable by the governing authorities of the hospital," they instituted eight areas of service.

During the past year, 292 men and women volunteers performed 22,039 hours in 22 committees of service.

In the intervening years there have been great changes in society's life styles which have limited the number of volunteers necessary to keep pace with Winchester Hopital's growth in physical facilities and advanced technology.

For example, before so many women returned to the labor force, the number of volunteers peaked in 1972 with 473 volunteers. Following this period, changes in the delivery of health care have created additional demands on the volunteer staff as well as on the professional staff.

The messenger service has seen the greatest change with the advent of day surgery and the increased number of daily admissions and discharges and heavier transport of patients to the sophisticated departmental services available.

There is an area of interest for everyone who can invest a few hours weekly or monthly to earn an incalculable return in pride and self-satisfaction in serving Winchester Hospital.

Newcomers plan first social event

An informal catered pizza and beer party will be the first social event of the 1986-87 season for the Winchester Newcomers' Club.

The event is scheduled from 3 to 6 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 21. New and prospective members are welcome.

The party, like the club itself, is intended to help new Winchester residents meet one another. In addition to providing friendly conversation in a relaxed atmosphere, the party will enable non-members to learn more about the club.

For reservations and more information, call 729-3498 by Sept. 18.

High school's English lab praised at MacWorld Expo

The woman, a well-respected Boston educator, stopped at the Winchester High School booth and sighed to Bette Tsoutsouris, a high school English teacher, "All I want to know is how you got your school committee to care enough about their English program to invest in a classroom of Macintosh word processors!"

Tsoutouras heard this over and over during the three-day MacWorld Expo at the Bayside Expo Center Aug. 14-16 as thousands of Macintosh devotees strolled from booth to booth, perusing the latest and the future in computers.

Reflecting the maturing market for computers, the clientele at the show appeared to include more business people and professional educators than the idiosyncratic "co-jocks" who once crowded such affairs.

According to Apple, the education area was the most-visited in the entire show. While local universities were impressively represented by Boston College, Harvard, and MIT, Winchester High School was the only Massachusetts high school at the Expo and the only high school focusing on the computer as a writing tool.

Thus, Winchester's two-year old successful computer-integrated writing program aroused avid interest.

"Several commented on Winchester's foresight in selecting the Macintosh over the many other less expensive word processors, since it is by now clear to a well-informed populace — business executives, educators, students, and parents alike — that for word processing the Macintosh is unequaled," Tsoutouras said.

She talked to educators from schools where less expensive but more difficult-to-use word processors are lying idle because no one has had time to figure out how to use them.

The most-asked question was, "Has using the word processor improved students' writing?" Tsoutouras pointed out how a student's focus has shifted from tedious rewriting by hand to careful editing, how thoughtful editing has long been a writing teacher's goal, and how using the word processor has made this goal attainable.

All teachers know that the natural result of careful editing is a better paper. Thus, it was easy for them to understand how Winchester English teachers can now expect and get a better product. Tsoutouras so convinced one elderly man that he wanted to buy a Macintosh right then and there for his grandson — from her!

The entire vast Expo hall was filled with Macintosh booths promoting every imaginable Apple computer, software, and accessories, yet this gentleman remained unimpressed until he heard about the Winchester High School writing program.

"I think he would have written out a check right on the sopt and walked off with our demonstration model if we had agreed to it," Tsoutouras said.

She talked to teachers and administrators from other high schools who are this year implementing programs similar to Winchester's, exchanged names and phone numbers, and invited them to visit writing lab classes at Winchester High.

"This communication with other educators, I think, was the real value of our being at the Expo," Tsoutouras said.

"We at Winchester High were the first to integrate the Macintosh into an established writing program, the program is thriving, and we enjoy sharing our experiences with others. We came away from the Expo feeling very lucky to be teaching English in Winchester and feeling very sorry for the two teachers we met from an affluent but miserly suburb in Connecticut who have no hope of a Macintosh-filled classroom," she said.

However, we are not smug about our success. Right now we are eager to begin comparing notes with a teacher we met who spent six weeks this summer at Middlebury College developing an interesting variation of our computer writing program that she will pilot in her high school this fall."

Computer classes

Introductory Computer Classes for children ages four and five will begin Sept. 20 at the Arlington Boys and Girls Club. The program will meet once a week for six sessions from 9:30 to 10:15 a.m.

One parent is invited to participate in the class with their child, although this is not required. Participants will be introduced to the Apple IIe computers, disc drives and printers. They will utilize a variety of educational and entertaining software which help develop basic number, alphabet, reading and relationship skills.

Class space is very limited and advanced registration is required. Additional details are available by calling or visiting the Boys & Girls Club.

REAL ESTATE AND YOU

By Dick Murphy
The Bixby & Porter Co. Realtors

LEARN FROM YOUR REALTOR

Good real estate agents can give you up-to-the-minute information about the homes for sale in their market areas. Their expertise, however, goes far beyond the basis of the local housing market, financing, and the other specialized skills needed to get you settled and into your new home.

If you're moving into a new area, your Realtor can be a valuable source of information about a wide range of subjects that will help you settle into the community quickly and easily. Where are the nearest schools and churches? What about recreational facilities, like community centers, swimming pools or tennis courts? Which markets have the freshest produce or the best buys on cat food?

Don't be afraid to ask for recommendations if you'll need a new hairdresser, veterinary hospital or babysitters. Good agents know the communities where they work inside and out, and they're glad to share their knowledge.

The professionals at Bixby & Porter Company Realtors can serve all of your real estate needs. Please give us a call at 729-7000 or stop by our offices at 33 Thompson St., Winchester.

PRAYER TO THE HOLY SPIRIT

O Holy Spirit, thou who art all knowing, who brightens every path that I may reach my idea, thou who giveth me this divine gift of forgiving and forgetting wrongs done unto me and who in every instant of my life art with me, I'd like in this short dialogue to affirm my gratitude for all your blessings and reaffirm once again that I never want to part from thee though the illusion of material things abound.

My desire is to be with thee and all my loved ones in perpetual grace. Thank you for your mercy on me and mine. (Person should pray 3 consecutive days without revealing petition. Within three days, grace will be attained regardless of how difficult the petition may be).

Publish this prayer once grace attained.

Grateful for grace attained.

SENIOR NEWS

Seniors ready for fiesta fair; donations needed

With the tenth annual Fall Fiesta Fair only three weeks away, final plans are speeding up to make the event a success. Saleable items are needed for all tables. Electrical appliances in good working order are needed by Ed Palmer, Ray Murphy, A. Karnilla and Jim Wilson.

The items need to be checked and priced as soon as possible. The public is asked to look through their shelves, closets, and other storage places for articles that they are willing to part with in helping seniors to make the fair an especially successful venture financially.

Kay Kennefick, chairman of the women's boutique, will appreciate all kinds of saleable articles such as linens, dishes, vases, decorative articles, and similar "gifty" items.

The jewelry table, always a popular spot during the fair, needs merchandise early in order to box and price these gifts for holiday shoppers. Games, dolls and toys, for the children's table; billfolds, key rings, belts, ties, cribbage sets, and pocket knives for the men's boutique are sought. Ken Cullen began this fair table eight years ago, and it has been a valuable addition to this annual event.

Knit wear of all kinds, items for the gift shop such as silver, gold, pewter, brass, antiques, art work, cut glass and china are needed for tables that feature things of higher value.

Especially needed are saleable things for the white elephant table, such as ornaments.

Clean, hard-covered books or paperbacks are needed for the book table.

Marjorie Blomquist and Sylvia Saslow appeal to the talented cooks in the town for such delicacies as homemade bread and pastries, preserves and fresh garden produce. Please bring food donations to the Jenks Senior Center Wednesday Oct. 1 by 9 a.m. Thursday Oct. 2, for pricing and displaying.

Through the years, the support of the townspeople has been heartwarming to seniors. We depend again this year on generosity in stocking the fair tables with quality items. Please bring donations to the center as soon as possible. The center will provide a pick-up service. For information, call 721-7136.

Ed Palmer, left, and Al Darnilla explain the merits of an electrical appliance they hope to sell at the Winchester Seniors Association Fall Fiesta Fair.

Foliage trip is Oct. 8

A three-day foliage trip to Western Massachusetts and Southern Vermont over the Mohawk Trail is being booked. Brochures are available at the Jenks Senior Center for the trip Oct. 8 to 10.

Autumnal color should be at its height in the highlands. The travelers will stay at the Williams College Inn. The Clark Museum on the college campus houses one of the largest collections of Renoir paintings.

Helen and Ray Murphy are in charge of this overnight trip. Register early.

Learn to square dance

Milburn Dixon (Mil), popular retired science instructor at Winchester High School, makes the teaching of square dancing steps easy to follow during afternoon sessions of great enjoyment.

His dynamic personality radiates among the fun-loving dancers who wouldn't miss the opportunity to attend the weekly meetings beginning on Tuesday Sept. 16 at 2 p.m. Beginner singles and couples are most welcome to attend.

Learn to swim at Ramada Hotel

The Massachusetts Eastern Seal Society will conduct a therapeutic swim program for children and adults with special needs beginning Monday, Sept. 29 at the Ramada Hotel in Woburn. The program is free.

The program will be supervised by a water safety instructor, experienced with special needs individuals. For more information and an application contact Rosalind Fisher, field representative at 482-3370.

Jenks seeks musicians

The Jenks Senior Center orchestra plans to play at important functions such as the celebration of the openir of the new wing.

The first invitation brought several replies from musicians.

Members can be of any age to add their talents to the group and are urged to join.

Needed are a conductor, stringed instruments, woodwinds, brass and drums. Call the center at 721-7136.

Luncheon set for Sept. 17

Sept. 17 at noon, Helen Hodgdon and assistants will provide a soup and roast beef sandwich luncheon with a gift raffle ticket given to each person.

The Ballou dance partners will entertain with demonstration ballroom dancing. Call the center for a reservation.

Greek luncheon will be Sept. 24

A Greek luncheon at the Averof Restaurant in Porter Square, Cambridge will be Sept. 24. A school bus will leave the center at 10:45 a.m. and return at approximately 3:30 p.m.

A novel entertainment by a versatile belly dancer will provide the setting for the meal with a menu choice of lamb or fish. There are still a few openings for this trip.

Center hosts trip to Christo's

The center will host a trip Nov. 19 to Christo's in Brockton featuring The Gaylords.

The Gaylords are a great vocal team, gifted with comedy. This is a smooth Las Vegas act that appeared on national television over 100 times on shows such as the Glen Campbell Show, Bob Hope Specials, Perry Como Special, Flip Wilson Show. They have also recorded 18 song albums including three number one songs. Completing this exciting bill will be "Mr. Sound Effects" — Wes Harrison. In addition to his on stage work, Wes' sound effects are heard on Tom and Jerry cartoons, Walt Disney productions and a number of Metro Goldyn Meyer movies.

An afternoon of rancorous laughter and thrilling music will be enjoyed.

Call the center at 721-7136 for more information.

Superintendent Charles Mitsakos commended and congratulated teacher Cheryl Howard for starting a debating club at Winchester High School and forming a Shakespeare Drama Society.

The school committee accepted a $200 gift for photography supplies at McCall Junior High School from Mr. and Mrs. John F. Murphy Jr. of Winchester. Last spring, the Murphys donated money to purchase photgraphy equipment at McCall.

Mitsakos said the high school band is slated to begin the half-time festivities at the Gator Bowl.

Mitsakos said the permanent building committee will meet tonight to discuss engineering proposals to improve air quality at the high school. He said if changes are needed, they will affect the fiscal 1988 budget.

The first payment from Chapter 188 state funds for professional development grant funds was recieved. A payment of $317.37 will be administered to 194 teachers in the system who qualified for the grant.

Mitsakos asked for a moment of silence in memory of Rita Collins, who was a teacher at the Wyman School and Lincoln School from 1969 to 1981.

Six named National Merit semifinalists

Six Winchester High School students are 1987 merit scholarship semifinalists.

Kathleen R. Ahearn, Randall A. Hesse, Liu Chester, Caitlin M. Mullin, Robert G. Southworth and Scott A. Sterling qualified and will have an opportunity to advance in the 1987 competition for 6,000 merit scholarships.

To be considered for a scholarship, semifinalists must have a high academic performance, be recommended by their schools, score well on the Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Tests (PSAT) and participate in extracurricular activities.

Winchester High School students are among 15,000 semifinalists chosen. About 40 percent will receive an award.

Winners in each state will be chosen by a selection committee of college admission professionals who will judge the finalists who have the stongest combination of academic and extracurricular accomplishments. The national awards are supported by grants to National Merit Scholarship Corporation (NMSC) from companies and businesses.

The 6,000 recipients will be named merit scholars next April and May.

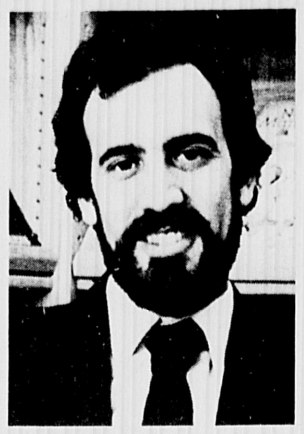
New ob/gyn physician locates in Winchester



Dr. Mitchell Zager

At a time when more stories are being written about physicians who are fed up with the Massachusetts' health care politics and leaving the state, the story of Dr. Mitchell Zager stands out. Because, despite the negative atmosphere, Zager has chosen to move into Massachusetts and set up an obstetrics/gynecology practice in the medical office building at 955 Main St. in Winchester.

Zager, who has joined the staff at New England Memorial Hospital in Stoneham, says the opportunity to establish a practice in the suburban Boston area was too good to pass up.

"My wife and I like the Boston area very much," says Zager, who became familiar with the city and its surroundings during a year as chief ob/gyn resident at Beth Israel Hosp-

Zager says, with a smile, he and his wife, Riitta, are "eager to become native New Englanders."

Zager is a native of Paterson, N.J. He attended Rutgers University and received his medical degree from New Jersey Medical School.

Most recently he served as a staff physician at the First Care Health Center in West Palm Beach, Fla.

"I hope to offer considerate care," Zager stresses. "I think explaining things in detail is important. Patients don't want to just be told something. They want to understand what you're telling them. I believe expectant mothers and their partners should be involved as much as they want to be."

As a strong proponent of VBAC (vaginal birth after cesarian), Zager says he hopes to advocate that option for patients who are eligible. He also hopes to participate in the Winchester and Woburn communities through speaking engagements and offering medical assistance and expertise to local schools, groups or businesses. To contact Zager, call 729-1233.

KEEP THE COUNTY CLEAN!

Bill Schmidt was elected as your Middlesex County Commissioner four years ago to change county government. He promised to cut waste, institute positive reforms, and establish new services on a regional basis if they could be managed effectively and efficiently. He was endorsed by the Boston Globe, the Belmont Herald and the Somerville Journal; by Congressman Edward Markey and State Senator George Bachrach; by State Representatives Michael Barrett, Mary Jane Gibson and Michael McGlynn; by Sheriff Edward Henneberry and many other officials at the local level.

Bill Schmidt has worked hard as Middlesex County Commissioner earning a strong record of accomplishment and a reputation for integrity and independence. Taxes have been cut, county departments have been reorganized, meetings have been opened up to the public, excess county property has been sold in an open manner, buildings have been repaired, plans to modernize the registries of deeds have been started and new programs have been initiated to help drunk drivers, assist refugees and combat child abuse.

Bill Schmidt will continue to fight for what's right in Middlesex County government but he needs your help. He knows that while much has been accomplished, more remains to be done, and it won't be easy. The newspapers know the real story about county government. As Peter Lucas wrote in the Boston Herald, "Right now the county is controlled by reformers (Thomas) Larkin and Bill Schmidt. The third commissioner is veteran Michael McLaughlin, who is best described as a young political hack. . . . That two-to-one-reform majority could be reversed if McLaughlin and a like-minded individual take over the county, returning it to the old courthouse gang days that brought us the infamous East Cambridge Court House building scandal."

Bill Schmidt has been endorsed again this year by Congressman Edward Markey and State Representative Mary Jane Gibson, as well as State Representative and City Councillor Saundra Graham, County Register of Deeds John Zamparelli, City Councillors Sheila Russell, Alice Wolf, Edwin Lucey, Edmund Quin, Frederick Dello Russo, Anthony Giglio and Ray Musetti, Aldermen Helen Corrigan and John Buonomo, School Committee Members Nancy Birt Pratt, Patricia Jehlen, Thomas Taylor, and Judith de la Paz-Spenser, and the Arlington Committee and the Belmont Democratic Town Committee. He needs your vote on September 16th in order to make the progress that has already occurred permanent.

'Learn to lose' class scheduled

A medically and nutritionally sound weight control program, teaching people the practical way to weight loss through sensible eating and by changing eating habits will be offered at the Choate Hospital in Woburn.

Participants will learn how to lose weight and improve nutritional habits and choices through the 12-week weight group, "Learning to Lose," an educational nutrition program.

The popular program which is for those who need to lose 30 pounds or less and have no medical complications, will begin with an orientation session from 7 to 9 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 16. The course is limited to 12 participants per group and there is a $10 non-refundable registration fee.

Asthmatic group to meet Sept. 18

The first of the 1986-87 series of PAK (Parents with Asthmatic Kids) meetings will take place Thursday, Sept. 18, in the social service conference room at Winchester Hospital.

Co-sponsored by the hospital and the American Lung Association of Middlesex County, the group's meetings are free of charge.

Dr. Howard W. Rashba, pediatrician and member of the hospital's active medical staff, will speak about "How to Judge the Criticalness of Your Child's Illness."

During his remarks and in a discussion, he will review how to assess a critical situation, whether the physician should be called and when a visit to the emergency room should be the next course of action.

Information can be obtained by telephoning the social service department, 729-9000, ext. 3104.

Ex-smokers can find support

"Smokers in Transition," a quitters support group, will be offered by the American Lung Association of Middlesex County beginning Sunday, Sept. 7

The eight-session support group will meet from 6:30 to 8 p.m. Sundays at the Choate Hospital, 21 Warren Ave., Woburn. The purpose of this program is to strengthen the skills used to quit smoking and gain additional tools to remain successful as a nonsmoker.

Weight control, relaxation techniques, triggers, and relapse prevention are among topics discussed during meetings.

"For people who benefit from group support in a relaxed environment, this is the way to go," says program consultant Terry Clancy. For those who want to stay off cigarettes without group support, the Lung Association has developed a self-help manual, A Lifetime of Freedom From Smoking® . "The support group is a different method to reach the same goal, but with an added dimension—other people," she says.

Ballet school classes to start

The Winchester School of Ballet will begin its 10th season Sept. 16 at the Crawford Memorial Methodist Church.

The fall schedule of evening and Saturday classes for adults and teens includes beginners through advanced classical ballet, jazz-ballet, and dance-exercise.

Director Darlene Wigton began dance studies in Winchester as a child and was privately and personally trained, here and in Boston, by the late Harriet Hoctor. She began teacher training at 14 and was assistant instructor to Hoctor for several years.

After graduating with highest honors from Lexington Christian Academy, she continued her dance education at the Hartford Conservatory of Music, worked with several regional ballet companies, and studied with such recognized performers as Alexandra Danilova of the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo and New York City Ballet, Erik Cooper, dancer and choreographer for television and movies in Hollywood, and Margarite De Anguera of the Connecticut Valley Ballet.

In 1977, Wigton founded the Winchester School of Ballet, specializing in training adults and teens in the Russian style, with the emphasis on proper body placement for correct classical technique and physical fitness. Children with discipline and a desire to learn are accepted by audition for separate children's classes.

For schedule information, please call 933-4976.

Andover plant changes garbage to electricity

McCarthy says the plant has not violated air quality regulations since the plant went on line last September.

Burning at the high temperature reduces the volume of the trash by 95 percent.

The ash and ferrous metal residue is transported to a landfill in Peabody. McCarthy says work is being done to turn the ash into a useful by product.

Until the plant went on line landfills were the final destination for the half a million tons of trash being now being incinerated.

The site the North Andover plant is located on is next to North Andover's closed landfill. As with most landfills North Andover's turned into a land over-fill that took on the proportions of a mountain.

The top of the plant's 230 foot stack, obscured by the mountain of covered trash the plant replaced, is just visible from the road.

Revenues from the sale of electricity generated at the plant are used to help keep tipping-fees at the plant down. Tipping fees are the cost the individual towns who are members of NESWC pay to have their trash disposed of at the plant.

The lowered cost of electricity from oil fired generating stations causes an increased tipping fees.

Tipping fees are going up because revenues from the sale of electricty to the New England Power Company are down.

According to McCarthy, for every one cent decrease in the price of the plant's electricty an increase of eight dollars in the tipping fee results.

McCarthy said they are currently being paid less the three cents per kilowatt hour. He believes the current shortfall of revenue is temporary. With the inevitable return of higher oil costs the tipping fee increases could be rolled back.

Belmont and other neighboring towns are trying to cope with this possible increase in tipping fee.

The plant has been operational for less than a year but has history dating back 15 years. The first study on the feasability of the plant was done in 1971 by the Greater Lawrence Solid Waste Committee.

Two years later the state lent its technical assistance to finding a resource recovery solution to solid waste disposal.

In 1976 the committee's name was changed to the North East Solid Waste Committee to reflect the increased interest in the plant. One year later the North Andover site was selected from a field of seven possible locations.

In 1981 a service and power agreement was negotiated with New England Power Company and signed in the governor's office.

Groundbreaking for the plant took place in May of 1983.

The projected commercial operation of the $74 million plant was scheduled for spring of this year. It came on line Sept. 25, 1985, six months early and under budget.

Assertiveness training may aid meek, strong

When people say something that leaves you feeling hurt, angry or resentful, do you feel like "kicking yourself" because you didn't know how to respond? Or do you "explode" by becoming angry or resentful? Neither of these behaviors helps communication and, in fact, may lead to a tense or ending relationship.

To held people improve their communication skills and deal with others at difficult times, the Choate-Symmes Community Health Education Department will sponsor an assertivness training workshop from 7 to 9:30 p.m. Mondays, Sept. 15, 22 and 29 and Oct. 6. The workshop will be conducted by Beth I. Goldberg, director of community health education.

Assertiveness is the ability to express one's feelings in an open, honest, positive manner when appropriate, whether those feeling are negative or positive. An assertive person is able to express anger and resentment without feelings of hostility or guilt.

Lack of assertiveness skills are cause of stress and frustration because the person who holds back his or her feelings and thoughts usually doesn't get his needs or goals met. The feelings can eventually "explode," alienating others.

On the other side of the spectrum is the aggressive person who tends to say too much, can be tactless and a poor listener, thus alienating others.

Both passive and aggressive types can benefit from an assertiveness training workshop where they can learn to express themselves more positively and where they will learn active listening skills and how to respond to others who are angry or upset.

The workshop will be limited to 15 participants so there will be ample time for practice sessions. The instructor for the course holds a masters' degree in communications.

Pre-registration is required. For additional information, please call 933-6700, ext. 337.

Latin program needs volunteers

Under the auspices of Amigos de las Americas, the students worked with local people through the nonsectarian, non-profit program. Winchester residents Christine Schultz and Priscilla Lee have participated in prior years.

An information meeting for potential 1987 volunteers is scheduled at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 18, at Payson Park Church, 365 Belmont St., Belmont. More information is also available from 484-6310 or 861-6398.

COMMENT

Glorious past, hopeful future Harvard tradition

By TERRY MAROTTA

I attended the Harvard ceremony in which the Prince of Wales spoke last week as part of that proud institution's 350th anniversary celebration. The significance of the occasion abides with me still.

Harvard was founded in the first place, as John Eliot put it in 1643, because of the foresight of certain people "dreading to leave an illiterate ministery to the churches when our present ministers shall lie in the dust."

It was a school then for training clergymen; they studied there, waxed in wisdom, ripened in knowledge, and came finally to lie in dust themselves.

Today, of course, Harvard is many other things besides a school: landowner of vast tracts of real estate; employer to thousands; steward of a $3 billion endowment; and Alma Mater to nearly a quarter-million living alumni.

Over 4000 alumni came home last week, from every corner of America, to wish her Happy Birthday and get a good look at genuine royalty.

They sat in a yard festooned with flowers and hung with bright heraldic flags that snapped like pennants from the Age of Chivalry in a clean salty breeze under a thin Puritan sun.

They looked like what they were, this audience: a congregation of the well-fed and well-educated, blessed, many of them, with the length of years that often follows from a life of privilege. There were tans in that yard whose foundations were set down before the Armistice.

They sat in a sea of herringbone and ultrasuede and waited, breathless as school kids, for the garish pomp of the academic procession, which was preceded by what the program referred to as a Joyous Pealing of the Bell.

In they all marched finally, the deans and scholars in their gowns and hoods and velvet caps. In at last, too, came His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, oldest son of Her Majesty the Queen and His Royal Highness the Duke of Edinburgh.

Half of us had hoped for ermine and jewels, I think, but he was clothed like the rest in scholarly garb.

He wore a dark jacket, a pale blue shirt and, in deference perhaps to the occasion, a crimson necktie, all of which peeped discreetly from beneath the gorgeous gold-brocaded robes of his own University of Cambridge.

The crowd went wild.

When silence was restored, the speeches of congratulation commenced.

Then Lord Adrian, vice-chancellor of Cambridge, stood, and in plummy and rounded tones "abandoned the decent obscurity of a learned language," as he put it, to address us in English instead of Latin.

More offerings followed, during which the Prince fidgeted only slightly; applauded in that slow metronomic way they do across the ocean; and surreptitiously glanced at the notes which lay hidden, I feel sure, inside the overturned cap on his lap.

When his turn came to speak, he did so in tones that were if possible even plummier and more orotund than the vice-chancellor's.

He said that the suspense of anticipating this mammoth occasion had been killing him; that we were the largest gathering he'd addressed since speaking to 40,000 buffalo farmers in India once; that he was accustomed to being regarded as an anachronism and had even come to consider it rather a grand thing to be.

He said a good man is nobler than a good technologist, and an ideal for all of us to pursue involves maintaining moral control of the technologies we engender.

He said all this simply and with a becoming air of humility.

The old bricks that surrounded us stood fast, as they have always done these hundreds of years. The hipped roofs of the ancient buildings, roofs declining like Latin nouns to the grassy floor of the Yard, sheltered as they have always sheltered.

A tear-shaped leaf, prematurely gold, fluttered down from the cathedral of branches above us, and settled in my lap, calling to mind the fate of all things to lie in the dust at last.

Harvard and the British monarchy met last week, ancient and august institutions both.

Thank God for the fresh and hopeful spirit of those in whose care they continue to prosper.

ABOUT TOWN

New counseling group opens in Winchester

Winchester Counseling Associates, led by Debra Davidson, has opened at the Mill Pond Building on Converse Place.

"The Women's Center" will be the first service offered by the private group practice, Davidson said. She also has a private counseling practice in Newton.

Although very much focused on women, the center may involve men "if they are interested in understanding a particular woman's problem from her point of view," Davidson said.

The Women's Center offers counseling for women in the context of relationships, for parenting woes, for women in the workplace or working at home, women in transitional periods, women who need help in financial awareness and women who need help dealing with health issues.

"I personally have a special interest in working with women artists," Davidson said.

She emphasized that The Women's Center does not offer a "new, trendy quick-fix" approach.

The center has three consultants, including a psychologist, a psychiatrist and another master of social work.

Davidson said people often feel nervous calling her at 729-2126 but counselors try to make callers as comfortable as possible. Evening hours are available and suggestions for special services are welcome as well.

GUEST COLUMN

Helping children cope in school's new adventures

By DEBRA DAVIDSON

As the school year begins, it is common for parents, more often mothers, to react with a mixture of feelings. If your child is going to school for the first time, this is even more common.

You feel excitement about your child's new experiences and the possibility of more time for yourself. You may also feel a bit sad; there are beginnings and endings in any new venture.

Some may worry their child is not reacting "normally" to these new beginnings. Rest assured, there is no "normal" reaction. Children feel enthusiastic, fearful, happy, sad, calm or nervous.

They are rarely consistent. Your child's reactions should not be cause for concern unless they are particularly severe for a long period after a transition.

You may wonder how to know if there is something important bothering your children. The answer is "you probably won't" unless you and your family establish a routine pattern of communication, preferably from the time they enter school.

In this way, as they grow, your children will be more apt to speak with you about difficult feelings, including conflicts around sex, drugs, peer influences, or feelings of depression.

Devising a system of routine family communication is of major importance. Concerns of both children and parents can be aired or resolved. These discussions will not eliminate arguing or griping. What they can do is promote closeness, as well as the knowledge that there is a sincere effort being made to resolve conflicts and respect each family member.

Resistance to structured family discussion is normal. As you start, it is important for rules to stay firm and consistent. Flexibility can come later.

Below are some guidelines to help you begin:

1. Set aside a time not typically stressful or active. This time will vary with individual families, but make sure it is agreed by all. Once a week is recommended.

2. Establish certain groundrules from the beginning. This is not the time to dole out punishment, discipline, make severe judgements, or pick at each other. It is a time to listen. You may even learn new and pleasureable things about one another.

3. Unless there is a severe emergency, start meetings on a light note. More serious issues can wait until you are all more relaxed.

4. Everyone should have an equal opportunity to speak. This does not mean parents give up their final say in important matters, but the family meeting is not the time to preach or exert authority.

5. Agreeing with everything said is not possible or necessary. Again, the object of a family discussion is to listen and express thoughts and feelings.

6. If you are aware that someone in your family has a concern that he or she is not comfortable verbalizing publicly, use sensitivity. Some issues are better addressed privately. For example, daughters may prefer that their mothers talk to them individually about menstruation or other body changes as they enter puberty or adolescence. In general, respecting the privacy of each family member will encourage trust and openness.

For single parents, discussions are just as important, even if they feel more difficult. You may also feel that some subjects would be easier to discuss with the other parent present, expecially if the absent parent is of the same sex as your child.

Although this is understandable, try to remember that if you are comfortable speaking about something yourself, it is likely your child will be as well. You can ask your child if he or she feels comfortable in talking to you.

This way, your child knows subject is not off-limits. Develop relationships with school counselors and other support networks as your children grow. Both single and two-parent families often overlook resources in the school and community that can be helpful.

Remember, initiating family discussions is important to do as early as possible and coincides perfectly with children entering school. In addition to having more time with each other, you will be giving your child a special sense of security, order, and love.

Letting your child know that the expression and discussion of feelings is valued is one of the greatest gifts a parent can give.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Rabbis call attack a tragedy

TO THE EDITOR:

The attack on the Neve Shalom Synagogue in Istanbul, Turkey is a terrible tragedy.

The massacre is a dastardly inhuman act. All of the victims are innocent. Worse, all were attacked in a house of prayer, a place of peace and sanctuary.

It is an insult to all world religions because the attack took place in a house of worship. This act of terrorism reveals the depths of immorality in our world as several political groups rush and fall all over themselves to claim responsibility for the massacre.

All these groups wish to be associated with this crime against the innocent. This act of murder is proof that anti-semitism is a reality, that people can be murdered for no other reason than that they are Jewish. This act of random murder is a reminder of the horrors of the Holocaust and the devastation it has brought the Jewish people.

May we all realize that terrorism is an obscenity of world wide proportions. May our government come to understand that the civilized nations of the world must demand that Saudi Arabia, Syria, South Yemen and the Soviet Union, no less than Libya, must stop supplying terroists groups with arms, training money and a safe haven.

We hope the highest levels of government join in a universal condemnation of this foul deed. We pray for the day when, Shalom, world peace, returns to our world.

Sincerely,
Rabbi Cathy Felix

Forest Crest sends thanks

TO THE EDITOR:

As you know, I've written a small volume of narrative poems entitled, "Hoofbeats from Forest Crest Farm." I wish to thank, most sincerely, all of my former students, parents and friends of Forest Crest who so kindly took the time, to write to me, telling me that they would be interested in such a little book.

I'm still hoping for many, many more post cards from all of you who were away on vacation. Surely there must be lots of you who loved Farm School who will send me a note.

This little volume is about the ponies and horses. When this is published, I then intend to write a series of short stories about some of the wonderful incidents that happened at the Farm.

Thank you so much for your support and LOVE!

Highway crew earns thank-you

TO THE EDITOR:

I wish to thank the Winchester highway department for helping me with Misty's disposal. Misty has been my companion for 14½ years.

What do you do if you're handicapped and your best friends has passed away during the night? I was told to call the highway department and I did.

The people there were nice enough to take care of Misty's remains. As a handicapped person, I found it a great help for them to take care of the problem for me.

Some neighbors in the West Chardon Road area knew Misty and would greet her when we went out for rides. I was the one who needed to be introduced.

"The sweetest thing I've ever known was loving her."

If you've lost a close animal friend, you understand my sentiments.

Sincerely,
Maureen Winn

LIBRARY NEWS

'Prints' exhibit at the library

A new exhibit, entitled "Prints-Nonprints" has been installed in the art gallery of the Winchester Public Library.

The work of Vivian Berman of Lexington, the show features 11 collagraph prints and monoprints featuring abstract views obviously modeled on "real" landscapes, yet somehow altered and stylized.

Malcolm Preston, writing for the "Boston Globe," called her collagraphs "fluid, yet dramatic, romantic, even a bit surreal."

Berman is a graduate of Cooper Union in New York and a former book jacket designer and calligrapher. Currently she is a teacher at the De Cordova Museum School in Lincoln as well as an active printmaker.

The Library of Congress, the DeCordova Museum, the First National Bank of Boston and Arthur D. Little Inc. all own Berman prints. The show will run through Oct. 10. The art gallery is open during all of the library's regular hours.

The Winchester Public Library's art gallery is open to area artists working in any medium. Artists interested in displaying their works may obtain an application form at the library. For more information, call the library at 721-7171.

The Red Sox haven't blown their chance (yet), and pennant fever is running high in the Boston area. The Winchester Public Library is celebrating the Sox's achievements with a special "Go Red Sox" display in the lobby.

Standings and newspaper articles will be posted every day, and the library staff has selected fiction and nonfiction books from the collection for the display. The reference staff will be happy to find the answers to baseball trivia questions. So, sports fans, come check out the library this fall — see what's in it for you!

ARTS

Historical Society needs things to sell

The Winchester Historical Society is seeking things to sell during the annual Chamber of Commerce flea market from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 27, at town hall.

Members of the society are asked to call Eleanor Baldwin at 729-2571 or Anne Gustin at 729-1362 to volunteer an hour to sell at the society's booth.

All kinds of items, big and small, cheap and expensive, are needed for the flea market booth. They may be dropped off at 25 Stowell Road or 4 Pine St. Arrangements for pick-up can be made by calling either number above.

Picture lending party planned

The Scholarship Benefit sponsored by the Winchester Art Association extends a cordial invitation to art lovers to help a Winchester High School graduate further his studies in the visual arts.

The Benefit is "Picture Lending." A subscription entitles one to attendance at two parties and the loan of two different pictures for a donation of $20.

The first "picture lending party" of the season will be Sunday, Sept. 28, at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Roy Johnson. As in previous years, a new collection of pictures has been gathered from regional amateur and professional artists and will be on view during the afternoon, which will also feature a demonstration by artists and a reception to meet participating artists and other patrons.

The collection typically includes art to suit all tastes, from realistic landscapes to highly abstract forms, large and small, watercolors, oils, photographs and prints. Many works are for sale and patrons can try out these reasonably priced pieces in homes or offices and know that their enjoyment of art is also contributing to a scholarship benefit.

To become a subscriber, please contact either Mrs. Frank H. Wilder at 729-6346 or Ms. Dorothy Ponti at 729-4663 in the evening.

Literature group resumes meetings

Winchester's Literature Group, which meets monthly September through June, invites members and inquirers to its first meeting of the new season at 9:30 a.m. Friday, Sept. 12.

The book to be discussed is "Siddhartha" by Herman Hesse. To attend the meeting or learn more about the group, call Kathy Sterling at 729-9253.

Other selections for the coming year include "Waterland" by Graham Swift (October); various versions of the King Arthur legend (November); two short works of modern Indian fiction (December); an impromptu reading of "Living in Exile," a play by John Lipsky (January); "Giants in the Earth" by Ole Rolvaag (February); "The Color Purple" by Alice Walker (March); and "To the Finland Station" by Edmund Wilson (April).

Choices for May and June will be made in the fall. Books are available at meetings or at Book Ends, Winchester Terrace.

Each discussion is led by a member who does some research about the author and the book, and meetings are held in members' homes. The group usually meets the first Friday morning of the month, but occasionally Thursday evenings or Sunday afternoons.

The Literature Group is one of several study groups of the Winchester College Club, founded early this century "to promote educational and cultural interests in an atmosphere of friendly sociability."

Committee members planning a new adult education series for St. Mary's and St. Eulalia's parishes include, seated from left, Anne Umscheid, the Rev. Bill Mayer and Patricia Waite. Standing are the Rev. Francis J. McGann, Donna DiFonzo, Charles Pugh and the Rev. Dennis F. Twomey.

Winchester parishes plan series on 'guilt'

The pastors of St. Eulalia and St. Mary Parishes of Winchester are pleased to announce that the Rev. Willima Mayer, OSV, has joined the staff of both parishes to offer religious education programs for adults.

The Rev. Dennis F. Twomey of St. Mary's and the Rev. Francis J. McGann of St. Eulalia's have recognized the need for religious education of adults in the Catholic Chruch of today and are addressing the issue by means of this joint venture.

Mayer is a member of the Clerics of St. Viator, a teaching order founded in France for the education of young boys. The community now has its headquarters in Illinois.

He had taught in Catholic secondary schools for over 20 years before entering the field of adult education on a full-time basis.

He has a bachelor's degree from St. Ambrose College in Davenport, Iowa, and master's degrees from Catholic University in Washington, D.C., and Manhattan College, N.Y. In addition, he has completed over 20 hours in religious studies.

As the first adult education program this year, Mayer will present "Guilt Trips: why do we take them when they are so useless?" For many Catholics, the use and abuse of guilt have given both conscience and the church a bad name, he says.

"Having moved away from a very legalistic view of morality, Catholicism is now emphasizing more freedom and more personal responsibility. The accent is being taken off the 'don'ts' which surrounded Catholics like barbed wire that would prick them with feelings of guilt and has shifted to amore positive morality," he says.

"A middle ground beckons between the complaint that the Catholic Church once made people feel too guilty and the criticism that it does not make people feel guilty enough. The task of this series will be to put guilt in its place!" he says.

The series is scheduled for five weeks starting Tuesday, Sept. 23, as follows: St. Mary's Religious Education Center, 162 Washington St., Tuesdays, 9:45-11:30 a.m. and Wednesdays, 7:30-9 p.m.; St. Eulalia, McCarthy Hall, 50 Ridge St., Tuesdays, 8:15-9:45 p.m. and Wednesdays, 9:45-11:30 a.m.

Pre-registration is requested by mail to either parish or by telephone to St. Mary's, 729-1965. There is no fee and the public is welcome.

Parent-to-Parent to open program Sept. 24

The expanded program of Parent-to-Parent in Winchester, which now includes parents of elementary school students, will get underway at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 24, when Robert Brooks will speak.

He will discuss "Reinforcing Your Adolescent's Self-Esteem, or Who Said a Roller Coaster Ride Can Be Fun?"

Begun five years ago by educators, clergy and parents, the program tries to improve family communication.

James Garvin will discuss "Self Concept: Essential Ingredient to Effective Parenting and Schooling" at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 1, at McCall Junior High. His talk is designed for parents of junior high students.

Elementary parents will be addressed at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 5, when Susan Swap discusses "Enhancing Children's Self-Esteem: Ideas for Parents of Elementary School Children" at Lincoln School.

At each large gathering, parents will be able to register for small group discussions and workshops.

All programs are free and open to all parents. The program has financial support from the EnKa Society.

ON SEPTEMBER 16, MICHAEL DUKAKIS, FRANK BELLOTTI, GEORGE KEVERIAN, AND SCOTT HARSHBARGER WILL ALL BE ENDORSING THE SAME PERSON FOR MIDDLESEX COUNTY SHERIFF...

JOHN McGONIGLE

The Governor. The state's top law enforcement official. The Speaker of the Massachusetts House. The county's District Attorney.

They've all seen the kind of job John McGonigle is doing for the people of Middlesex County.

They've seen, for instance, that John has vigorously recruited top-notch professionals from within the criminal justice system.

They've seen the expansion of the Inmate Community Work Program, which gives inmates a chance to learn a new trade, and saves communities thousands of dollars.

And they've seen how John has moved to improve the management of one of the largest correctional facilities in the state.

It is this performance that has prompted some of the top officials in Massachusetts to endorse John's candidacy.

John McGonigle has the background—18 years in the criminal justice system—and possesses the administrative skills needed to carry out the duties of the modern day Sheriff's Office.

That's why when Governor Dukakis appointed him Sheriff, he said: "I've never run across a candidacy in which the response has been so universally positive."

Sachems impress in Billerica scrimmage

Three teams appear class of the league

By JIM WOODWORTH

Almost every observer of the tough Middlesex League agrees.

"Lexington will be exceptional," Belmont coach John Papas said. "They have a trio of 260-pound linebackers, and their backfield is the fastest."

Most coaches agree that Winchester — which topped the league with a 9-1 record last season — and Woburn are the other teams to beat in the league.

"I think Stoneham will be the surprise team of the league this year," Papas said.

A quick rundown of the league, one of the toughest around, and Winchester's competition:

Burlington

First-year coach Joe Dillon inherits a team that went 2-8 and finished ninth in the league last year.

A battle exists at the quarterback spot between David Travaglini — who also plays safety — and Chris Hartling.

Dillon will utilize different offenses, as opposed to last season's I-formation.

Burlington has six starters returning from last season — seniors Travaglini, Matt Mullen (offensive guard/linebacker), Joe Heneghan (offensive/defensive tackle), Joe Magnarelli (defensive back), Jim Burnham (fullback/linebacker) and Steve Dillingham (defensive end).

The strength of this team, which has six other lettermen returning, lies in the offensive line, where Mullen is the stalwart.

Lexington

Lexington shared the Middlesex League title with Winchester last year after posting an 8-1 league record, 8-2 overall.

Bill Tighe returns to coach a team that has seven starters returning, including seniors John Brezenski (offensive/defensive tackle), Derek Coulter (offensive guard), Joseph Donovan (offensive guard), Jeff Neville (fullback), David Levangie (cornerback/defensive end) and Mike DiNapoli (safety); and junior defensive end John Flanagan.

The strength of this team, which has two other lettermen returning, is in the huge offensive line and linebacking corps.

The biggest problem could be finding a replacement for graduated tailback Bart Graf.

Melrose

Only four starters return for coach Bruce MacPherson's team, which posted a 3-6-1 record, good for sixth in the league last season.

Seniors Mark Ball, Sal Scritto and Glenn Kelly all play wide receiver and defensive back, while the only other returning starter is senior defensive tackle James O'Brien.

Only three other lettermen return for this team, which could be one of Belmont's first victims this season.

Reading

Another rookie coach, Gary Nihan, takes over a team that finished third with a 7-2-1 record last season.

Senior quarterback Dave Johnson is one of six returning starters. Other returning offensive starters include senior guard Peter Ehl and senior tight end/safety Carl McFadden.

Returning starters on defense include senior defensive end Craig Sorbello, senior linebacker Paul Crispo and junior linebacker Jeff Dorandi.

Six other lettermen are returning.

Reading, which will depend heavily on the two returning linebackers to back up an inexperienced defensive line, is expected to take a dip this season.

Stoneham

More than one coach thinks this will be the surprise team of the league this season, despite the fact it posted a 3-7, eighth-place finish last year.

The offense boasts seven returning senior starters, including center/linebacker Tony Salmartini, running back Ed Hickey, tailback/defensive back Tom MacNeill, fullback/defensive back David Pignone, tight end/defensive end Doug Clarke, offensive/defensive tackle Joe Gerardi and guard Ron Ciulla.

Other returning starters include senior nose guard/offensive tackle Tom Boyle and junior defensive back Joe Vitiello, while four other lettermen are also returning.

If anything hurts coach Tom Kasprzak's squad, it will be a lack of depth to back up the experienced two-way starters.

Wakefield

Only five starters return for coach Bob Connors this season, including two seniors on offense and three juniors on defense.

Offensive guard Curt Fieldhouse and tailback/safety Tito Raymond return on offense, while safeties Paul Gonella and Steve Grasso and tackle Anthony Lisitano return on defense.

Wakefield, which finished fourth in the league with a 6-4 record last season, only has two other lettermen returning.

Except for Raymond, there is just too much inexperience for this team to go anywhere.

Run by opponents in pre-season game

By DAVID DEMARCO

The Winchester High School Sachems got on track for the football season this week as they thoroughly dominated Billerica High in a Saturday morning scrimmage.

Winchester put in a total of six touchdowns while Billerica did not reach the goal line even once.

The offense had been a question mark for Winchester during the early pre-season but all doubts were erased Saturday. The Sachems ran the option very well and seemed to have their timing ready for the start of the regular season.

Winchester halfbacks blocked extremely well, allowing the outside running game to open up.

In a departure from previous years, the passing game will be an important weapon in the Sachems' 1986 attack.

Although he overthrew a couple of passes early Saturday, quarterback John Demarco later made three nice completions to tight end Mark Shaw and split end Vinnie Benincasa. One completion was good for a Sachem touchdown.

Darrin Cromwell and Mike Murray each ran the ball well Saturday. Cromwell is starting to use more cutbacks in his running style and has seen his yards-per-carry numbers increase.

On defense, Winchester proved simply too much for the smaller Billerica squad. Defensive tackle Mike Vozzella had an excellent day, getting one sack of the Billerica quarterback and numerous tackles to his credit.

Noseguard Scotty Cullen was also a force in the middle as Billerica could find no weakness in the Sachem defense. Reputedly a passing team, Billerica's offense was shut down by the Sachem secondary, which kept receivers covered from the start.

With one pre-season game left, the Sachem line-up is beginning to take shape. On offense, David Carter and Vozzella will play tackle while Dave Ford and Cullen will occupy guard positions.

Moose Morton will snap the ball.

Demarco will be the starting quarterback with Artie Gordon at fullback. Halfback positions will be shared by Cromwell, Murray and Danny Costello.

Regular tight end John Matheson is currently out with a severe hip-pointer, so regular split end Shaw will fill in for Matheson.

Split end duties will be shared by Benincasa and Rhet Moody when Moody recovers from a bad ankle sprain.

On defense, the ends will be Gordon and George Nowell. J.R. Morton and "Hoss" Vozzella will play tackle with Cullen at noseguard.

Linebackers will be Richie Burke and junior Greg Winn.

In the secondary, the Sachems will have Cromwell and Murray at the corners with Benincasa and Shaw at safety.

Winchester will participate in the Middlesex League jamboreee tomorrow at Waltham, squaring off against Arlington High at 8:30 p.m.

Saturday the Sachems will again scrimmage Arlington at Winchester, kicking off at 10 a.m.

PREVIEW: Arlington is coming off a 4-5-1 season with five returning starters but the coach has a lot of varsity experience with which to work. Look for offensive tackle Mike Tighe (6-2, 215 pounds) to be a force to reckon with.

Arlington runs a wing-T offense, something the Sachems won't see during the regular season.

Watertown

Papas' old team finished in a tie for fifth last season with a 5-5 mark after posting a 1-4 record in the first half.

But graduation took its toll on coach John Barbati's squad, which will have a whole new look in the offensive backfield.

Returning starters on offense include senior center Kevin Gildea, senior guard Kevin Carlson and junior tackle Derek Tucker.

On defense, junior safety Mike King and five seniors return, including defensive end Will Barry, linebackers Sandy Campbell and Bob Persico, nose guard Leo Cutone and tackle Tom MacNeil.

This team, which has three other lettermen returning, is strong defensively, but it could be a long season for the offense.

Winchester

Seven returning starters and 22 other returning lettermen should keep Winchester, 9-1 last season, in the thick of things this year.

Coach Manny Marshall has five offensive and two defensive starters returning. All are seniors.

On offense, offensive/defensive tackle Michael Vozzella, running back/cornerback Darin Cromwell, center/nose guard J.R. Morton, tackle David Carter and tight end John Mathson all return for one final fling, while linebacker Richard Burke and safety Mark Shaw return on defense.

Winchester lost 15 players to graduation, but there is nothing to indicate this team will fall from grace this year.

Youth hockey registration set Sept. 17

The Winchester Youth Hockey Association will conduct a special registration time Wednesday, Sept. 17, at the O'Brien Ice Skating Rink on Locust Street in Woburn.

Registration will coincide with tryouts for mite, squirt, peewee and bantam programs. Registrations will be accepted at the rink from 4:45 to 9 p.m.

Early registrations are still being accepted. Applications are available at the Winchester recreation department office in McCall Junior High School. There is a fee of $25, payable at registration.

All boys and girls between three and 17 years old are eligible. Skating clinics are also provided for all ages.

Winchester has many on Tufts teams

Winchester will be well-represented on Tufts University teams this fall.

Sophomore Robert Feldman is a member of the Jumbos' cross country team. He may have a tough time cracking the regular line-up, however, because Tufts has 10 lettermen back and only one lost to graduation. The Jumbos were 5-5 in men's cross country last fall.

Junior Diane Intavaia is back with the Tufts women's tennis team to try for her second New England singles crown. Tufts was 9-3 last year and won the New England Division III title while last year's junior varsity was unbeaten.

Sarah Richardson, a junior forward on the women's soccer team, had five goals and four assists last season as the Jumbos rolled to an 11-2-3 season. She will return to the front line on a team with 15 returning letter winners and only four lettermen lost to graduation.

Junior tennis tournament crowns youthful champions

The annual Jr. Town Tennis Tournament ended last week after four days of competition. It was a week of good tennis, lots of fun, and typically strange weather. There were 80 entries for the eight events in 15-and-under and 12-and-under boys and girls competition.

In the 15-and-under boys' singles final, Mike McGeehan upset the steady, hard stroking of John Murray to win 6-3, 6-1. McGeehan had squeaked out a 7-5, 4-6, 7-6 win over Vandy French in the semifinals while Murray played excellent tennis to beat Chris Gilpatrick.

The two singles finalists, McGeehan and Murray, teamed up for doubles and had no trouble with French and David Ducharme, winning the finals 6-0, 6-1. They had beaten Michael Houllahan and Albie Keenan in the semis and French-Ducharme had bested Brandon Macneill and Mark Schwitters to advance.

The girls' draw was not as large as the boys' in all four events, but they had as much enthusiasm and talent, plus probably more laughs. In the 15-and-under championship match, underdog Katie Fuller stayed serious and came back to upset top seed Jenny Campbell 1-6, 7-6, 6-2.

Campbell was the winner over her sister Lisa in a tough semifinal, while Fuller triumphed over Margaret Cunningham. Fuller also had an exciting match in the quarters, as she won two tie-breakers (7-6, 7-6) over Megan Mullen.

In the 15-and-under girls' doubles, Jennifer Bush and Sara Ciotti combined to win the trophy. They had many good points and good times as they defeated Margaret Cunningham and Megan Mullen 6-4, 6-3.

The boys' 12-and-under singles had the most entries at 19, and out of this pack emerged top seed Matt Fuller and second seed Peter French. Fuller played excellent tennis all through the tournament and beat a scrappy French to win the trophy 6-3, 7-5. Fuller had to beat his partner Arlan Fuller to advance and French got by Billy Cunningham.

In the younger boys' doubles final, the two Fullers (no relation) played a nice match to win 4-6, 6-1, 6-1 over Cunningham and David Murphy. Fuller and Fuller had beaten Chris Senna and David Fiorentino in the semis, while Cunningham-Murphy squeezed past Peter French and Mike Szczepanski.

The girls' 12-and-under singles saw Carrie Tozza win a close one over Leanne Intravaia 7-5, 6-4. In the semifinals, Tozza had beaten Jennifer McCarthy and Intravaia had bested Catherine Doherty.

Tozza and Intravaia then became partners for doubles and overpowered their opponents, taking the championship 6-1, 6-1 from Elizabeth Kelley and Jennifer McCarthy.

Tournament director Leslie French expressed thanks to the Winchester recreation department for providing trophies for all finalists, to the Winchester Tennis Association for supplying the new balls, and to Whit Gray, the players, and parents for support and help in making the tournament a big success.

100 players on court for tennis tourney

A threat of rain nearly sent the Winchester Tennis Association's 57th annual town tennis tournament scrambling indoors Saturday as more than 100 players began competition.

Mother Nature, Norman and his crew all cooperated to have the Packer Courts in excellent condition for the 8 a.m. opening matches.

In men's singles, all top seeds advanced easily to the semifinals. Jake Diamond and Scott Campbell surprised the field with their steady baseline game but eventually succumbed to the experience and all-around tactics of Bob Horne Jr. and Neil Hurley, respectively, in the quarterfinals.

Women's singles saw the longest match in recent WTA history as Kathy Hurley eked out a third-set tiebreaker victory over Hilary Turkewitz in four hours under a hot midday sun.

There were no upsets in the senior men's singles division as the seeded players, Ron Salter, Will Aldrich, Bob Horne Sr. and Jack Corf, progressed. Others advancing to the quarterfinals were Brooke Green, Jim Maxwell, Joe Genova and Dick Doherty.

In mixed doubles, the unseeded team of Mary Whelan and Andy Oxenhorn moved solidly into the semifinals with three other seeded teams.

A close women's doubles match saw Sally Regan and Sue Taylor narrowly defeat Diana Khabbaz and Jane Spenser 7-6, 7-5.

Twenty-four teams started the men's doubles event and again all seeded teams moved into the quarterfinal round with two-set victories.

Unseeded Leo Laurentano and Phil Coonley came back after losing a tie-breaker in the first set to knock out Jim Phillips and Bob Thomas to gain a spot in the quarterfinals.

Remaining quarterfinals and all semifinal matches will be played Saturday, Sept. 13, at the Packer Courts.

Sunday, Sept. 14, action will start at 9 a.m. The tournament's finale should prove exciting as one event's final match follows the next throughout the day. Fans are welcome.

Sachems roll through two preseason contests

By STEVE GOUDSOUZIAN

The Winchester Sachems faced two tough soccer opponents to round out their preseason. The first game was played in East Boston as the Sachems encountered some of the most horrible field conditions in recent memory.

The game was played on a slightly widened football field, which was sloping, rocky, and mostly just dirt with a few clumps of weedy grass.

The Sachems showed their adaptability by totally dominating the game. The Sachems' rock-solid defense allowed only two or three scoring threats the whole game. The Sachems smothered any offense East Boston tried to muster.

The halfback line, particularly Paul Erbafina, Chris Verhaegen and Robbie Kean, with fullback Kent McCord, controlled the flow of the game skillfully and effectively, dribbling through the East Boston defense, passing with the forwards, pouncing on any loose balls and playing tough defense.

The Sachems only encountered one major problem; they could not put the ball in the net. Countless times shots were picked off by the goalie or blocked in front of the net. Crosses sailed across the goal mouth untouched. Scrambles in front of the net produced many opportunities but no goals.

The first half ended 0-0.

In the sencond half, much frustration continued. The Sachems became nervous as the thought of not winning the scrimmage entered their minds.

A cross from the right wing caused a mad scramble in front of the net. As East Boston attempted to clear the ball up the left side, it was cut off by halfback Erbafina. Erbafina controlled the ball and dribbled past an opposing player. From the outside, he unleashed a cannon of a shot that only slowed down after it flew past the goalie and hit the back of the net.

The Sachems did not let up. Junior halfback Kean placed an outside shot that sailed over the goalie's head and into the goal. The Sachems had notched their second preseason victory.

The following morning, the Sachems played away against Medford. The game had been build up as a challenge but the Sachems were ready. Medford started with a few offensive breaks but was stopped by the Sachems' team concept of defense.

This year the Sachems seem more versatile as the whole team aggressively plays defense and then attacks together as a team, with less individual play.

One important example of this versatility was McCord. Coach Gene Bouley felt McCord, who normally plays stopper, the offensive fullback in the Sachems' diamond defense, could also play forward.

Midway through the first half Bouley moved him to center forward. McCord responded with two goals. The first came when Verhaegen took a low left-footed shot. Medford's goalie knocked the shot down but could not control the ball. McCord headed the bouncing ball into the net.

The second goal was scored when right wing Jude Cappachetti crossed the ball and halfback Paul Cappadonna took a shot. The ball hit the crossbar and bounced in front of the goal. McCord volleyed the ball through Medford's defense and past their goalie for his second goal.

The Sachems continued to dominate as Medford's only serious offensive threat in the whole game came late in the second half when an outside shot bounced off the post and out of play.

The Sachems closed their preseason with two solid 2-0 performances. They were to play Wakefield in the season opener Tuesday. Winchester will host Melrose at 3:30 p.m. Friday at Skillings Field and visit Watertown at the same time Tuesday, Sept. 16.

Woburn

Rookie coach Ron Nelson's team is expected to ride five returning offensive starters, four returning defensive starters and seven other lettermen into the thick of the Middlesex League race this season.

Woburn finished in a tie for fifth with Watertown with a 5-5 record last year.

Senior quarterback Ed Doherty, junior fullback Jeff Burke, guard/tackle Martin Popoloski, offensive/defensive tackle Tom Qualey and center Kevin Spolidoro are the returning offensive starters, while senior linebacker Derek Carbone, senior defensive back Dan Coccoluto, senior nose guard Micheal Gothro and junior safety Mike Mulrenan return to start on defense.

Driscolls to lead Curry soccer team

Driscolls from Winchester will be at both ends of the field for the Curry College men's soccer team this fall.

Senior Stephen Driscoll will return to the goal. Last year, Driscoll made his first appearance in the ultimate defensive position and compiled an impressive 9-1-1 record. He missed seven games with a sprained ankle.

Junior Mike Driscoll will return to his forward position, from which he scored seven goals and notched six assists last fall for the Milton school.

The Colonels had a 13-5-1 record, their best ever, in 1985 and hope to improve again in 1986.

WHS field hockey team to try new defense this fall

By DAVID DEMARCO

Coming off a difficult season, Winchester field hockey coach Mary Brown is going to implement a few new ideas to improve the team's defense, a sore point for the Sachemettes last fall.

"We're going to try a new format with four fourwards, two midfielders, three backs and one sweeper," coach Brown says.

A very young team will be on the field this fall to work with the new system. Seven of the players expected to see a lot of varsity action are freshmen.

Brown said scoring goals will be no problem for her team. "Our offense is our strong point. But we've got to work on defense," she says.

Co-captains are returning starters Michelle Sweeney and Naheed Khatib.

Others expected to contribute are Retike Bowery, Tammy Berman and the triplets: Colleen, Katie and Eileen O'Connor.

Lyorn Bramu and Kathy Mawn should also be on the field a lot, as will Ulrike Botz, Terese Krajewski and Leslie Pedulla.

Winchester was to open the season Wednesday against Wakefield. The Sachemettes will host Melrose at 3:30 p.m. tomorrow at Skillings Field in Winchester.

'Health' road race slated

Choate-Symmes Health Services' sixth annual road race, "Health Is No. 1," will take place Sunday, Sept. 28.

The five-mile event will start at Tower Park on Massachusetts Avenue in Lexington at noon. Runners will proceed onto Maple Street and Lowell Street, across the Arlington town line near the Arlington Reservoir and make a loop at Arlington Heights back onto Massachusetts Avenue for the finish back at Tower Park.

T-shirts will be given to all entrants, and medals will be presented to the first three male and female finishers in all 11 age categories: 18 and under, 19-24, 25-29, 30-34, 40-45, 45-49, 50-54, 55-59, 60-64, and 65 and over. Merchandise prizes will be awarded to the top 20 finishers overall, and additional merchandise prizes will be awarded by random drawing.

The race will be timed according to a digital clock, and computerized results will be available immediately afterwards.

Visible mile markers and water stations at the two and four-mile marks will be provided, as will refreshments after the race, compliments of the Choate-Symmes Food Service Department.

Entry fee is $5 if posted by Sept. 23 and $7 after that date. Registrations will also be accepted on race day, beginning at 10:30 a.m.

Entry blanks are available by contacting Frank Niro, Choate Hospital, 21 Warren Ave., Woburn, 933-6700, ext. 182.

Ward's Has A Gift For Any Occasion

"A satisifed customer comes back," explains Don Ward, owner and proprietor of Ward's Gift Shop in Medford since just after World War II.
And, for the past 43 years, Wards's reputation for good service, reasonable prices, and standing behind his merchandise has kept them coming back.
Many of Ward's longtime customers have moved away but they still call to have china, crystal, or figurines shipped to as far away as Florida or California. He will ship to any part of the U.S.
Located at 24 High st. in Medford Square, Ward's carries one of the largest selections of Waterford crystal in the Boston area, along with 300 patterns of china including such well-known names as Royal Doulton, Minton, Pickard, Wedgewood, and Noritake.
Ward's also features a wide selection of limited edition plates, figurines, and collector's dolls. Among the 15,000-20,000 items in the store is one of the New England area's largest selection of figurines including such names as Lladro, Hummel, Royal Doulton, Anri, Kaiser, Sebastian, Francis Hook, and Precious Moments.
Ward's has an appropriate gift for any occasion and ready to assist customers in finding that "something special" is Dorothy, the shop's manager for the past 27 years.
Dorothy, and all the staff at Ward's strive to maintain "a personal touch atmosphere" which has been one of the trademarks of Ward's since it opened its doors. Dorothy and the crew at Ward's are on a first-name basis with most of their customers.
Although he has seen Medford Square change "like all squares change over the years," Ward and his employees have earned and maintained a reputation for personal service, quality, and low prices. "In fact," says Ward, "Word of mouth is our best selling point."
Visit Ward's the next time you need that special gift. Like so many, you will keep coming back.
Ward's is open Monday through Saturday, 9 to 5:30, Thursdays, 9 to 8:30.

A day of political activity began with a rally for tax reform on the steps of the Capitol, where Senators Bob Packwood (R-Ore.) and Bill Bradley (D-N.J.) spoke. Exactly a week later, the Senate passed a major tax reform bill in a 97-3 vote.

What To Do

Story by Diane Broncaccio

Skygardening: planting for birds and butterflies

Nature doesn't stop with trees and flowers, and neither should a garden.

That was the message conveyed at the first sky-gardening symposium at Arnold Arboretum in Jamaica Plain.

Sky-Gardening: Birds, Butterflies And The Horticultural Habitat examined the yard and garden as a nurturing environment for other life forms.

The popularity of gardening to attract butterflies, birds and other wildlife has been increasing in recent years, although "butterfly gardens" have been popular in England for ages.

Winston Churchill, one of the best known butterfly gardeners, often stocked his garden with exotic specimens.

Birds and butterflies are beneficial for the seeding and pollination of plants and flowers, plus add another dimension of grace and beauty.

"Before you take your spade and your pruning tools into the garden," Michael Dathe, horticultural landscapist, told symposium participants, "there are two assessments you should make in your landscape.

"One is land-assessment — where are the dry spots, the hot spots, the wet spots, the sunny spots, the windburned spots in the summertime — observations that you can make.

"You have to go with what you have," Dathe said. "Don't try to fight with nature, because if you fight with nature, you lose.

"The second, plant assessment," Dathe said, "is a little more difficult. You may need some help in identifying your plant material because it is in this assessment that you're going to make some choices as to what to keep in your landscape, what's out there in your space that has merit, what is overgrown and basically worthless to you, and what you are going to bring in."

Noting that birds and butterflies require food, water, cover — especially for winter protection — and a place for their young, Dathe recommended planning four tiers to the landscape.

The four tiers include grass or meadowland, low shrubs, small, ornamental trees and large trees, such as oaks, maples and hickories.

"It's an integrated landscape," he said. "In this interface is where you're going to get the most wildlife activity."

When landscaping for nature, Dathe strongly advises against pruning trees and shrubs "into gumdrops.

"When I hear that word 'cutting,' alarm bells start going off in my head," Dathe said.

"If you have dead wood and limbs that are hazardous to people, cars, your roof or power lines, then prune and clean the dead wood out. But the farther away from the house, I would start pruning less. That dead wood," Dathe explained, "is going to provide insects for a lot of birdlife."

While Dathe likes a small patch of healthy lawn around the house, he prefers to cultivate a meadow, which will provide flowers for the butterlies and seed-feeding plants for ground-feeding and ground-nesting birds.

Meadows, he explained, only need to be mowed every fall to keep woody plants out of the area.

"What happens if the total area of your house and yard is only 7000 feet?

"If you have such a small area, you're going to have to treat your whole block or two- or three-block area as a habitat or sanctuary.

"If you made a committment to be there 10 or 20 years, you can pull it off.

"It's going to take a lot of time, but someone within the block is going to have large trees, someone is going to have evergreen material for nesting and cover.

"Somewhere, maybe, there's a pond or golf course or something that you can incorporate into a whole habitat, he said.

"That's just about the only alternative you have in the city. Whatever you do," he urged, go out and plant something.

Something will start, something will surprise you, something will disappoint you, but something is going to happen, he said.

"Flowers that fly" is the way poet Robert Frost once described the butterfly, second only to the bee as a pollenator of flowers.

"About 100 species of butterflies, including some transients, pass through this area," said David Winter, an expert on moths and butterlies and co-author of the book, Butterflies And Moths, with his wife, Jo Brewer.

Moths should also be considered when cultivating the garden habitat.

"Moths get a bad press," said Winter. He noted nearly 12,000 species of moths versus a mere 600 species of butterflies in the U.S.

The "bad guy" moths, he said, are tent caterpillars, which feed on cherry and apple trees, and gypsy moths, which feed on every tree except the black locust.

"In July of 1981, just after the gypsy moth outbreak," said Winter, "the population of the moths and butterflies around this part of New England went down to about 20 percent of the usual levels, because they mature later in the season. It still hasn't recovered."

"There's no natural way to prevent gypsy moths, because their larvae attaches itself to a silk which blows in the wind and gets tangled up in the tree branches. They hatch just as the tree is budding and eat the buds before others can get to it."

Cuckoos, he added, are the only birds around who can digest the fuzzy gypsy catepillars and expell the skin. "But there aren't enough cuckoos to go around," he said.

Trees and shrubs that attract butterflies and moths, noted Arnold Arboretum naturalist and nature photographer Al Bussewitz, often attract birds at other times.

To attract hummingbirds to the yard or garden, Bussewitz recomends tulip trees, silk trees, trumpet creepers, buttonbush, autumn olive, columbine and honeysuckle. "The sight of a hummingbird feeding on a honeysuckle makes the whole summer," he said.

Crabtrees and other fruit-bearing trees are important food sources for songbirds, Bussewitz said, and should be planned so that blooming and seeding periods are staggered and extended through most of the year.

Many wintering birds, he said, take refuge in the vibernum and in the sheltering branches of pine, spruce, hemlock and cedars. Oak

Seedling programs

Looking for shade trees to provide food, shelter and cover for birds and butterflies in your yard?

The National Arbor Day Foundation is giving 10 free shade trees to people who join the nonprofit foundation during the month of September.

A pin oak, red maple, weeping willow, red oak, green ash, thornless honeylocust, silver maple, tuliptree, European mountainash and a sugar maple will be given as part of the organization's campaign to encourage tree planting.

These trees were selected because They provide beautiful fall colors, flowers and berries in addition to cooling summer shade, according to John Rosenow, the foundation's executive director.

The foundation will give the 10 free trees to members who contribute $10 during September.

The six to 12-inch trees will be shipped this fall between Oct. 15 and Dec. 10, when conditions are right for planting. They will be sent with enclosed planting instructions, and are guaranteed to grow or they will be replaced free by the foundation.

To become a member of the foundation and to receive the free trees, a $10 membership contribution should be sent to Ten Shade Trees, National Arbor Day Foundation, 100 Arbor Ave., Nebraska City, Neb., 68410, by Sept. 30, 1986.

For those who would rather plant in the spring, the Middlesex Conservation District offers a popular seedlings program.

While the seedlings program is the main fundraiser for the department, seedlings are offered at prices well below those charged by conventional nurseries.

Last year, the MCD sold bundles of 25 Scotch pine for $10, 25 Canadian hemlocks for $13 and bundles of deciduous trees, in groups of five, for $5.

"We distributed over 120,000 seedlings last year — from evergreens to deciduous trees, which included flowering dogwoods, white birch, red oak and chestnut trees," said Bernice Kaiser, district administrator.

"Our seedlings are also of a very large size," she added. "You can't get this size of a seedling through a nursery because there's no profit in growing them big."

Along with tree seedlings, the MCD also distributes wildlife shrubs for hedges at $12 for a bundle of 25. Under the district's newly-formed ground cover program, wildflowers and other plants recommended for habitat gardening have been made available.

The department sends out brochures and order forms every January. The order forms must be filled out and returned with advance payment by March 30, 1987. Participants will receive confirmation of their orders, which can be picked up at the 4H Fairgrounds in late April.

Interested? Call the MCD at (617) 263-2291 and ask to be placed on the mailing list.

What To Do

trees, the number one food tree for all wildlife, also provides food for birds when preferred sources are not available in the dead of winter.

Other important food sources for birds, according to Bussewitz, include barberries, box elder maple, winterberry, which he says is "a mockingbird's MacDonald's," huckleberry, buckthorn and even sumacs, especially in late fall and early winter.

Boston ivy, climbing the brick walls of many buildings, can also provide food if that plant is at least 10 to 20 years old.

For those gardeners who would rather save the cherrys or apples for human consumption, Bussewitz recommends planting mulberry trees.

"These will attract the birds and keep them away from the more choice fruits," he said.

The Arnold Arboretum can provide a great deal more information about sky-gardening and other aspects of gardening. The public is welcome to call the Arboretum hotline for answers to specific questions Monday and Tuesday, from 1 to 3 p.m. The number is 524-1718.

To attract butterflies, feed the caterpillars

The main ingredients for feeding butterflies and their larvae are flowers (for nectar) and edible leaves for the caterpillars.

Butterflies are generally attracted to flowers with bright colors, with large petals for perching, that are not too deep. Plants which work well in these parts include sweet william, bergamot, hollyhock, alyssum, daisies, mums, marigolds, phlox and zinnia. The blossoms on the fruit trees which attract birds later in the season will please butterflies in the early spring.

In order to attract butterlies, caterpillars must be provided for as well. Caterpillars require very specific kinds of food plants. They will feed on the buds, stems and foliage of certain weeds, wildflowers, trees and shrubs. Planting extra parsley in the garden, for instance, will provide food for the dramatic black swallowtails.

What else attracts butterlies?

Water--especially a damp, puddled area or shallow marsh that includes some protection from the wind. Some butterflies, like the mourning cloak, like crevices, logs and even unused drainpipes to winter in.

What kinds of butterflies flourish in New England?

An early spring visitor is the delicate spring azure, a tiny blue butterfly that feeds on nectar from the flowering dogwood. The larvae prefers dogwood, meadowsweet, sumac, viburnum, blueberry and sumac.

Food for butterflies

What do butterflies need? First, they need to lay their eggs on foliage which the hatched larvae can eat. Second, as adult butterflies, they need flowers for nectar.

Good food plants for butterflies include budding dogwoods, spicebush, sassafras, buttonbush, meadowsweet, highbush blueberries and the leaves of fruit trees.

Parsley, carrot tops and lilacs are also butterfly favorites, particularly with the elegant black swallowtail

The American painted lady is a medium-sized butterfly with orange and black spots prominent on the hind wings. Adults especially like thistle nectar, while caterpillars go for everlastings, burdock, hollyhock and wormwood.

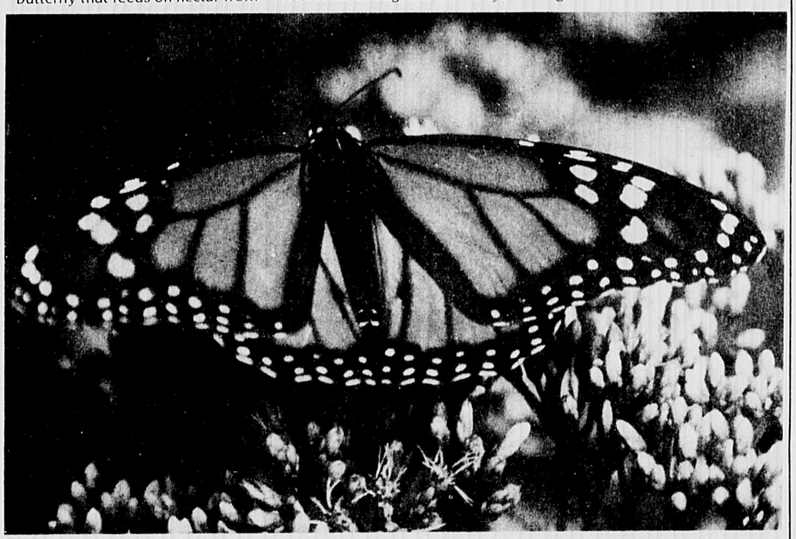
Monarchs are among the most common butterflies in the area. This large, orange butterfly with black markings on the wings, flourishes throughout its life cycle on milkweed.

The viceroys "imitate" the markings of the poisonous monarch and avoid getting eaten by wary birds. They thrive on flowers of all kinds. The larvae will eat willow, poplar, aspen as well as fruit tree leaves from plum, cherry and apple trees.

A vivid guest is the tiger swallowtail, a yellow and black striped butterfly with ornately scalloped hind wings. Swallowtail larvae prefer wild cherry, tulip trees birch, aspen, ash and basswood.

Other common butterflies are the sulphurs — spry, little yellow creatures which thrive on clover. Red admirals, banded purples and red-spotted purples, mourning cloaks, question marks, black and spicebush swallowtails, and red admirals are among the 100 species visiting here April through August.

Moths are nocturnal and, as catepillars, they weave cocoons instead of chrysalis. They are more common than butterflies, and many varieties are part of the diet of birds. Moths that are especially beautiful include the velvety silk moths, the sphinx moths, which look like flying white flowers at night, and the paw paw sphinx, which eats winterberry and holly in these regions.



Songbirds need shelter, perches, and food

Birds need cover and nesting areas as well as food. Brush piles, briar tangles and small evergreens make good cover.

Birds also like what is known as "edge" — the place where two habitats meet. Edge can be the boundary between grass and shrubs, lawn and flowerbed, or field and woods.

While different species are naturally drawn to different habitats, a yard with limited space or vegetation can always attract more birds with bird feeders. Also, since birds love water, a shallow pool, pond or birdbath is also likely to draw more of them to the yard.

In order to attract hummingbirds, naturalist Al Busewitz recomends planting tulip trees, silk trees, trumpet creepers, buttonbush, autumn olive, shrubby honeysuckles, bee balm or columbines. These, he says, are sure-fire magnets for hummingbirds. Tall plants that hummingbirds can easily reach by hovering are better than those that grow close to the ground. Hummingbirds need an open area around the plants for visibility, such as a nearby perching site, a telephone wire or shrub.

Hummingbirds, he notes, have long memories, so perennials may better assure their return. Also, the perennials tend to require less attention from the gardener. Annuals, such as scarlet savia, scarlet morning glories, impatiens, petunia, and gladiolus, will also attract the birds' annual return if they are planted in the same place each year.

Well-maintained feeders can augment the natural nectar supply in the yard and bring the birds closer to the house.

Robins, grosbeaks, cedar waxwings, orioles, catbirds, purple finches, bluebirds, myrtle warblers, tree swallows and brown thrashers are among the area birds attracted to the berries of the following trees:

New shows ignite star-studded theatre season

New season begins with a splash

The new theatre season which runs officially from September to June, opened officially in the Hub with the splashy new musical, Singin' In The Rain, at the Shubert Theatre, through Sept. 20.

While perennial favorites Sheer Madness and Little Shop Of Horrors at the Charles Playhouse I and II, and Forbidden Broadway 1986 at the Terrace Room of the Park Plaza Hotel continue to roll merrily along, two shows have been announced for the Colonial Theatre—the triple Tony winner I'm Not Rappaport, starring Judd Hirsch (Best Actor) and Cleavon Little, Nov. 28 through Dec. 14, and the Stratford Festival's brilliant production of the Gilbert and Sullivan favorite, The Mikado, Dec. 16 through Jan. 4.

Waiting in the wings, scheduled but with dates and theatres unannounced, are: a new mystery steeped in magic by John Pielmeier, Sleight of Hand; The Life and Adventures of Nicholas Nickleby, based on the Dickens novel as staged by the Royal Shakespeare Company; Biloxi blues, Neil Simon's latest Broadway comedy hit; and the return engagements of three multi-award winning musicals, the dazzling La Cage aux Folles, with music by Jerry Herman; Cats, the T.S. Eliot/Andrew Lloyd Webber feline spectacular; and Dreamgirls, Micheal Bennett's Tony Award winning showbiz musical.

Wang Center hosts major music and dance stars

Four major American and foreign dance companies are offered in a subscription series at The Wang Center for the Performing Arts. The participating companies include the Moiseyev Dance Company from Moscow (Sept. 18 through 21); the Dance Theatre Of Harlem (Nov. 21 through 23); the Bejart Ballet of the Twentieth Century (Jan. 23 through 25); and the Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater (April 21 through 26).

The Moiseyev Dance Company, which has been absent from the U.S. dance scene since 1974, visits Boston following a two-week run at N.Y.'s Metropolitan Opera House, where the company began an extensive coast-to-coast tour Sept. 2.

The tour, which will continue through Thanksgiving, is the first major Soviet dance tour in the U.S. under the new cultural agreement between this country and the Soviet Union.

The Moiseyev Dance Company and its legendary founder, 81-year-old Igor Moiseyev, have been credited with single-handedly establishing, both in the Soviet Union and abroad, a new genre of theatrical folk dancing. The company's repertory includes over 250 dances drawn from nationalities within the U.S.S.R. and from other countries.

The troupe will perform four times during its Boston run: at 8 p.m. Thursday, Friday and Saturday, and at 3 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 18 through 21.

The Dance Theatre of Harlem is acclaimed as one of the five major ballet companies in the U.S., accepted both here and abroad as one of our cultural treasures.

Founded in 1969 by Arthur Mitchell, former principal dancer of the New York City Ballet, as his personal commitment to the people of Harlem, this phenomenally successful company performs classical pieces and theatrical works, as well as ethnic and modern dance.

Their engagement includes performances at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday and at 3 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 21 through 23.

The Bejart Ballet of the Twentieth Century visits the Hub for the second time Jan. 23 through 25, with performances at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, and at 3 p.m. Sunday. The Brussels-based company, directed by choreographer Maurice Bejart, is noted for the power of its male and the magnificence of its female dancers.

The Alvin Ailey American Dance Theater has long been a favorite with Boston audiences. It has been persented in Boston 17 times by the Wang Celebrity Series, and its audiences continue to grow with each visit.

The company performs an exuberant blend of classical, modern, gospel, New Wave and razzle-dazzle Broadway show dance, in a seven-performance engagement which begins at 8 p.m. Tuesday, April 21 and concludes at 2 p.m. Sunday, April 26.

The Wang Celebrity Series also features another banner season of music. From as nearby as the Boston suburbs and from such faraway places as India, celebrated artists from the world over will be playing. In all, 42 events will take place in Symphony Hall, Jordan Hall, the Berklee Performance Center and The Wang Center.

The world-renowned Berlin Philharmonic Orchestra, under the baton of the charismatic Herbert Von Karajan, returns to the Hub Oct. 15, for the first performance since 1974.

The Cleveland Orchestra, a regular visitor in the Celebrity Series, returns Feb. 9 after a season's absence with its new music director Christoph Von Dohnanyi on the podium, in a program which includes Mahler's Sixth Symphony.

The third visiting orchestra is the Saint Louis Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Leonard Slatkin, who has led America's second oldest orchestra to greatness. It plays May 3.

A number of artists and attractions will be appearing for the first time. They include pianist Krystian Zimerman, Oct. 17, who received rave notices following his debut with the Boston Symphony last season; Jose Feghali, Dec. 7, first-prize winner of the Van Cliburn International Piano Competition; Katia and Marielle Labeque, March 27, the beautiful and gifted duo-painists who will make their recital debut with a program that includes Bartok's Sonata for Two Pianos and Percussion; two of the most popular of contemporary composers, Philipp Glass, Nov. 15, and Steve Reich, April 24, with their own ensembles; sensational trumpeter Wynton Marsalis, March 15, with the Eastman Wind Ensemble; the Festival of India, which opens the season Spet. 28; and two delightful "street musicians," the Cambridge Buskers Dec. 6.

Woody Herman and His Orchestra debut May 2 with celebrated clarinetist Richard Stoltzman. Also new to the Series is The English Concert under its director Trevor Pinnock, Nov. 14, and the combination of baroque cellist Anner Bylsma and Malcolm Bilson, the noted master of the fortepiano, Oct. 25.

Piano recitals have traditionally been among the most popular events in the Celebrity Series. In addition to Zimerman, Feghali, and the Labeque sisters, the legendary pianist Rudolf Serkin, April 5, Boston's own Russell Sherman, Feb. 1, and keyboard virtuosi Maurizio Pollini, March 22, and Vladimir Ashkenazy, May 1, have been booked.

The chamber music catagory includes a quartet of string quartets: the Juillard plays three concerts, Nov. 9, Jan. 18 and March 1; the Tokyo plays Oct. 19; the Guarneri performs April 24 and, from England, the Amadeus is in town March 13.

Filipino pianist and rising star, Cecile Licad, will be the soloist with the Brandenbury Ensemble under Alexander Schneider Feb. 27.

A special occasion is Christopher Hogwood with the Academy of Ancient Music and the the Handel & Haydn Society Chorus in a program Feb. 20, which will include Mozart's Regina Coeli.

The youthful Chamber Orchestra of Europe, with Lorin Maazel conducting, will return to Boston March 29 as a consequence of its triumphant debut in the Series last season. The extraordinary young violinist Frank Peter Zimmermann will be soloist.

A World-renowned instrumental virtuosi who will give recitals include violinists Itzhak Perlman, March 8, and Pinchas Zukerman, Nov. 23; oboist Heinz Holliger, March 15; and two famous flutists: Jean-Pierre Rampal March 8 and James Galway, who explores the flute/guitar literature with Japanese guitarist Kazuhito Yamashita March 20.

Also listed are the celebrated duo of cellist Yo-Yo Ma and pianist Emunuel Ax on April 9.

For guitar aficionados there will be both Julian Bream, Nov. 7, and the noted young American virtuoso, Chirstopher Parkening March 21.

Three glorious sopranos will be heard: Elly Ameling in a lieder recital Oct. 24, the magnificient Leontyne Price, Feb. 15, and Dame Kiri Te Kanawa, favorite of the British Royal Family and millions of opera lovers, Jan. 25.

Fans of the Vienna Choir Boys will welcome their annual return to Symphony Hall Oct. 15.

Completing the list are the Hungarian State Folk Ensemble, a company of 100 which will whirl into Symphony Hall April 3; those perennial favorites from New Orleans, the Preservation Hall Jazz Band, March 29 and, for lovers of the Viennese waltz, the Vienna Johann Strauss Orchestra.

The Wang Celebrity Series once again offers its entire season in a selective series, in whch subscribers choose their own seven-event or 14 event series, at substantial savings.

Boston Ballet brings world premieres to Hub

Artistic Director Bruce Marks has announced Boston Ballet's 23rd season, featuring several new works including three world premieres, three Boston premieres, and favorite ballets from the company's repertoire.

The season features: a world premiere of three one-act story ballets based on tales of the world's greatest storyteller, Hans Christian Andersen; the Boston premieres with daring and innovative choreography by young choreographers and artists; a program of three works by great masters of modern ballet choreography, Antony Tudor's Jardin aux Lilas, Balanchine's Theme and Variations, and another work; the revivals of Agnes de Mille's Rodeo, Choo San Goh's Leitmotiv, and Mark Morris' Mort Subite; and the full-length Company classic and holiday favorite, The Nutcracker.

All performances will be held at The Wang Center for the Performing Arts, 270 Tremont St. in Boston.

The season opens with Coppelia, Nov. 5 through 9. Recreated from the Ballet's oldest existing source, Coppelia will be staged by Hans Brenaa of the Royal Danish Ballet, one of the world's leading experts on the Bournonville style of ballet. The production will feature the internationally acclaimed Danish dance mime Neils Bjorn Larsen as Dr. Coppelius.

Set to the lyrically beautiful music of Leo Delibes, Coppelia tells the humorous tale of the jealous young Swanilda who angrily denounces her lover only to discover that the object of his desire is merely a doll—the latest invention of the eccentric village toymaker Dr. Coppelius.

The Nutcracker takes center stage Dec. 4 through Jan. 4. In keeping with a popular holiday tradition, Boston Ballet will stage a record 39 performances of The Nutcracker, including four special school performances and three additional performances in Worcester.

Featuring the familiar Tchaikovsky score and fairy tale sets and costumes by Helen Senn and Herbert Pond, The Nutcracker is yuletide entertainment for the whole family.

With a full orchestra and over 100 performers, including members of Boston Ballet and children ages 7-14 from the Boston metropolitan area, the production also features an on-stage snowfall, a giant magical Christmas tree, and an enormous hot air balloon which transports Clara to the Palace of the Sweets.

The Young, The New, And The Legendary will be offered Feb. 4 through 8. Agnes de Mille's 1942 classic, Rodeo, set to the music of Aaron Copland is a delightful comic romance, packed with American vernacular square dances and tapdancing. The story takes place on a ranch in the southwest and portrays a tomgirl's difficult path to womanhood and love.

Choo San Goh's Leitmotiv premiered in 1980 with the Boston Ballet. Set to Rachmaninoff's energetic Rhapsody on a Theme of Paganini, Leitmotiv is neoclassical in style. Its powerful and sculptural movement contrasts strength, speed and tenderness.

Considered one of the most gifted and promising young choreographers of the dance world today, Mark Morris returns with his cutting-edge, post-modern Mort Subite, set to Poulenc's compelling Concerto in G Minor.

The Company commissioned Mr. Morris to create this work that premiered in February 1986 through a grant from the National Choreography Project of the National Endowment for the Arts.

March 4 through 8, Boston Ballet presents Discovery Festival. Kenneth Rinker and Susan Marshall will create two world premieres especially for the company.

Formally a lead dancer with Twyla Tharp, Rinker's choreographic style is intense and fast-paced. The New York Times calls it "slinky, loose hipped, virtuosic and an elegant illustration of every idiom from ballet to natural-movement-modern.

Of Susan Marshall, The Village Voice has said, "She is one of the most accomplished choreographers around."

Beehive, the culmination of years of work by co-creators choreographer Jim Self and artist Frank Moore will appear in its first full-staged professional presentation.

Beehive, with all new sets and choreography, traces the ill-fated liaison between a drone and a worker bee set against the busy, sometimes harsh and often comic life of bees in the hive. All three of these innovative choreographers' own companies will be presented by Dance Umbrella.

On tap for April 1 through 5 are The Great Masters. Antony Tudor's dramatic and intriguing Jardin aux Lilas, a Boston premiere, is set to Ernest Chausson's expressive Poem for Violin and Orchestra.

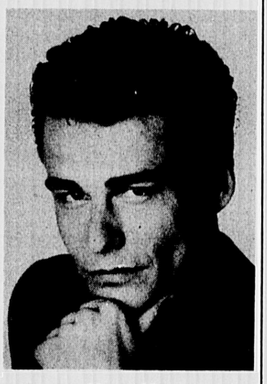
What's On The Boards

By Dann Kosow

Clockwise from top: the hard-driving Southern pop rock of 38 Special can be heard Sept. 13 at Great Woods Center for the Performing Arts; soap opera celebrities Perry Stephens of Loving, Ian Buchanan of General Hospital, Carmen Thomas, and Ruth Warrick, both of All My Children, star in two live performances Sept. 14 at the Boston Park Plaza Hotel Imperial Ballroom.



Dinner club swings with Porter hit

Porter scintillates in Christo's Cole

REVIEW

It's virtually impossible to go wrong with Cole Porter, as is apparent by the popularity of this creative artist and his songs, many of which are staples of the popular repertoire.

Since its opening at London's Mermaid Theatre in 1974, the musical revue Cole has enjoyed continued success and this was certainly obvious during its recent revival at Christo's II Dinner Theatre in Brockton.

With music and lyrics by Cole Porter, and devised by Benny Green and Alan Strachan, Cole is a sprinkling of 40 songs, both classic and neglected, of the more than 500 penned by the prolific tunesmith over six decades.

All are stamped with the graceful and effortless style that is his world trademark, his light music, often punctuated with naughty lyrics and composed harmonies of amazing complexity.

Christo's mounted a slick and sprightly revival with a youthful, well-drilled cast of 10, under the taut direction of Caryl Brayton Toole, who wisely kept choreography simple but effective.

The mounting was ably supported by musical director Sue Kane at the piano, attractively costumed - predominently in white and royal blue - by Marion Hawkins, with a sleek set by Molly Hochkeppel.

The musical entertainment is a kaleidoscope of Porter's output ranging from the Yale Sequence to the Paris Sequence, on to the Manhattan and Broadway interludes, the What Is This Thing Called Love? grouping (Porter was not only a sharp wit but a sympathetic chronicler of that agonizing psychic ordeal usually referred to as love), the Hollywood Period, and the Back To Broadway Sequence.

Overall, the sophisticate's music is fascinating, a marriage of the verbal and the melodic, meticulously crafted, and the revue is linked together with a mix of original narration and related extracts from Scott and Zelda Fitzgerald and P.G. Wodehouse.

Notable in the cast were Fran Botelho-Hoeg, who shined throughout; Gail Riley, who displayed a solid musical comedy voice; and Glen Hochkeppel, who possesses inner warmth and nice phrasing.

Spider's Web opens Nickerson Theatre season

Agatha Christie's whodunit, Spider's Web, opens the curtain this week on the fall season at the Nickerson Theatre, Norwell's year-round professional theatre company, continuing through Saturday, Oct. 11.

Spider's Web is director Nora Hussey's fourth production with the Nickerson, having previously directed Life With Father, A Christmas Carol, and Deathtrap.

Having directed everything from Hamlet to The Drunkard since her arrival in the Boston area five years ago, Hussey has twice been named Best Director by the Boston Theatre Critics' Circle.

The cast of Spider's Web includes Robert Bouffier (Henry); Mark Cartier (Oliver); Christopher Childs (Inspector), Cheri Condon (Pippa), John Davin (Sir Rowland), Elizabeth Anne Dickinson (Clarissa), Niels Miller (Hugo), James Mullen (Constable); Ed Peed (Elgin), Robert Riley (Jeremy) and Ingrid Sonnichsen (Miss Peake).

Jace Holmes is lighting and scenic designer and Bradford Wood has designed costumes.

Spider's Web, Agatha Christie's tale of mystery, murder and mayhem, spins the tale of Clarissa, the bored wife of a diplomat who entertains herself and guests with preposterous stories of intrigue and adventure.

Performance times for the mystery-thriller, are: 8 p.m. Tuesday through Thursday; 8:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday; and 7 p.m. Sunday with 2 p.m. matinees Saturday and Sunday.

Tickets are $16 for Friday and Saturday evennys and $13 for all other performances.

Brighton Beach brightens North Shore stage

A poignant and funny look at two families living, laughing and struggling in Brooklyn during the Depression, Neil Simon's Brighton Beach Memoirs will be presented at Beverly's North Shore Music Theatre, for one week, through Sept. 13.

An autobiographical account of Simon's own childhood, Brighton Beach Memoirs is a skillfull mixture of comedy and drama, raising the issues of sibling rivalry and family relationships, while the world approaches the brink of another war. Variety called this play "one of the finest comedies of the American theater."

Brighton Beach Memoirs opened on Broadway in 1983 and won the New York Drama Critic's Award for Best Play that season.

This play is the first of a triology of autobriographical works by Simon, the others are Biloxi Blues, which won the 1985 Tony Award for Best Play, and the as yet unproduced Broadway Bound.

The North Shore Music Theatre production will be directed by John Going and feature Robert Leonard as Eugene (the young Neil Simon), Barbara Andres as Blanche, Barbara Caruso as Kate, Sherry Stregack as Laurie, Joyce O'Brien as Nora, Rudy Goldschmid as Stanley, and Alan Mixon as Jack. Leonard made his Broadway debut in the same role.

Performances are 8 p.m. Monday through Saturday, with 2 p.m. matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

Rock pioneers

Crimson, Keith Emerson and Greg Lake were pioneers in progressive rock music during the late 1960's through the 1970's. Emerson's tremendous catalog of keyboard skills, which range from classical to jazz, balances with Greg Lake's pivotal bass playing and timeless vocals. Cozy Powell adds a Zeppelinesque bite to Emerson and Lake's already unique style.

The band's new Polygram album is, like their live concerts, a blend of the characteristics of their earlier music, combined with the electronics and fresh attitude of the 80's.

Tickets for this concert are priced at $16.50 and $14.50 for reserved seats; $12.50 for lawn.

Rodney Dangerfield, who turns life's pain and frustrations into comic gold, comes to Great Woods on Wednesday evening, September 17.

TAURUS: (April 20 to May 20 — Also Taurus Ascendant) — Be open-minded, listen selectively and get your own points across dynamically. Give yourself credit and tackle difficult tasks with confidence. Don't get upset or lose your "cool" if things don't go exactly as planned.

GEMINI: (May 21 to June 20 — Also Gemini Ascendant) — People you care about take a turn for the better and it's cause to celebrate. Look to ways of streamlining your work efforts and recognition will come. Don't get paranoid—there are more people for you than against you!

CANCER: (June 21 to July 22 — Also Cancer Ascendant) — You could mend some fences now with one who has been estranged. Your responsibilities may increase but so are your prospects for financial gain. It's an emotional time so stay away from extremes or any kind of overindulgence.

VIRGO: (Aug. 23 to Sept. 22 — Also Virgo Ascendant) — You could win others over to your point of view now, but don't take advantage of the fact. In the spirit of cooperation let your mate or partner take the lead and be supportive. Don't overreact to a crisis in relationships.

LIBRA: (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22 — Also Libra Ascendant) — Use your creativity and express what you're feeling—many new opportunities are around you. Dress for success and accept an important invitation. Apply yourself on the job and don't get involved in gossip or idle chatter.

SCORPIO: (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21 — Also Scorpio Ascendant) — Separate the facts from fiction and be prepared to protect your own interests. Don't come on strong or be so independent that you offend others. It's a highly emotional time—be especially discreet in romantic matters.

SAGITTARIUS: (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21 — Also Sagittarius Ascendant) — Don't procrastinate—discipline yourself and take care of neglected practical matters. If your domestic and career lives are in conflict, show loyalty to family members. Be realistic about your long-term commitments.

CAPRICORN: (Dec. 22 to Jan. 19 — Also Capricorn Ascendant) — Take care of financial matters, pay bills and balance out accounts. Family discussions could center around domestic changes or a possible move. Get all the facts before agreeing to anything now—be realistic!

AQUARIUS: (Jan 20 to Feb. 18 — Also Aquarius Ascendant) — Some exciting information you receive could totally change your view of yourself and your life! Show some hidden skills and your earning power could increase dramatically. Be wary of bargains that appear too good to be true.

PISCES: (Feb. 19 to March 20 — Also Pisces Ascendant) — Check out the facts and don't rely on hearsay now. Clarify your position, be honest with yourself and define your terms. In an emotionally explosive domestic situation maintain your calm and don't speak harshly in anger.

What About Art? By Meredith Fife Day

Jane Ritchie's acrylic painting, Sculler, is included in Cambridge Art Association's exhibition, which features the artistic response to the Harvard setting.

Cambridge through artists' eyes

Although the revelry and festivities around Harvard University's 350th celebration appear to have peaked, events honoring the anniversary continue.

For artists, the occasion provides a receptive setting and good excuse for exhibiting works that explore Harvard's venerable buildings and grounds as well as the visual diversity of Cambridge itself.

The Cambridge Art Association's contribution to a collaborative 350th exhibition, The Harvard Setting Then And Now, is a chock-a-block full show.

In Artists Viewing The Modern Scene, with mediums range from watercolor to photography to video, artists look at the university's environs — decidedly unacademic in many instances.

The color photographs of Eric Linter and Linda Benua are reminders that people-watching and sensual stimulation are as natural and abundant in Cambridge as anywhere around.

Benua's Central Square series is filled with character studies that are at once familiar, individual and universal.

Those same characteristics are accorded objects, buildings and specific locales in Lintner's works.

The viewer becomes aware of such visual associations as the kiosk and its signs lighted by tiny bulbs overhead the backs of a myriad variety of people.

There is the surprise of a truck whose grey-blue doors pull to the lens' edges, exposing a soft, fragrant array of pink and white flowers beyond which can be seen the hot glow of buildings and sky.

Many of the paintings in the exhibit focus on the less urban areas of Cambridge.

The Charles' waters provide a motif of apparently limitless variation, as evidenced in David Campbell's grand and expansive drawing, Charles River And Boston, and Jane Ritchie's contrastingly intimate view of a sculler seen through branches criss-crossing the picture plane of her acrylic painting.

Mt. Auburn Cemetery is another favored motif. Clare Walker Leslie describes with a light and fluid touch in her watercolors the quiet late afternoon shadows that fall across the Mary Baker Eddy Memorial and nearby pond and hill.

The watercolor landscapes of Jeanne Peterack have a quiet quality, too, in addition to a humble intensity that seems to be generated from close and earnest observation. Peterack displays three small oil landscapes that share this property. Her work has a presence rooted in genuine feeling and in form that is solid and dynamic without being predictable.

Another painter whose works are notable in both the formal and emotional sense is Lorraine Lans. Color is heightened in the manner Impressionist painting to describe the diffused and glowing light that wraps itself around the tightly constructed composition of buildings in her oils of Longfellow Bridge.

There are many works in this exhibit that provoke interest either on the level of quality or subject matter — and in the best instances, both.

The Cambridge Art Assn., 25R Lowell St., is open 10 to 5 daily. The current exhibition will remain on view through Sept. 13. Call 876-0246 for more information.

Town And Gown

Lexington's Gallery On The Green opens its seventh season with Town And Gown, a group show featuring the work of eleven artists honoring Harvard's 350th.

The exhibiting artists are Joel Babb, Grace Bentley-Scheck, Jane Chermayeff, Tom Gill, Michael Jacques, Frederick Kubitz, Charlotte Lyons, Max Mason, Addis Osborne, Marian Parry and Marian Cannon Schlesinger.

Babb's large horizontal watercolor, View From The Carrels Of Widner Library impresses in both conception and execution. Like a wide angle lens, the artist's eye takes in the peripheral view — all within sharp focus — and paints it with clear and crisp assurance that makes such a visual feat quite believable.

There is crispness, too, in the three watercolors of Kubitz, with whites breaking through transparent golden light of perfectly scaled, familiar views of Harvard.

Softer edges and simpler shapes are no less descriptive in Cermayeff's sequentially grouped watercolors of the Charles River and Harvard Towers. Because nine or twelve rectangular "frames" make up each work, the paper's hard and crisp edges figure largely in the total work. By keeping her painted edges soft and without angularity, Chermayeff assures ease of eye movement across the frames.

Charlotte Lyons and Max Mason each present groups of four watercolors. There is a sense of lightness and joy of observation in both artists' works.

Lyons' airy, watery figures are painted with economy and charm, their wavy lines lending a sense of movement to their poses.

Mason's views of Harvard Yard veer from atmospheric and photographic description just enough to delight in playful line, sprightly color and jauntily tilted buildings.

In these and most of the works, there is a sense of place that Harvard University and surrounding Cambridge provide. That sense of place has visual richness and durability that will outlast even a very grand birthday party, and serves well as an exhibition's thematic focus.

Gallery On The Green is located at 1837 Massachusetts Ave. and is open from 10 to 5 Tuesday through Saturday. Call 861-6044.

Fall, winter seasons sparkle

The passion beneath the surface of polite Victorian society is revealed when a beautiful garden wedding becomes the tragic setting for both bride and groom, as each yearns for other loves despite their mute acceptance of what must be.

George Balanchine's Theme and Variations is set to the final movement of Tchaikovsky's expressive Suite No. 3 in G. This ballet, with its exceptional choreography and glittering costumes, is a majestic tribute to the tradition of great Russian ballet. Also on the program will be a work by another choreographic master.

Their final offering will be Tales of Hans Christian Andersen May 6 through 17. Artistic Director Bruce Marks and Associate Director Bruce Wells will choreograph three spectacular story ballets based on tales of Hans Christian Andersen: The Ice Maiden to Igor Stravinsky's Le Baiser de la Fee; The Steadfast Tin Soldier to George Bizet's Jeux d'Enfants and La Jolie Fille de Perth; and The Wild Swans to Claude Debussy's Danses Sacres et Profanes and La Mer.

Jens-Jacob Worsaae, the talented set and costume designer from the Royal Danish Ballet will design the production.

Subscription prices range from $172.50 to $70.50. Single tickets range from $38.50 to $10.50. For further information, call Boston Ballet at 542-1323.

Opera Company hosts four shows

The Opera Company of Boston, under the artistic direction of Sarah Caldwell, presents four operas for four performances each, the first in November, the last in June of 1987.

Opening the season will be Leonard Bernstein's Candide. Here, the Caldwell "magic" merges with Bernstein's jaunty, haunting melodies as Candide wanders from Westphalia to Lisbon to Paris to Buenos Aires to Venice and from optimism to disillusionment to a joyous conclusion.

It is "natural" for Caldwell and a delightful evening of musical theatre. Performances are slated for 8 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 12, 3 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 16, 8 p.m. Friday, Nov. 21, and 3 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 23.

Giacomo Puccini's Madame Butterfly fills the January-February slot. Perhaps the most beloved opera of all time, this tragic story of the young woman who chooses death over dishonor is told with the immortal music of opera's consummate showman.

Madame Butterfly will take place at 8 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 21, 3 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 25, 8 p.m. Friday, Jan. 30, and 3 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 1

George Frieric Handel's Julius Caesar takes center stage in March-April, with Peter Sellars direction and Craig Smith conduction an imaginative interpretation of Handel's masterpiece.

Hailed at festival performances at Purchase, N.Y. last summer by The New Yorker as "witty and astonishingly dramatic," the production gets a new look for the Opera House stage.

Jeffrey Gall, Susan Larson, James Madelena, Lorraine Hunt and Mary Westbrook-Gena star.

The Boston Globe praised moments of "breathtaking beauty" and added, "everything in this production reverberates."

Performances are at 8 p.m. Wednesday, March 25, 3 p.m. Sunday, March 29, 8 p.m. Friday, April 3, and 3 p.m. Sunday, April 5.

Il Trovatore, composed by Giuseppi Verdi at the height of his melodic vitality, will ring down the curtain on the season.

The extravagance of the story of Il Trovatore and the vigor and lyrical poetry of the music have secured its position in the world repertoire of great opera since its premiere in 1853.

Shirley Verrett, one of the great singing actresses of our time, brings her brillance to an exciting new production. Dates are 8 p.m. Thursday, June 4, 3 p.m. Sunday, June 7, 8 p.m., Wednesday, June 10, and 3 p.m. Sunday, June 14.

Subscriptions rates vary from $160 to $38. For further information, write to The Opera House, P.O. Box 50, Boston, MA 02112 or call 426-5300.

Huntington's fifth anniversary season begins

The Huntington Theatre Company presents a five-play fifth anniversary season, which begins Sept. 27 with the Boston premiere of Joe Turner's Come and Gone, by August Wilson, and will also include works by G.B. Shaw, Clifford Odets, Tom Stoppard, and Alexander Ostrovsky.

"Joe Turner's Come and Gone" premiered last spring at the Yale Repertory Theatre under director Lloyd Richards, who will also direct at Huntington.

Joe Turner is a moving, funny, powerful drama about the Black experience in the early 20th century America, when the northern industrial cities were filling with the sons and daughters of the newly freed American slaves.

Set in 1911, the play focuses on Herald Loomis, an impressed laborer who has finally escaped Joe Turner's bonds and come north, determined to track down the wife he lost during seven years of illegal bondage.

George Bernard Shaw's Heartbreak House follows, from Nov. 29 through Dec. 21. The delightful comedy, about a collection of eccentrics gathered together in a country house built like a ship, is also a parable of the beginning of a terrible war and a rueful elegy of the passing of an era.

Awake and Sing, by Clifford Odets, opens Jan. 10 and runs through Feb. 1. Odets' greatest play has become an enduring American classic with its portrayal of three generations in a tempestuous family who find their ideals severly tested as they battle to adapt to the social and economic tribulations of the 1930s.

The fourth offering is the Boaton premiere of Tom Stoppard's Jumpers, from March 7 through March 29. In Jumpers, a professor of moral philosophy, ignoring revels and crises taking place all around him, prepares for a debate on the topic: Man: Good, Bad or Indifferent.

His beautiful wife, Dotty, searches for romance, as the first British astronauts to land on the moon make it just another place to walk.

Physical and intellectual acrobatics are combined with a lost rabbit, a police investigation of a murder, and the logical proof of God in this typically free-wheeling comedy by the author of Night and Day and The Real Thing.

The season closes with The Diary of a Scoundrel by Alexander Ostrovsky, from May 23 through June 14.

In this hilarious 19th century Russian farce a wickedly clever fortune hunter with an uncanny instinct for recognizing human weaknesses sets out to outwit everyone he knows with a rare strategy based on their own hypocrisy and deceit.

Even the discovery of the acid commentary he has penned in his private journal proves only a temporary setback for this delightfully shameless schemer.

For a free brochure or to charge a subscription by phone, call the Huntington Subscription hotline at 266-3996. For special group discounts, call 266-0800.

ART season highlights new works, revised classics

The American Repertory Theatre (ART) will perform five plays, plus a sixth play option, for the expanded resident company's 1986-87 season, at Harvard's Loeb Drama Center in Cambridge.

Performances will begin on Nov. 28 and will continue in repertory through July 19.

The plays scheduled for production are: Tonight We Improvise by Luigi Pirandell, newly adapted and directed by Robert Brustein, and film and video sequences directed by Frederick Wiseman, Nov. 28 through Feb. 1; End Of The World (with symposium to follow) by Arthur Kopit, Dec. 12 through March 14; Sweetable At The Richelieu (World premiere) by Ronald Ribman, Feb. 6 through March 15; The Master And Margarita, an American premiere by Mikhail Bulgakov, May 15 through July 16; Archangels Don't Play Pinball an American premire by Dario Fo, June 5 through July 19; and, as a new sixth-play option to the basic five play subscription series, The Day Room by Don DeLillo, Feb. 18 through March 22.

Robert Brustein, artistic director, said, "Our new season represents an offering of new works, primarily American, and revised classics, and a blending of European sensibilities with our own native talent."

The company will depart for the Festival d'Automne in Paris—the first American resident company to be invited to perform in the prestigious festival—to open the proceedings on Sept. 18 with Robert Wilson's Alcestis. While the company is performing one work by Wilson in Paris, the A.R.T. will present, in association with IPA, Inc., another of his works, The Knee Plays, the American section of his monumental epic The Civil Wars, with words and music by David Byrne, founding member of the rock group The Talking Heads, from Sept. 19 through Oct. 5.

Immediately upon its return from Paris on Sept. 29, the ART will depart for the West Coast for a three-week tour, performing The King Stag and The Day Room.

The company will also continue its ART/New Stages Series at 12 Holyoke St. in the spring for its sixth year.

Due to season expansion, choice subscription seats are now available. The five-play series is available for as little as $53, and for the six-play series, $62.

Theatre goers can enjoy the greatest savings off single ticket prices while receiving all exclusive benefits reserved to ART subscribers by choosing one of the five preview series.

The ART will continue its performance schedule as in the past: 8 p.m. Tuesday through Sunday, with 2 p.m. matinees Saturday and Sunday.

To order subscriptions or to obtain a free subscription brochure, call the ART box office at 547-8300.

Major credit cards are honored. Mail orders should be addressed to the American Repertory Theatre, 64 Brattle St., Cambridge, Mass. 02138.

Our Children

Teenage flics fail the test

By Willard Abraham, Ph.D.

It's time to listen to "our children," for they often have some important things to say. Because it is so difficult for us to see through their eyes, perhaps paying attention to their words can help remove some of our family misunderstandings and frustrations.

So let's start with this bright girl whose observation of herself and some of her peers may give us an interesting thought to consider.

Q. Last summer and earlier this fall I read a lot of movie reviews and articles about "teenage films" and how popular they are with teenagers. Judging by the apparent assumption that all of us enjoy them tremendously, one would think that boys and girls my age (I'm 15) are just a bunch of scatterbrained idiots.

Because I am a movie fan, as many of my friends are, I saw a few of those silly movies and found very little that was humorous in them. If I hadn't been with other people I might have walked out on them. Perhaps I should have suggested that step because when we discussed them later I found others feeling as I did.

When a really fine film comes along I know for a fact that I am not alone in cherishing it. The story, acting, settings and sometimes the music are both enjoyable and memorable.

Two examples come to mind — "Amadeus" and "A Passage to India." Some adults may be surprised that I and others found them to be exciting and beautiful.

So I hope that some of those who think that all teenagers are totally without a serious thought in their heads will try to have a little more understanding and patience.

A. So well stated. Thank you very much. Maybe I especially appreciated your letter because, as a film fan myself, I too recognized the artistry and beauty in both films you mentioned.

The generalizations you feel some folks harbor about young people sometimes extend to a general condemnation of both movies and television. These media, if selectively utilized, have so much to offer, and it has always been that way.

From Norma Shearer to Ingrid Bergman and on to Anne Bancroft (and so many others), teenagers have often been among our most careful consumers.

This letter indicates that times haven't changed much on this subject. There apparently is no monopoly on taste in the arts by any age — and adolescence is certainly one to be listened to.

What's Healthy?

Eyesight surgery

Can nearsightedness be corrected by surgery?

Some eye doctors and clinics have been advertising a procedure called radial keratotomy for several years now.

The procedure is promoted as a way to allow nearsighted people to see without glasses or contact lenses.

However, although for some patients the procedure does live up to this promise, it has also been responsible for causing severe eye problems and is considered questionable by many experts.

Radial keratotomy was first performed in the United States in 1978.

It is a surgical procedure in which the shape of the cornea is changed by making surgical incisions in it.

The incisions are made in a spoke pattern so that the cornea's curvature will be altered.

This changes one's field of view, much the same way that varying the distance between a camera lens and the film changes the focus of a picture.

In 1985, the results of a federally funded nine year study of radial keratotomy patients were announced.

It was found that 66 percent of the 435 patients who were studied showed what was termed a "generally satisfactory and acceptable outcome."

This means that they no longer had the need for glasses or contact lenses.

On the other hand, the remaining 33 percent still suffered from vision problems.

Many suffered from unstable vision after the operation.

Doctors attribute this to the fact that the cornea heals very slowly, and that the final results of the operation aren't known until the cornea totally heals four or five years after the surgery is completed.

Further, one out of every four patients in the study had different results in one eye than the other.

Three patients suffered infections in the cornea.

The researchers also expressed concern that the surgery would weaken the cornea to such an extent that serious problems might result if a radial keratotomy patient suffers an accidental blow to the eye or has to have surgery for some unrelated eye problem such as cataracts.

The study concluded that because it's impossible to predict the outcome of the procedure for each patient, anybody considering undergoing the operation should adopt a buyer-beware attitude and not accept all of the claims for this procedure without question.

Dr. Norman is a Winchester resident who is a family practitioner in Arlington. He is associated with Symmes Hospital. Questions can be addressed to him at 22 Mill st., Suite 109, Arlington, 02174.

The Mystic Paper Beasts perform Sept. 13 as part of the Longy SeptemberFest in Cambridge. For tickets, call 876-0956.

UPDATING THE MARKET

You may have heard of the nearly unbelievable increase in property values recently. Prices of most homes west of Boston actually increased about 2¢ per MONTH during the last year!

Professional appraisers all agree, however (and Realtors substantiate this) that this record-breaking inflation of house prices has slowed down since the start of this past June.

Presently, property values are staying relatively even. What does this mean to you? If a house like yours sold for $180,000, yours is not likely to sell for more — at this time.

Keep in mind, however, that real estate trends change rapidly! We make it our business to keep abreast of all changes that affect your property value, from inflation factor to mortgage rate, to the number of homes presently for sale that might compete with yours. Even if you've had a market analysis recently, ask us for an update.

Louise Ruma-Ivers is the immediate past President of the Greater Boston Women's Council of Realtors, and a past Director of the Marketing Institute for the Greater Boston Real Estate Board. She is a member of the Arlington Historic Districts Committee.

Dot Stein is a Vice President of the Greater Boston Real Estate Board and a Director of its Multiple Listing Service. She was a long-time Arlington Town Meeting member, and a member of the Arlington School Committee.

Real Estate Happenings by Steve Collins

PRICING

Pricing a home for the local market? It pays to be realistic. It helps to sever all emotional ties that one may have with one's home. A real estate professional can certainly help in this respect because he or she knows the market. The over-priced house often will spend a longer time on the market. If the price is later reduced, one may end up with even less. The best opportunity to sell is when the home first goes on the market. Agents note its availability, visit it, and bring potential buyers. An over-priced property may be overlooked in favor of those homes priced more in line with reality.

CENTURY 21 COLLINS REALTY, INC. has built an outstanding reputation by satisfying even our most discriminating clients. Drop by and talk with us whether you are planning to buy or sell in the near future. Our office is located at 783 Massachusetts Ave., 648-6900. We are open daily, evenings and weekends.

HINT: If you plan to stay in your new home for more than five years, pay higher points for a lower interest rate.

Wrinkle worries, distressed doggy spark sentiments about 'first move'

By Susan Curtis
Artwork by Carl DiRocco

I didn't have time to prepare for my 40th birthday.

Worries of wrinkles, mid-life career crunch, greying hairs and ten surplus pounds would have to wait as I prepared instead to relocate myself and my family to Massachusetts.

My knowledge of the state, collected from college friends and newspapers, was vague but positive.

I imagined colleges and universities perched on rolling green hills and crammed into the nooks and crannies of Cambridge. Sites of American history and fall foliage were hot items, as were the Red Sox and the Boston Pops.

Cape Cod boasted glorious beaches and Beacon Hill featured cozy, dignified homes.

It sounded civilized as did my husband's new job—with its promise of opportunity and a more relaxed life style—which brought him to Boston four months earlier.

Relocating. Changing homes. Advising the utility companies of a new address. Wrapping my grandmother's candlesticks in six extra layers of tissue paper. Ordering a new identification tag for the dog.

I could handle that. I had, after all, moved seven times in the past 18 years.

Yet, as I drove to my new home, the miles clicked away under my sagging, swaying car to rudely remind me that this relocation was different from those to date—none of which had taken me more than 20 miles from my place of birth.

Surrounded with pieces of my life—my children, three Cabbage Patch dolls, the dog and her family of fleas, 17 plants, a basket of wet laundry and food too precious to leave behind (including my neighbor Ethel's raspberry vinegar, my father's dilled cucumbers, and dozens of frozen green tomatoes from my vegetable patch of seven years), I felt the initial invasion, tiny but insistent, of DOUBT.

Where was I going? Why was I trailing this obscene moving van which held 7 and ½ tons of our earthly belongings? And what had we ever done to accumulate so much stuff?

Questions flooded my weary brain when, suddenly, I was assaulted with a harsh reality of my new life: Boston drivers in rush-hour on Route 128. I was paralyzed, demoralized, and mourned the graffiti-covered subway trains of the life quickly fading into my past.

Settling In

I remain in awe of "professional newcomers"—those families who competently slide into a new house, a new town, a new life every few years.

My sister-in-law is one such person. She has moved 14 times, across country and continents, in 18 years. She has formulas and systems for selecting moving companies, labelling cartons, unpacking, finding schools, picking friends.

Experienced relocators seem to show none of the strain evidenced by the "major move" novice. No bags under the eyes, no stutter or stammer, no extra pounds collected from midnight noshing.

I was befuddled for a year.

Not only was this a major move. It was for both of us, the first significant relocation in two generations from a 20-mile radius of that misunderstood borough of Brooklyn.

The comfort and the courage of the repeating relocater gave me hope. "It takes time," they wisely advised.

Year One, they said, focused on practical activity as the building blocks of a new life were cushioned into place.

Would we ever find a laundry who understood what light starch meant?

Is there a mechanic here who wouldn't laugh at requested repairs to a 1954 Packard?

Was there a grocer who would call us when the Winesap apples, my husband's favorite, arrived?

Where would we discover real deli with lean, mean pastrami and lazy bagels loaded with poppyseed?

"You'll have no time to think," cautioned one recent transplant, then in her eighth major move. "There's simply too much to do."

She was right. I'd thank her for her insight, but she has moved again.

As grey, cold days hung outside those first six months, painters, plasterers, and plumbers filled the inside of our fine old home, adapting it to the patterns and personalities of its new inhabitants.

Concerns for our children ruled the roost.

Starting school mid-year—would it be traumatic? Piano teachers and pediatricians. Finding a place in nursery school before the year 1987. Seeking extra-slim jeans for a bean of a seven-year old. The birthday party after only three weeks here—who did we know to invite?

For months, our four-year-old, usually a sunshine-happy child, had crying fits at precisely 4:30 a.m. It simply made no sense to him that we had moved 238 miles. ("Don't you remember how long we drove in the car to get here?" "No, I was sweeping.") and his dog Wally?

From his point of view, the entire world outside of his immediate family had vanished. Why did Grandad leave? What happened to Uncle Drew? Where was Dr. Scanlon? Teddy and Ben? Peter the mailman?

Challenges, change, new colleagues, a routine, and problems at work stuff the day of the working spouse.

His sense of frustration needed to be softly voiced at home for my child-self easily muttered, "He better like this job, after moving us all here."

Potential guilt lurks in the mind of the employed partner. "Suppose something awful happens here? It wouldn't have happened if we hadn't moved."

We talked a lot that first year. Like children in a candy store, or—depending on events of the day—as aliens from another planet, we discussed and digested, examined and evaluated, each new experience.

Armed with a common history, we were comrades in this new land. We learned the new customs—Patriot's Day, dump permits, dry towns, how to register cars and trained our ears to a different manner of speech.

Some professional newcomers warned me of the "cup-of-coffee crisis." It can happen after three, six, or more months, they said.

I drove my husband to the train when it attacked me. Commuters jostled for places. My former self longed to be part of this crowd. My feet itched for the dash of train-catching. My hands missed the warmth of a styrofoam cup of coffee.

I slunk home to a second cup of coffee and, in safe solitude, voiced the hideous question. "What am I doing here?"

I knew what everyone else was doing here. The kids liked school and had little friends. My husband was doing well. All the cartons were unpacked.

Even the dog, who spent her first five months here sitting under a solitary pine tree, had adjusted.

She now filled the neighborhood with woofs of welcome and litanies of brave barks at unknown cars. (Perhaps she shouldn't have adjusted so well.)

But what was I doing here?

Sprouting Roots

Experienced newcomers reported the need for a dignified time for mourning, for regrouping. So, I allowed myself a time to wallow, adding limited doses of self-pity to packages of Oreo cookies.

And then it was time to fight back, nestle in.

Friends, family and the familiar sights, smells and sounds of that "other place" were still with us, made even more delicious with return visits.

Yet this was home now, wasn't it?

I talked to people, asked questions, followed up on suggestions. The slices of life, so long taken for granted before this move, fell into place. We even discovered a milk man and dry cleaner who delivered.

Then it happened.

During an early evening dash through Purity Supreme, five different people greeted me by name. They knew me. I knew them.

And I knew where I was going. Kidney beans. Frozen juices. Herbal teas. Cat litter. I belonged.

The settling-in process, once my pouting stopped, introduced me to an eerie sense of freedom. No defined career ladder was awaiting me, as it had been in that earlier life.

I could do anything here. Can preserves. Sell real estate. Give tours at the aquarium.Run a marine supply store in Gloucester. Work in the dark splendor of the Boston Public Library.

We're making friends now—a strange thing to do at age 40.

"Hello. I like spicy, ethnic foods, walking on the beach with my kids, books by Anne Taylor and John Irving. Can you be my friend?"

Still missing was the sweatshirt-comfort of old friends. Open the back door and let our kids play with the children of our own childhood friends.

The midnight pizza and beer with those cozy buddies who completed our thoughts, our sentences.

One wretched and icy day, when I was due in Boston for a meeting, I grew concerned about my son and babysitter walking home from nursery school.

Dare I call someone to help? Did I know anyone well enough? What would they say?

I made a call. Help was offered, with amazed reaction. "Of course, I can drop them off. Call anytime. Happy to help!"

This summer, our second summer, showed me—as nothing else had—that we were settled.

As I sat on my porch one June morning, I noticed that the sparrow nest in a hanging fern was, as it was our first summer, occupied. They had returned, my tiny friends, and nestled inside the fuzzy greenery with them were four tiny eggs.

A tradition had begun.

Surviving year one successfully

Whether the move be cross-country or a few dozen miles, there are differences to discovery, opportunities to uncover.

Enjoy the contrasts

A strict comparison of where you are and where you left, especially if you liked your earlier residence, wouldn't work.

However, noting the differences adds spice to your new life.

In our case, we continue to be amazed with the sheer ease of living here. People warned us of traffic. Where? It never seemed to extend beyond a few miles. We've been known to spend two hours on the Long Island Expressway, only to move five or six miles.

And the trains. I boarded the train to Boston with my newspaper and coffee and was shocked to arrive in North Station 14 minutes later. Where is the dreaded hassle of commuting?

Perhaps residence here should be preceeded by mandatory living in New York: it does put things in perspective. We never realized how high our personal abuse level was before we moved.

Explore the new land

We became unabashed tourists. Day-trips took us all over, poking into the dark corners of Hammond Castle, trying to dissect the dialogue at A.R.T., wandering back roads of Western Mass.

Each adventure added another chunk of security, knowledge, to the new life.

Get involved but not over committed

Opportunities abound for meeting people and plugging into a new community. Churches, schools, volunteer groups, newcomer clubs, local theater, senior centers.

Whatever your age or interest, you'll find something.

Even with feelings of dislocation or depression reaching out helps. And, best of all, for a year or two, you can enjoy the activity without committee work, able to drown willing souls. "I'm a newcomer, you know. I'm still getting settled."

I wonder if getting settled can last through my children's school years. . .

Surrounded with pieces of my life — my children, three Cabbage Patch dolls, the dog and her family of fleas, a basket of wet laundry and food too precious to leave behind, I felt the invasion of doubt.

Know your neighbors

I've met people who, after years here, still don't know their neighbors.

We were lucky. Our small street holds five homes. Within the first two days, our neighbors sent flowers, came over, and invited us to a party intended to introduce us to the community.

Driving up the street, especially in those first misplaced months, and seeing a friendly wave, helped us adjust. Thanks, neighbors!

Try something different

Personal and professional expectations have not followed you to this new site. You can try just about anything.

I bought binoculars, a bird book, and took a graduate marketing course at Harvard. (The book and binoculars were not required for the course.)

Stay de-cluttered

Pre-move planning usually involves clearing out, hosting garage sales, and schlepping cartons of goodies to Goodwill.

My closets still have open spaces. One can walk, even roam, the recesses of our attic. I like this luxury and remain determined to halt the pile-up of possessions which sneakily happens.

Network

Whether you seek employment, a change in position, or are simply curious about work options out there, a newcomer has a marvelous opportunity to meet people.

I collected names, and when I was ready, I became appropriately brazen. "I'm new to the area and wonder if I might talk to you about tne job market. . ."

Be patient

That adjustment, though not perfect, does happen. As the professional newcomers said, "It just takes time."

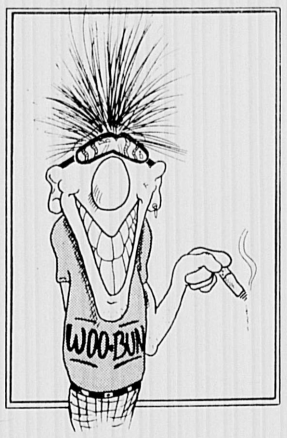
Mass facts:

Learning the lingo



Story by George Derringer
Artwork by Carl DiRocco

Newcomers need to know lots of things not found in other parts of this guide. Just to be helpful, we've put them here.

There is no such thing as "pop" in Massachusetts, unless he's your father. It's either "tonic," which sounds healthy, or "soda," which doesn't.

You must follow the Red Sox. There's no reason for this but it's important to know exactly when to say "I told you so" as the team collapses in mid-summer.

Any sense of direction you may have had is useless in Massachusetts. The roads are never straight for more than a block or two and sometimes the street name you're following goes around a corner.

Speaking of streets, it's impossible to know the name of the street on which you are lost. Oh, there's a street sign on every corner but it only tells you the name of the street you're crossing, not the name of the one you're on.

If you drink at a restaurant, you're not in Belmont, or Arlington. They're dry towns.

If you ordered nachos before your second drink was served, you're not in Winchester. You've got to order a meal to get a second drink there; neither nachos nor potato skins qualify.

Hockey is very big with many area residents. If the Bruins score fewer goals than their opponents, blame the officiating. Everyone else will.

The word "avenue" is never spoken in Massachusetts. It's pronounced "ave" and it rhymes with "have."

It's "Woo-bun" even though it was not named for a very popular DJ of the 1960's named "Woo-Woo Ginsburg."

Massachusetts has two seasons: winter and road construction.

Most people pretend to watch selectmen's meetings on TV although there is better comedy on reruns of "Mister Ed."

This is not true in Belmont, one of the last towns in America with more than 200 residents that does not have cable.

If you want to register your car in the state, have your insurance agent do the dirty work. The state tax office is especially fun, since it is operated by some politician's relatives, who work about 45 minutes of their eight-hour day.

Republicans are very popular in other states. In Massachusetts (always pronounced "mass"), Republicans are an endangered species. Their candidates for governor are best known for taking their clothes off and lying about their military records.

Mass Democrats are best known for taking credit for an economic boom they didn't create. Since there are more Democrats, it appears that taking credit is more fun than . . .

In this state, a "rotary" is never a lawnmower and only sometimes a club. Usually, it's a device created by traffic engineers for people who like to sideswipe other cars.

You can turn right at red lights in Massachusetts except when a sign says you can't. Which is usually.

If you order a milkshake in Massachusetts, you'll get foamy milk. If you want something with ice cream in it, order a "frappe." Pronounce it as if you never heard of French.

Within a year, all newcomers must learn to imitate the voice of Johnny Most. Talking while gargling is an effective technique.

You never heard of Johnny Most? You will.

In most Massachusetts towns, bottled water is best. Your nearby grocer has a lot of it.

There is no such thing as the Boston Symphony Orchestra. It's "the BSO."

Counties are very important in other parts of the country. They still exist here but nobody knows why.

A "bootleg apartment" is not a distillery. It's an apartment located in a house where zoning laws allow only single-family residences. Lots of people live in them but it's considered gauche to say so. Don't.

In Massachusetts, a "grinder" is not a kitchen appliance. It's a sandwich, known most places as a "sub." Neither word makes sense.

There is no such thing as bowling in Massachusetts, which means your brother-in-law's beer drinking has not made him look like he's carrying a bowling ball in his shirt.

Here, they think a softball is a bowling ball.

Speaking of which, bowlers who move here will quickly be embarrassed. If you average 180 in real bowling, you'll average 75 in "duckpin bowling." It keeps New Englanders humble.

Transplants from New York better learn not to ask for mustard on their pretzels.

You can see Boston Harbor from an evening cruise boat equipped with a rock band. Organizers call these "harbor cruises." You'll call them "booze cruises." You're more honest.

There is really an airport in Boston. You can't get there from here.

Some places, like Cape Cod, have road signs urging you to "squeeze left." Take your girlfriend for a ride and see if she's law-abiding.

Pretend you like Moxie. Nobody really does but it's a New England tradition.

Everyone says he never drives on Route 128. Everyone lies. You will too.

Lots of people are looking for roommates through ads in the newspaper. Many of these people already have roommates. Some of them have wives.

Never answer a personal ad in the Phoenix, which is a Boston newspaper (you figure it out), without a can of Mace.

"T" is not a drink. It's a way to travel. It's also an all-purpose letter, used for trains, buses and subways, which sometimes run down the middle of the street, as in Watertown. But never on time.

What's the difference between Quincy (pronounced Quinzy) Market and Fanueil Hall? None.

Speaking of pronunciations, learn these: Wooster, BARNstubull, PEAbahdy, Reveah, MattaPAN, Billricka, Lester, Lemster and Nahhahnt. You won't find them on the map but when someone corrects you, you'll know you've been told before.

"Packy" is not the nickname of the shipping room clerk. It's the name of the place you buy beer. And you don't buy it at the supermarket, although you might buy it next door to the supermarket.

It's important to love the Kennedys. Or to hate them. Other options do not exist.

Expert advice may aid area's new residents pick best community

By DIANE BRONCACCIO

Many new residents or soon-to-be residents have unanswered questions about their new communities. Here is some advice from local area realtors.

"The first thing most new people ask about Arlington is what kind of transportation will they need," said Violet Harp, co-owner of Carroll-Harp Real Estate. This is especially true in two-income households, where one of them goes out along Route 128 and the other works in Boston."

"I tell them about Arlington's public transportation and proximity to Boston. With the new MBTA Alewife Red Line station, plus the Mass. Ave. buses, which run every three minutes during rush hour, Arlington has very good public commuter service to Boston."

"Arlington has no Newcomers Club," she said, "but we do have a lot of long-established clubs and activities.

"What people are universally concerned about is transportation," agreed Dot Stein, co-owner of Ivers & Stein Realtors in Arlington. "Couples who buy a house now tend to both be working--at least a couple of years--so they are concerned about the commute to and from work.

"The second concern, for all those who have children or plan to have children, is the quality of the school system. Fewer people today can afford both a new house and private schooling for their children.

"To my surprise," she noted, "people do not ask about the quality of town services--which are quite high in this area. And, except for those looking at houses in hilly areas, people don't even ask about snow removal."

Belmont is one of the communities where Stein shows properties.

"Belmont," she said, "is a lovely suburban area with exceptional recreation facilities, school and town service.

"Public transportation is quite good. Since the new MBTA Alewife Station opened on the Cambridge-Belmont-Arlington border, commuters with T-passes can park all day in the garage for $3 and take the Red Line into Boston."

"There is a nice, central business district," Stein continued, "where you can find a lot of good things. There is a church for nearly every religious affiliation, and there is a good mix of people living here."

"People who have small children have an easy entry into the community," she said. "They generally get involved with the schools, with the PTA, with day care, with scouting groups--having kids is an easy icebreaker.

"For a working couple, it would be good to get involved with one of the community organizatiions. That's a good way to meet people quickly."

Watertown, says Patricia Martocchia, sales representative at H.R. McBride Realtors, has a friendly town atmosphere with lots of new construction and new condominiums being built.

"Watertown is very centrally located," Martocchia said. "By car, it's just five minutes from Mass. Pike, 10 minutes from Route 128, and just seven minutes to Harvard Square. There are also frequent buses to Boston, Central, Harvard and Kenmore Squares.

"It's a very safe community," she noted, "with some good restaurants, a raquetball club and a very good library."

"One thing I think newcomers should certainly explore is the Winchester Newcomers Club," said Mary Price, manager of Century 21 Winchester Realty. "I know it was of tremendous help when I moved back to Winchester eight years ago."

"There are all kinds of people -- from old to young--and there are so many activities. You can do as much or as iittle as you want."

"For young mothers, especially, who don't work and who don't have many opportunities to meet neighbors who do work, Newcomers Club offers a wonderful avenue for meeting other new people in the community.

Real estate values, Price noted, have steadily risen, making the average sale price of area homes about $220,000.

"When it comes to real estate advice," Price stated, "I tell newcomers anything they do to the house they will reap back in wonderful benefits when they decide to sell it. That goes for major improvements to cosmetic changes, such as wall treatments or refinishing floors. These type of improvements do prove to be very valuable when they do sell. Installing new kitchens are also big assets when it comes time to sell the house."

"I know I sound like a walking advertisment for Winchester," Price remarked, "but the town has tremendous assets--its proximity to Boston, convenient public transportation to Boston, and an excellent school system. Also, I think the revitalized downtown area is a tremendous enhancement."

The school system, she says, has a wonderful science department, from grades one through 12, which has won many awards over the years.

"The school system," Price said, "has something for every child at any level. There is something for the very progressive child who is advanced, to the student with average abilities, to the special needs child."

"Also," she noted, "the school system is always ready to meet any new parent in the community. They provide a wealth of helpfulness to new families in the area, which reinforces the reasons why people come to Winchester."

Welcome clubs greet newcomers

By DIANE BRONCACCIO

New residents of Arlington, Belmont, Newton, Winchester and Watertown needn't feel like strangers.

Each town offers help to newcomers that is sure to make them feel at home.

Get neighborly in Arlington by taking advantage of the town's many resources.

The League of Women Voters of Arlington has published an informative pamphlet called This Is Arlington, which offers information about Arlington's history, town government, finance and town meetings. It's available at the Arlington Chamber of Commerce, 7 Central St., Room 204 or from the Robbins Library, 700 Massachusetts Ave.

The Robbins Library also offers information about the community. The library annually publishes a complete list of Arlington clubs and organizations, which is available free.

The town of Belmont is easy to become familiar with quickly.

"We're just a bedroom community," says Ann Cresine Wilson, Belmont town clerk. "We're only four-and-a-half square miles. You could walk to all four corners of Belmont and not even get tired."

For those who want to get to know their community, Wilson recommends joining one of the 15 local churches.

The Belmont recreation department, 484-2310, offers programs for people of all ages.

An afternoon spent at Belmont Public Library, 336 Concord Ave., is a fine way to learn about the town. The town's historical archives are located in the Belmont Room. The library keeps an up-to-date file on all the community organizations, sells the League of Women Voters' informative booklet and carries many other community records.

In addition, the library publishes a community calendar and posts special events presented by local clubs and organizations.

Warm up to Watertown by calling the Welcome Wagon.

Welcome Wagon is national, commercial enterprise active in 45,000 communities in the United States.

New Watertown residents can leave their name and phone number with a local answering service at 426-2424. A Welcome Wagon host or hostess will call within a month, bringing a basket of useful brochures, maps, phone directories and information about area business and services. The visit takes about an hour and is free.

Besides the chance to leisurely learn about the city, newcomers also may get discount coupons or "cards of greeting" for gifts from local merchants when the cards are presented at their stores.

The Watertown Public Library, 132 Main St., has a complete file of community services and organizations in its reference room.

The town of Newton has two Welcome Wagon representatives. New residents should call either Lisa Rosenfeld at 244-9776 or Nancy Goldberg at 969-1720.

Winchester makes new residents feel at home with both a Newcomers Club and a Welcome Wagon service.

The 12-year-old Winchester Newcomers Club offers many activities and chances for new residents to meet others and develop a social life.

Monthly meetings are held September through May in members' homes. These meetings are generally relaxing social evenings which turn out to be anything from wine-tasting parties or cooking demonstrations to Trivial Pursuit matches.

Diners Club features groups of four couples who have dinner in each other's homes four times a year. Each couple hosts one meal. The hosts supply the main course and cocktails while the three guest couples bring hors d'oeuvres, salad and dessert.

Daytime activities include monthly morning coffee hours held at Crawford Methodist Church, monthly luncheons held in members' homes and occasional daytrips to shows and museums.

In addition, about four Evenings Out programs are planned each year. Last year's events included a Boston Harbor Cruise, dinners and a night at the theatre.

Last year's dues were $15 per couple; $7.50 per single.

Officers for 1986-87 include: Regina Meurer, president; Cathy Wrotny, vice-president; Maura Boylan, Pat Shea, Betty Jones and Judy Spang, social committee; Carmen Bissell, luncheons; Ann Marie Migausky, hospitality; Evelyn Connors, secretary-treasurer; Phyllis Zeuli, Diners Club; Judy Wisnia, communications; Marth Krause, publicity; Judi Houston and Barbara Pangallozzi, evenings out program; and Walter Hubbard, newsletter editor.

For membership information, call Regina Meurer at 721-2754.

Winchester Welcome Wagon hostess Judy Millican can remember when the Winchester Welcome Wagon visited her mother in the family's new home 36 years ago.

Today Millican carries on the work with a welcoming smile and a flower-bedecked Welcome Wagon basket for new Winchester residents.

"In my three-and-a-half years as a hostess, I've met over 350 families," Millican says.

In Millican's basket are maps, a telephone directory, The Winchester Star, civic letters of welcome, brochures about local clubs and city information and "cards of greeting from nearly two-dozen local merchants. Most of the cards offer complimentary gifts or store discounts when the new resident brings the card to the shop or business.

"I try to encapsulate the town in an hour's visit," Millican said. "Most of the couples are working and don't really take the time to go looking around."

New Winchester residents who have not already heard from Judy Millican can call her at 729-2203.

Arlington's delights are scenic, historical

By DIANE REZENDES

The original name of Arlington was Menotomy, which means "swift-running water." It was named for the brooks and rivers that run through it. Although mostly residential now, the town retains much of its natural beauty.

Spy Pond, named for its role in the American revolution, is perhaps the town's most beautiful natural resource.

A spring-fed pond, it was carved out by the great glaciers of the ice age. Some people say that in places it reaches a depth of over 250 feet. The pond offers good sailing and windsurfing, and along the shoreline, peaceful walking and thinking-about-nothing, especially on a cloudy, misty day.

In recent years, one section near Linwood Street has become an informal beach, with increasing numbers of swimmers each summer. It's not recommended to swim there—in fact, it's not allowed in most sections of the pond—not because of water quality, but because of the unusual nature of the pond. In some areas, swimmers can get caught among the weeds and drown; in others, there are strong temperature changes and no measurable depth because of the springs.

In the winter, cross-country skiers and ice skaters take over, but caution is advised here, too. Unless one knows where the underground springs and therefore, areas of thin ice are, it can be dangerous or even fatal.

A safer idea is to go to Hills Pond at Menotomy Rocks Park. Surrounded by the hills of the park, skaters are in a picturesque setting, encircled by a ring of pine and oak trees.

In the gold and russet of autumn, the walking paths of Menotomy Rocks Park give a gracious respite from the outside world.

Another lovely park is Robbins Garden on Massachusetts Avenue, in the middle of town. On spring weekends, some brides have formal photographs taken here among flowering apple and cherry trees. Also in this park is the statue, Indian Hunter, created by Arlington sculptor Cyrus Dallin. Two of Dallin's other, better-known works include Appeal to the Great Spirit at the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston and the angel Moroni atop the Mormon Temple in Salt Lake City.

The streets offer good jogging for the enthusiast. Whether running two miles or six, one can enjoy flat, tree-lined streets, run along Mystic River near the Medford line, or by Spy Pond away from traffic.

Situated seven miles northwest of Boston, Arlington is a unique blend of city and suburban life. With a population of 49,000 people living in an area about five square miles, Arlington is one of the most densely populated municipalities in greater Boston. Yet Arlington strives to maintain the sense of community normally seen in a much smaller town.

There are parades on most major holidays, fireworks for Independence Day and Town Day. The annual Town Day (this year Sept. 27) includes an all-day fair of games, food, crafts, live music, dancing, and a roadrace. It's a general atmosphere of fun and celebration.

But Arlington isn't turned in on itself. For about 10 years now, Arlington has sponsored an international summer exchange program with Japan and is a sister city to Nagaskakyo.

There are over 150 charitable, civic, cultural and special interest groups in town—from Arlington Concerned Citizens to the Zonta Club of Arlington. Newcomers who wish to become involved will certainly find an organization that suits them.

Arlington has a strong commitment to education. Almost 75 percent of AHS grads go on to 4-year colleges and other programs. Last year $2700 was spent on each student.

In the fourth grade, Arlington children study the history of their hometown. Here are highlights of what one 4th grader remembers, some twenty years later.

In the early 1600s, Squaw Sachem, who was the widow of the chief of the tribe who lived in this area, controlled most of what is Middlesex County today. In 1638 she sold it to the colonial government for about ten pounds and a guarantee of a coat every winter for the rest of her life.

Most people are familiar with the events of April 19, 1775, but not many realize that the heaviest fighting and the bloodiest skirmishes were not in Lexington and Concord, but here in Menotomy.

Until 1807, this area was part of Cambridge. It became the town of West Cambridge, later to become Arlington. During the 1800s, the town was noted for market gardening, greenhouses, and the famous ice houses of Spy Pond, whose workers, in the days before refrigeration, cut blocks of ice for shipment around the world. The Schwamb Mill, built in 1860 on the site of an older grist mill, is the oldest picture and mirror framemaker in the United States. It is a working museum, open to the public for tours, classes, and sales.

Arlington was the birthplace of Samuel Wilson, who later ran a meat packing operation in Troy, New York. This company supplied the army during the War of 1812. Wilson stamped all meat "U.S." for United States, but it earned him the nickname, Uncle Sam, which today, of course, stands for the federal government.

In the last hundred years, with the advent of trolley cars and the automobile, the town gained easier access to the city, and began its change from a farming town to a residential town for commuters.

Today, commuting to Boston is relatively easy from Arlington via public transportation. The red line runs all the way out to East Arlington at Alewife, making for a quick, convenient commute to downtown Boston. Driving can be a different story because the major highways to Boston are heavily traveled, and slow during rush hour. For some resients, cycling is a healthy, inexpensive alternative. Cyclists can pick up the bike path along the Charles River just beyond Harvard Square.

Arlington certainly is more than a bedroom community. It offers a great deal both in its natural resources and its commitment to the quality of life for the people who live here—whether seniors, families, working people, or students. It is a good place to live.

Arlington selectmen cite 351-year past

Dear New Arlingtonian,

We welcome you to our town that has a rich 351-year history. Starting from farming and mill roots, our town has evolved into a suburban community with pride in its ethnic and cultural diversity. Simply stated, "Arlington has something to offer everyone."

There are fine recreational facilities, convenient public transportation, excellent schools, outstanding libraries, responsive public services and numerous churches. Moreover, there are countless opportunities for community involvement in town government, social and civic clubs and community volunteering. Our human services and concern for the elderly are strong public commitments. The Arlington Boys and Girls Club and the Choate-Symmes Hospital provide additional local community facilities. Our informational needs are met by the local newspaper, The Arlington Advocate, and by the town cable, Arlington cable Systems.

Despite our small and densely populated area (two by three miles), we still have open space at our attractive parks and playgrounds. Recently, the Arlington business community has undertaken an extgensive renovations program anod is trying to be responsive to changing consumer needs.

Yet more commendable than all of its tangible assets is the fact that Arlington is a caring community. It consists of friendly neighbors who are willing to help others and to become in volved in the life of the town. Now you are part of Arlington. We encourage you to take an active role; we stand ready to help.

Sincerely,
Robert Walsh,
Janemarie Hillier,
Charles Lyons,
Robert H. Murray,
Stephen J. Conroy,

CAR CARE CORNER

by Dan Hogan
Service Manager

Most American cars still have automatic shift even though somewhat of a changeover toward manual transmissions has begun. People feel that for city driving the automatic is the way to go. No shifting, ramming, and jumping all over a gearshift lever while in traffic. Automatic transmissions are much more susceptible to damage than manual transmissions. Sure, you can have a heavy foot on the clutch, and ram that gearshift, and you'll tear up a manual pretty easily. But because the automatic is so simple without much shifting, it tends to be forgotten, and problems come because you start treating it more roughly than it deserves or can handle. So check on that transmission from time to time.

ASE certified technicians are employed by PETER FULLER OLDS. Open 8-5. We have our own body shop to make necessary repairs. M/C, Visa & A/E honored. Tel. 924-8100. 230 local businesses rally around Chamber

By DEIRDRE DRUMMEY

Nearly 50 years old, the Arlington Chamber of Commerce represents local businesses and acts as a lobbyist for the concerns of the business person.

Located at 7 Central St., Suite 204, after 10 years on Medford Street, the chamber represents nearly 230 local businesses.

Director Larry Barton says the business group has two sides, one "reactive," the other "pro-active." The reactive side comes into force when something within the community affects businesses, he said.

The chamber also meets with town planning director Alan McClennan once a year to discuss new businesses, investments, and redevelopment plans. In turn, chamber officials react to the town's information and bring up their own plans and concerns.

"It's a give and take session," said Barton.

On the "pro-active" side, the organization does positive things for the town and the businesses it represents.

The organization does positive things for the town and businesses it represents.

"We provide the Christmas lighting in Arlington," said Charlie Smith, membership director and one of two staff members. Cathy Salipante is the secretary.

One year during the 1970s energy crisis, the town did not have the funds to put up Christmas lights, Barton said. Since then, the chamber has taken over the $10,000-a-year lighting program.

Monthly luncheon meetings bring chamber members together. Guest speakers talk about issues that affect businesses.

Most candidates for the eighth congressional district seat have served as guest speakers.

The chamber of commerce also serves as a help to residents, new and old, who have questions about local businesses. Often residents will call looking for a reliable business and the chamber will give recommendations, said Smith.

"We're much like a better business bureau," said Barton.

Barton said the organization also holds an annual awards banquet to honor local citizens and businesses.

There are no qualifications for belonging to the chamber other than annual dues. Dues start at $60 for new members.

After the first year, dues are prorated to the number of employees a business has. Business owners interested in joining the chamber should contact Smith at 643-4600.

Another feature of the chamber is a program offering health and group life insurance from Blue Cross and Blue Shield at a 20 to 35 percent discount. This feature is especially beneficial to very small businesses that could not otherwise afford insurance plans, members explain.

Businesses outside Arlington in the metro west area also join the chamber to take advantage of the insurance plan.

To take part in the insurance program, a business must join the chamber first, Smith said. Including businesses outside of Arlington, the chamber has nearly 500 members.

The chamber is headed by president Leonard Talkov. It also has two vice presidents, a clerk, a treasurer, and a board of 12 to 14 members. All positions are held by local business people.

Incorporated in 1919, the organization was originally called the Arlington Businessmen's Association. The name was changed to the Arlington Chamber of Commerce in 1936.

Getting your at Harvard

What do students, tourists, intellectuals, punk radicals, and musicians have in common?

Harvard Square and a craving for ice cream is the answer. Harvard Square's small confines hosts a whopping dozen ice cream stores.

The reason for such an abundance of ice cream stores stems from a simple law of economics. In 1984, an average of 14.96 quarts of ice cream per capita was produced in the U.S.

But New England manufacturers had their work cut out for them. To keep up with New Englanders' demands, they produced an incredible 23.06 quarts of ice cream per person.

With so many ice cream connoisseurs running around, Boston has to have the best to serve the best.

Since Bailey's, Emack and Bolio's, Haagen Dazs, Ben and Jerry's, Steve's, Herrell's, Brighams, and Baskin-Robbins all offer their yummy versions of America's favorite dessert, the margin for confusion is great.

But lest Harvard Square's eclectic pickings seem overwhelming, a few facts and hints about these gourmet stores are all that is needed.

For a nostalgic day spent with an old friend, Bailey's, on Brattle St., is a good choice.

Established in the 1800's, Bailey's, with its marble topped tables and old fashioned sundaes, boasts a soda fountain atmosphere that even Wally Cleaver would approve of.

Bailey's has not joined the wave of gourmet ice cream stores, but has stuck with the basics: chocolate, vanilla, strawberry, and a better than average mocha almond, to name a few. The prices are fairly reasonable as cones run from $1.05 to $1.95.

Emack and Bolio's wins as the ideal place to get an ice cream cone to munch on while strolling along the Charles.

Having opened his first store in 1975, attorney Bob Rook named the place after his first two legal clients, Mr. Emack and Mr. Bolio. Emack's boasts the best Oreo ice cream in the area, and although that claim may be debatable, its creamy, chocolate mousse ice cream goes unrivaled.

If the flavor alone isn't rich enough, try mixing it with some Snow Caps and scooping it into an oversized cone dipped in chocolate and Reese's peanutbutter cups. The gourmet cones run from $.75 to $1.15, a single scoop is $1.15 and a double, $1.95. The blend-ins are extra as well. The cost for such an cream of the crop:

elaborate dessert can be a bit heady.

At the Galeria Mall on JFK St. amidst Pappagallo's and Scandinavian Design, is Haagen Dazs, the great Danish impersonator.

Don't be fooled by Haagen Dazs' tricky bit of advertising. Their clever device of placing a map of Denmark on the cover of every pint has earned them world wide fame from the supermarkets who have stocked up on the pretentious stuff for over 20 years.

Haagen Dazs is, and always has been, based in Woodbridge, N.J.

However, Haagen Dazs has its good points. While the texture isn't as creamy as some of its competitors, the prices are comparable, starting at $1.10 for a small cone, and the luscious rum raisin and chocolate-chocolate chip are worth a try.

Hailing from Burlington, Vermont, is Ben and Jerry's. The store has monopolized the New York City ice cream market and can be found in these parts on Brattle Street under the guise of David's Cookies.

Ben and Jerry's' specialty is Dastardly Mash, a chocolate base concoction chock full of nuts, chips and other goodies. But, like so many of the others, the price is outrageous.

A small dish of their rich Kahlua Amaretto ice cream is $1.25. Since pints of Ben and Jerry's can be bought at the supermarket, pick one up there, carry it to the Square, and save some money.

Trivia buffs are eligible for the best ice cream buy in the Boston area at the current king of ice cream, Steve's. At the Church Street location, Steve's offers a trivia question of the day with a small sundae awarded to any winner.

Beware, a slip of the memory means a cost as steep as the rest.

Steve's has had a long, notorious history since its opening in Somerville's Davis Square in the early '70's.

Owner Steve Herrell sold the store to rival entrepreneur Joey Crugnale, previous owner of Joey's Ice Cream. Joey capitalized on the deal and, according to The Boston Ice Cream Lover's Guide, eventually sold the growing franchise for $5 million.

Steve's is now going the conglomerate route with stores popping up on virtually every street corner in Boston.

The company has even begun to invade the New York ice cream market, a move making incumbent ruler Ben and Jerry's squirm.

Steve's is the originator of the "mix-in". $2.15 buys a large ice cream and Reese's, Heath Bar, Raisinettes, or some other treat pounded into your flavor.

This method of "mixing-in" has the employee crush the "mix-in" into the ice cream, a task requiring all the deftness of a Samurai warrior.

To get the desired result of a smooth, creamy texture, is, according to one Steve's employee, "the toughest part of the job, and "an art form in itself."

Among Steve's best is the new chocolate truffle, as well as the old standbys of cocoa, Oreo, and Fluffernutter.

In 1983, Steve Herrell returned to the ice cream business, the theory being that once an ice cream man, always an ice cream man. This time he used his last name, and thus arose Herrell's on 15 Dunster Street.

Competing with a place as popular as Steve's requires the manufacturing of some pretty remarkable flavors.

Herrell scored on one account — chocolate pudding ice cream. It is of a thick, dense, chocolaty consistency. Chocolate pudding is like a fine fudge in that it takes only a little to sate your craving. A fact which is good, for a peewee cone costs about 90 cents.

But Steve Herrell should have held onto a good thing when he had it. For while Herrell's flavors and texture are on par with Steve's, this smaller, more expensive store has not come close to receiving Steve's popularity.

If none of these avant-garde joints sounds too good to resist, there are always the reasonably priced Brigham's and Baskin-Robbins.

Brigham's on Massachusetts Ave. has won numerous accolades for its vanilla ice cream, which, notes a Brigham's representative, "is still the most popular flavor."

But Brigham's, too, has done its part to keep in stride with the gourmet ice cream race, having recently added Mississippi Mud to its flavors.

Prices at Brigham's range from 95 cents to $1.25 for a double scoop. For the price, the flavor and texture of the ice cream is exceptional, making Brigham's a good, if not terribly exciting, alternative.

And do not forget the 31derful flavors of Baskin-Robbins, the granddaddy of exotic flavors. It's on the outskirts of the Square on Massachusetts Ave.

Baskin-Robbins is the dream come true for two brothers-in-law, Burton Baskin and Irvine Robbins. Their unique store with unique flavors grew to a franchise of over 2500 stores. The 31 choices are part of a 500 flavor rotation.

Among Baskin-Robbins classics are rocky road, peanutbutter and chocolate, fudge brownie, and every kid's favorite, bubble gum ice cream. The prices run from 90 cents to $2.00 and most flavors are of good supermarket quality barring a few delicious exceptions.

The fudge brownie has chunks of real brownie mixed into a thick chocolaty base, and the butter pecan is sweet and creamy with whole pecan halves.

Incidentally, Harvard Square also offers two Italian ice cream stores, also known as gelaterias. Gelateria Giusseppe and Caffe Paradiso, however, do not meet the Ice Cream Manufacturer's Association's standard stating ice cream must contain at least 10 per cent butter fat to be legally called ice cream.

The gelaterias serve a cream more of a frosting consistency, and, though scrumptious, it is not ice cream in the true sense of the word.

Despite its standing as the cultural mecca of the U.S., Harvard Square did not abandon childhood whims. The square still hears my scream, your scream, and all of our screams for ice cream.

It is ready to answer the call.

Winchester among America's 10 best, wins GH approval

During the American revolution, Winchester was filled with small shoe shops, partially a result of the booming leather industry in Woburn.

By GEORGE DERRINGER
Editor, The Winchester Star

Welcome to Winchester, called one of America's 10 best suburbs a few years ago by Good Housekeeping magazine.

Most residents say the town (never call it a city!) has gotten even better since. Always pretty, Winchester is making determined efforts to improve its appearance further.

Though only 15 minutes by train from North Station, Winchester retains the small-town flavor it had since colonial days. Most residents feel they "know everyone in town," though the population of around 24,000 makes it unlikely they do.

Little land remains for development so the population is unlikely to grow much in coming years. Basically a town of single-family homes, Winchester has one of the highest median incomes in the metropolitan area and one of the best-educated populations.

Civic pride is the hallmark of longtime residents. Townspeople are happy to say they live here and most are involved in civic or cultural efforts to improve the quality of life.

Winchester was part of the Waterfield Valley grant to Charlestown in 1634. More territory was granted later to create the new town of Wooborne. In fact, what is now Winchester was first called "South Woburn."

During the American Revolution, Winchester was filled with small shoe shops, partially a result of the booming leather industry in Woburn. More growth came in 1798 when the Middlesex Canal was built to link the Merrimac and Connecticut rivers. For 40 years, the canal bustled, carrying goods and people from Boston to the rural areas.

But the Boston and Lowell Railroad changed Winchester forever in 1836. A village sprang up quickly and in 1850, Winchester was incorporated despite opposition from Woburn, Medford and West Cambridge.

The new municipality was named for Col. William P. Winchester, a Watertown resident who never set foot in the town named for him. The colonel gave $3,000 to the town afterward, however.

In 1874, the town's reservoir system was created in the Middlesex Fells Reservation. The plan was hardly popular with everyone, but it still serves the town well, despite the lack of filtration in the system.

New residents should enjoy recreational facilities in the public area of the Fells but avoid any activity that could hurt the water supply.

The town hall, now undergoing a $4.2 million centennial renovation, was built in 1886. It served many functions over the years, including a library and the locale for plays and high school graduations. The annual Winton Club cabaret is held there each January.

Town growth has been steady with 15,081 residents in 1940, 15,567 in 1950, 20,193 in 1960, 20,701 in 1970 and 22,269 in 1980.

Pride in the public school system is almost universal. Comparative statistics from Scholastic Aptitude Tests, taken by more than 90 percent of Winchester High School students, demonstrate the superiority of the town's educational system.

The town had two junior high schools when children of the post-war "baby boom" were the right age but there is only McCall Junior High today.

The town has five elementary schools, including Muraco, Vinson-Owen, Lincoln, Ambrose and Lynch.

Parent involvement in each school is far above average and is coordinated through the Community Schools Association, which also supplies material for a bi-weekly "school page" in The Winchester Star.

Winchester center, the area surrounding the traffic rotary and the town common, serves as the focal point for the town. Within a few blocks are most government offices, businesses, restaurants, banks and professional offices.

Newcomers should become familiar with all the center offers but pay close attention to the posted parking limits. Enforcement is efficient.

Winchester has no real shopping malls but has largely limited itself to smaller businesses. However, several malls are nearby with the Burlington Mall, north on Cambridge Street and left after the Route 128 underpass, probably most popular with town residents.

Services, public and private, are good in Winchester. The public library is well-equipped and has a very active program for all ages. Full-time police, fire and ambulance crews are provided by the town.

The recreation department runs a full program as well. Details are in brochures and The Star. A swimming beach open only to town residents is located at Leonard Pool off Cross Street.

Private groups sponsor large programs in soccer, youth baseball and softball, basketball, hockey and tennis.

Senior citizens make up a larger proportion of the population than in most towns and the Jenks Senior Center is the focal point for their programs. Both the public Council on Aging and the private Winchester Seniors Association have headquarters at the Jenks Center.

SHRUBS

A Natural Union of Form and Function from Mahoney's

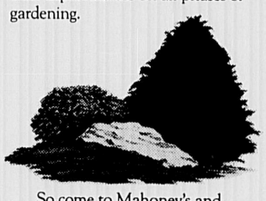
Shrubs are such familiar sights in most homes and gardens that very often the unique features of shrubs often get overlooked. Yet shrubs serve so many valuable functions that it would be hard to imagine landscaping without them.

Shrubbery is most often used as a landscaping foundation, defining space and giving the area shape. It can be used to draw attention to an area or to hide an unsightly view. Shrubs can even control wind and noise coming into your garden.

At Mahoney's, we sell nearly a quarter million trees and shrubs every year. From vividly colorful flowering shrubs to subtle textural ones, we have so many different kinds of shrubs that you're sure to find just the right plant for your needs.

Special care is taken at Mahoney's to insure that you get the healthiest plants possible. In fact, Paul Mahoney still insists on selecting all our shrubs personally, as he's done for the past twenty-five years. He sees to it that we do everything possible to make the plants and shrubs you buy at Mahoney's the highest quality plants in New England. We fertilize them every day and carefully monitor their growth, making sure that they stay full and healthy.

We have so many different kinds of shrubs to choose from, it's a little overwhelming. But at Mahoney's, we've simplified plant buying with easy-to-read signs to help you locate your shrubs and informative care sheets that come with every plant. We even have convenient information booths with trained horticultural staff ready to answer any questions and offer expert advice on all phases of gardening.



So come to Mahoney's and find out about shrubbery, or any other aspect of landscaping or gardening. Whether you're a seasoned pro or a first time gardener, you'll find Mahoney's a great resource.

Winchester boasts of its schools

now being expanded.

Cultural activities abound, ranging from summer concerts at the Mill Pond through theater groups which produce plays during the fall and spring. Winchester's proximity to Boston also allows residents to take advantage of all other cultural events in the area.

Winchester Hospital, opened in 1912, is the primary source of emergency health care. A source of pride for the town, the hospital has many opportunities for the large number of people who want to help.

The town is governed by a "representative town meeting" and led by an elected board of selectmen.

Most New England towns were originally governed by an annual town meeting of all citizens who cared enough to attend.

As the towns grew, however, many decided to elect town meeting "members" to simplify and shorten the process. Whether the strategy actually shortened the process is debatable, but it did simplify things.

Winchester has 192 town meeting members, with 24 from each of eight precincts of approximately equal population.

Selectmen meet at 7:30 p.m. Mondays. Their meetings are televised and extensively reported in the paper. Under state law, all meetings of government bodies are open to the public, although the public is not necessarily allowed to speak at all.

Winchester selectmen, however, reserve time for "matters from the audience" near the start of each weekly meeting.

A town manager, Chad Maurer, is the agent of the selectmen and is responsible for day-to-day functions of town government.

In short, Winchester would be a fine place to live if it were totally isolated from its surroundings. The fact that it remains a small town within the Boston metropolitan area only enhances its appeal.

Boston boasts zoos

Few things delight children as much as animals and, luckily, there's plenty of good animal-watching in Greater Boston.

Stone Zoo, or the Walter D. Stone Memorial Zoo as it's formally called, offers a large collection of primates. This Metro Boston Zoo offers a scenic setting for viewing giraffes, elephants, penguins, sea lions, baboons and the ever-popular monkey cage.

A four-story aviary houses over 100 tropical birds in simulated natural habitats complete with a pool, waterfall and exotic flora.

Children love to pet sheep, goats, horses and donkeys in the Animals Close-Up Building.

Discovery Hour, Tuesday and Thursday, 10 a.m. - 11 a.m., provides visitors with informative, fascinating information about many Stone Zoo species.

Also, the Zoo Interpreters Program (ZIP) offers special, daily walks and talks.

Stone Zoo is at 149 Pond St., next to Spot Pond Reservoir, in Stoneham. To reach it, take I-93 north to exit 8, then follow signs.

The zoo is open 9 a.m. - 5 p.m. daily. Donations are $2 adults, $1 children and senior citizens. Free parking and picnic grounds are available. For recorded information, call 438-3662.

The second and older Metro Boston Zoo is the Franklin Park Zoo. It's in a 500-acre park that borders Dorchester, Jamaica Plain and Roxbury. The park itself is Boston's largest public park and is considered one of the finest designs of the famous Frederick Law Olmstead.

The creation of the zoo began in 1911 and, while its fortunes have risen and fallen with the surrounding neighborhoods, the zoo is making a strong comeback.

Franklin Zoo attractions include A Bird's World, featuring an outdoor flight cage, a waterfowl pond and four distinct habitats for the birds.

The Children's Zoo, where kids can pet sheep, goats, cows and other domestic animals is also very popular.

Franklin Park Zoo is open 9 a.m. - 5 p.m. daily and admission is free. The Children's Zoo is open 9 a.m. - 4 p.m. and admission is $1. For more information, call 442-2002.

The Drumlin Farm Nature Center is a place children love to visit over and over again. Drumlin Farm, which also serves as headquarters for the Massachusetts Audubon Society, is a demonstration farm complete with gardens, horses, pigs, chickens, cows, owls and other barnyard fowl. There are fields, walking trails, ponds, and, often a hands-on activity, such as milking. Public workshops and classes are offered for all ages.

Drumlin Farm is on South Great Road, Route 117, in South Lincoln. Admission is $4 adults, $2 children and senior citizens. Drumlin Farm is open year-round Tuesday - Sunday 9 a.m. - 5 p.m. For more information, call 259-9807.

Benson's Animal Park is a zoo, a circus and an amusement park all rolled into one.

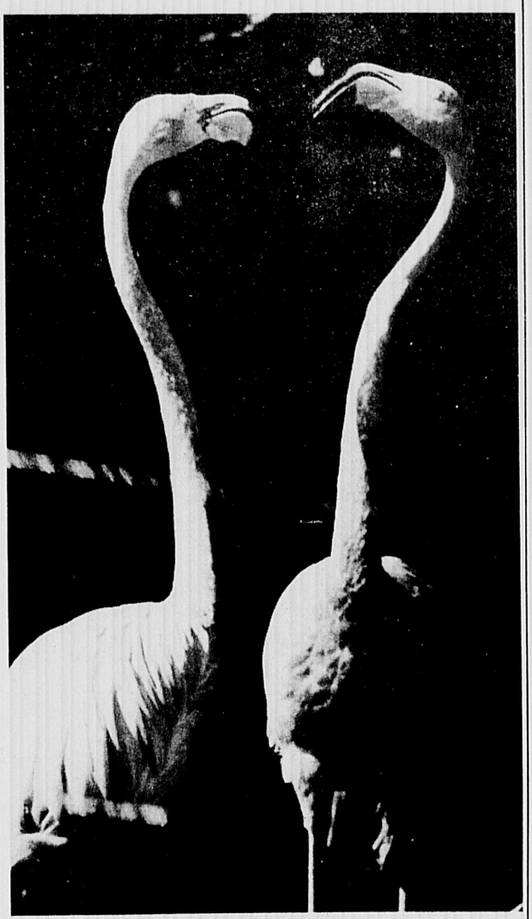
The 350-acre site of this 65 year-old park houses lions, giraffes, penguins, flamingos, macaws, cockatoos, spotted deer, monkeys and baboons — many in their natural habitats. There is a petting zoo as well.

One long-running hit is the elephant show, which is presented twice a day and is the only one of its kind in New England. The 12-minute show features Asian elephants who perform about 25 tricks.

Incidentally, visitors can also take short elephant rides for $1 per person.

Also of interest is the chimpanzee animal act, featuring the oldest performing chimps in America. Their 12-minute act of motorcycle-riding, aerial acrobatics and ground gymnastics is staged three times daily.

animals



In addition, there are animal demonstrations and educational programs.

More than a dozen amusement rides range from daring ferris wheels and roller coasters to paddle boats, a merry-go-round and kiddie rides.

Benson's Animal Park is on Route 111 in Hudson, NH, 45 miles northwest of Boston. It's open daily 10 a.m. - 6 p.m. Admission for adults and children is $6.95. Call (603) 882-2481.

Southwick's Wild Animal Farm in Mendon, supplies zoos all over the country and contains the largest collection of zoo animals in New England. Hundreds of animals from all over the world, including lions, tigers, zebras, chimpanzees and antelopes, are featured.

The 300-acre farm also contains picnic areas in the oak grove and kiddie rides.

Southwick's Wild Animal Farm, 35 miles south of Boston, is located off Route 16. To reach it, take the Mass. Pike to exit 11A (I-495 south), then to exit 20, Milford, to 16 west and follow signs.

The farm is open daily 10 a.m. - 6 p.m. through October. Admission is $5 adults, $4 children. For more information, call 883-9182.

Aid available in health emergency

By DIANE REZENDES

What would you do if, while exploring the kitchen, your toddler spilled boiling water on herself? Or if your grandmother fell down and broke her hip?

You may put off preparing for a medical emergency, but should one occur, you could waste precious minutes—or in some cases, seconds—fumbling for a phone number. You cannot predict when an emergency will arise, so common sense dictates that you be prepared—just in case.

According to Dr. Michael Erdos, director of Emergency Walk-in Services at Symmes Hospital in Arlington, the most effective thing you can do is to take the steps necessary to prevent such an emergency, or at least to minimize its chances of occuring.

For instance, in families with small children, keep all drugs, chemicals and cleaners well out of reach of curious hands. Even good things must be monitored. Little ones may not realize that sweet-tasting vitamins should not be eaten as candy. Vitamins A and D, as well as many minerals, can be toxic in high doses.

The problems older people face are often related to their ability to walk unassisted. Common emergencies would include falls and fractures as well as head trauma. Many of these falls are associated with getting up during the night, when one is not fully awake and it is easier to trip or lose balance. It would be a good idea to remove scatter rugs and other objects likely to cause someone to fall.

Even if you have taken every preventive measure you know, an injury still can occur. What should you do?

Except for something superficial or obviously minor, Dr. Erdos suggests calling a medical professional or going to the walk-in service, even if in doubt as to how serious the accident is.

"If anyone is unsure, please have them come in and avoid problems," he said. "We'd rather see a hundred minor cases, evaluate them and send them home than miss one major problem."

Be aware that, except for a life-threatening situation, the hospital cannot treat children under legal age without parental permission. When parents go out and leave the children on their own or with a babysitter, they should leave a note giving permission to treat or evaluate the child in case of an emergency.

Leave a list of important phone numbers, and keep it readily available for sudden use. Following is a list of phone numbers to keep handy, or even commit to memory.

Very residential
Belmont is 'retreat' for 27,000

By AMY B. CRANE

Belmont residents proudly describe their town as a bedroom community where residents retreat thankfully at the end of a long work day in the city.

A town of 27,000 people, Belmont is very residential and has a high concentration of elderly residents.

Its tax base is mostly residential, with the commercial-industrial base confined to retail businesses in the four commercial centers: Belmont Center, Waverley Square, Cushing Square and Harvard Lawn.

The town has very little in the way of new development going, and residents seem to want to keep it that way.

Garden apartments or large commercial buildings bring organized protests from residents and don't fare too well at the hands of town officials.

Belmont is a town officials describe as "land poor," one reason for the lack of development here.

The lack of land is also causing the town problems in attempts to provide for its aging and less affulent population.

The town has tried several times in the last three years to allot sites for low-income and elderly housing.

While elderly housing usually meets with support, most residents are totally against low-income housing here.

Belmont's lack of land is also causing a dilemma in cemetery space.

Belmont residents are very Belmont-oriented and are proud of their town, which has become quite affluent in recent years.

The cemetery on Grove Street is running out of room and officials are seeking a new site, but with little success.

The conservation commission and many residents are against taking open park land for either housing or a cemetery because Belmont has so little land to begin with.

Besides lack of land, the town is struggling with traffic problems caused by development in neighboring Cambridge.

Construction of a T-stop at Alewife in Cambridge near East Belmont three years ago has brought new development and a difficult traffic problem to the area.

Many commuters are cutting through Belmont streets in an effort to avoid congestion on Route 2 near Alewife.

Officials are wrestling with the problem and are not getting much help from state officials.

The board of selectmen recently appointed a residents' traffic advisory committee to develop a town-wide traffic control plan.

Belmont residents are very Belmont oriented and are proud of their town, which has become quite affulent in recent years.

Home prices average in the $250,000 range — prices which make it difficult for all but the upper middle class or wealthy to relocate here.

Belmont has a number of closely knit clubs and church groups.

The business community is working on expanding the fledgling chamber of commerce, which was founded last year.

Residents prize what little open land they do have access to such as the Habitat Institute for the environment and Rock Meadow park.

The town has three elementary schools, one middle school and one high school. The school department is undertaking an ambitious renovation program that would — if approved — bring two elementary schools new gymnasiums, more classroom space and a host of other amenities.

The town has a representative town meeting form of government with a three-member board of selecmen and a six-member school committee.

The town is generally conservative. The first woman selectman — Anne Paulsen — was elected this year.

Officials are doing their best to update what has been a volunteer-oriented town goverment by hiring an executive secretary, who will be the first professional manager with town-wide responsibilities. The executive secretary should be on board Jan. 1, 1987.

In short, Belmont residents feel pride in their town and are struggling to save it from forces beyond its control while dealing with the town's own limitations.

Towns offer teens lots of activities

By DIANE REZENDES

"Whaddaya wanna do?"

"I dunno. Whadda you want to do?"

"I dunno. There's nothin' to do."

It can be tough for a teenager who's too young to drive, too young to work, too old to play kiddie games to be easily amused. It can be even worse for the kid who is new in town. Not only does he or she have to adjust to a new town and new school, but also to begin to make new friends.

What follows is a town-by-town listing of places with extensive programs for teenagers.

In addition to the places listed here, a person looking for interesting things to do can go a long way using a little imagination, the newspaper and the telephone.

Teens don't have to confine their activities to those offered specifically for their particular age group. If a young person has a special interest, he or she could look into organiztions which share that interest—Arlington Friends of the Drama or Liberty Track Club, for instance.

Nor do young people need to confine activities to their home town. Less than 10 miles away and easy to get to, Boston is a wealth of fun, interesting and educational things to do. Many are free and inexpensive for teens.

One of the best deals around is Boston Community Boating. For only $1, girls and boys, age 11-17 years old can learn to sail on the Charles River. The only requirements are parental permission and proof that the young person can swim 75 yards. By the way, that $1 covers the whole summer. The boathouse is within walking distance of Charles St. Station on the MBTA red line, and adjacent to the bike path. What could be better?

Another source of ideas is the newspapers. Newspapers constantly receive information about things to do. Read "What's Up?" or the Globe's "Calendar" supplement. Read with a pen in hand to circle good ideas, and don't be afraid to use the telephone to get further information.

There are also many good volunteer opportunities in the area. Not only is it good for a resume, but many volunteer jobs enable the volunteer to do good work and have fun.

On Wednesdays, the Globe lists volunteer opportunities.

Sometimes, when one thinks of volunteering, one thinks of stuffing envelopes for a mailing or serving supper at a soup kitchen, and some volunteers do that. But volunteering can mean doing something more unexpected, something young people might not consider.

Older teens can serve as ushers for some plays, dance performances and concerts. A bonus of this kind of volunteering is seeing the show for free.

Occasionally the city of Boston needs young people to act as guides for walking tours of the city. This is a great job for someone who likes history, has a flair for public speaking, and wants to meet people from all over the world.

Other places to call would be hospitals and nonprofit organizations. Smaller nonprofits are often understaffed and would welcome the time and talents of a young person.

Some churches have very active youth groups, usually oriented toward social activities and religious education. St. Eulalia's in Winchester is typical. It sponsors dances, ski trips, parent and teen nights, suppers with guest speakers and league basketball. Most youth groups are open to all who wish to go to meetings. Now is a good time to join because the church activity year coincides with the beginning of the school year.

There are plenty of things to do, but it's up to young people to seek them out.

Cool, clear Mystic Lakes offer fun in the sun

By ANNE MARIE REIDY

On any sunny day, the Mystic Lakes are crowded with people running, biking, playing Frisbee, sailing, windsurfing, wading, swimming, having cookouts and enjoying.

The lakes are one of the most popular MDC reservations in the area, according to the Mystic District office staff.

People from nearby towns pack Sandy Beach on a steamy summer day.

And three private boat clubs — Winchester, Medford, and Tufts University — frequently send a small flotilla out on the relatively calm waters to join windsurfers, canoeists and rowboaters.

But how safe is the water in the lakes? And can people safely eat the fish they catch?

Well, there are problems with the water quality from time to time, say MDC and other state officials.

And both Upper and Lower Mystic Lakes are a long way from where they'd like to see them.

But both lakes are listed as Class B — suitable for swimming, fishing and other water sports — by the Division of Water Pollution Control, says Paul DePietro, an MDC water quality engineer.

Only one water classification is higher — Class A, considered drinkable water.

"That grading measures a lot of water quality standards: bacterial levels, temperature, pH, dissolved oxygen, turbidity, aesthetics," he explains.

"Bacterial levels — particularly coliform — happen to be what they look at as far as swimming is concerned."

The MDC has a regular sampling program for fecal coliform bacteria levels at Sandy Beach, Mystic District staffers say.

If weekly samples show too high a level, the beach is closed to swimming.

Sandy Beach has been closed fairly frequently in the past because of contamination, due to overflowing, rain-swollen sewer systems in Stoneham, Woburn and Winchester dumping raw sewage into some of the Upper Mystic's feeder streams.

But much of that problem is slowly being solved, thanks to sewer rehabilitation programs in all three communities, DePietro says.

"As the towns clean up some of their sewer problems, it will improve the water quality at Sandy Beach," he explains. "The heart of the problem is what's coming out of the watershed."

When the beach is closed, notices are posted near the lifeguard stations. Information on the most recent water testing can be obtained from the MDC by calling 438-5690.

The MDC encourages swimming only at the Sandy Beach area, where lifeguards are on duty 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., June 16 to Labor Day.

The restriction is based on safety reasons other than water quality: sailboats and windsurfers are banned from the marked swimming area.

A firm answer on the safety of eating fish caught from the Mystic Lakes is harder to get.

Even the experts aren't sure — in part, because so little testing has been done.

In 1982, a study by the Mystic Rivershed Assn. and the state showed there was phosphorus, ammonia nitrogen, nitrate, nitrogens, iron, manganese, copper, aluminum, zinc, lead, arsenic, cadmium and chromium in the lower part of the lake.

About the same time, people fishing in the Mystic Lakes were reeling in suckers, calico bass, and sunfish with fungus infections and strange red welts on their sides.

That raised a lot of questions about the health of the lake and its inhabitants.

At the time, Nancy Fratoni, in charge of the Upper Mystic Lake studey, said most of the heavy metals and PCBs were found in the lake bottom.

She said the fish had not been tested for PCB or heavy metal contamination, and added she would not advise a steady diet of fish caught in the lakes.

Nothing much has changed in the last three years, state officials say.

"There's been nothing done about the fish lesions since then," says DePietro. "The MDC does not have any funds for basic water quality issues; we don't even have any discretionary funds for weed control or whatever.

"It would take at least $50,000 to begin catching fish in the lakes and testing them for PCBs and the heavy metals," he says.

Eben Chesebrough, an environmental bio-engineer for the state Department of Environmental Quality Engineering (DEQE), was reluctant to advise people on eating Mystic lakes fish.

"The situation is generally not significantly different than it was in 1982," Chesebrough says. "We haven't sampled it the way Nancy Fratoni did, and there is no information on the fish since then.

"There was a very high nitrogen level in the lake at the time as well," he adds. "Nitrogen feeds [lake-choking aquatic] weeds — and in high enough levels, it can be unhealthy.

"Amonia nitrogen in very high levels can be toxic to any living thing," Chesebrough says. "And the Mystic Lakes were approaching unhealthy levels, by the study in 1982, and a previous one DEQE did — I think it was in 1976."

Even if testing is done on the fish, it may be some time before anyone can say with surety whether it's safe to eat Mystic Lakes fish or not, he adds.

Mystic Lakes are a valued resource

"There are no established standards for some of those heavy metals, " Chesebrough explains.

"But, on the merits, if you catch a fish that doesn't look healthy, common sense should tell you to throw it back in," he advises.

As far as swimming, Chesebrough didn't think the presence of the heavy metals should be a great concern.

"Most of the metals are in the sediment, and the very bottom waters of the lake," he explains. "In the oxygenated surface waters, they are in very small concentrations.

"I can't say for certain, because who really knows what the threshold is?" Chesebrough says. "But I would say the major problems for swimmers at the Mystic Lakes right now is aesthetic rather than health; right now, it's just not very appetizing-looking water."

That leaves the folks who love the Mystic Lakes just three things to do:

- Keep enjoying the lakes;
- Use common sense about swimming and fishing if in doubt about conditions; and,
- Work with local and state officials and environmental groups to get the lakes cleaned up and into better shape.

Then, the Upper and Lower Mystic Lakes can really be the sparkling gems they seem to be on a sunny summer day.

Where, what, when

BY ANNE MARIE REIDY

The Upper and Lower Mystic Lakes have always been a great recreational resource for Arlington, Winchester, and Medford — towns ringing the lakes — and surrounding communities.

Even before there were colonists here, Squaw Sachem and her tribes migrated to the shores of the lakes to spend their summers.

Today, under the jurisdiction of the Metropolitan District Commission's Parks Division, the lakes provide boating, swimming, fishing, running, picnic and cookout areas — even though most of the lakeshore property in all three bordering communities is privately held.

At Upper Mystic Lake, in Winchester, the MDC runs Sandy Beach.

Staffed with lifeguards 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. every day from June 16 through Labor Day, the beach has bathhouses and bathrooms. There is no admission charge, and free, but limited parking.

Beachgoers can bring their own picnics, or have a cookout along the lake shores just off the beach area. Ice cream trucks frequently stop by the beach on hot days.

There is also a playground area next to the beach, and small-scale Frisbee® , touch football and other games are allowed in the nearby grassy areas. On breezy days, kite flyers often visit the relatively treeless area near the beach.

Groups can use the area for large-scale cookouts or picnics, but groups of 25 or more should obtain a permit for $5 from the MDC's Mystic District office. Call 438-5690.

With another permit, for $25, picnickers can have alcoholic beverages at their festivities.

That permit is required for any size group, say staffers at the MDC Mystic District office. If a large group — usually 100 or more — seeks an alcohol permit, the MDC may require that a police detail be hired.

Sailboats, windsurfers and canoes are permitted on Upper Mystic Lake, but there are no public docks or landings in Arlington, Winchester, or Medford.

There is public access to the lakeside for fishing via some Arlington conservation land on the Route 3/Mystic st. side, says Mike Wright, that town's Director of Properties and Natural Resources.

"You can easily launch a small boat or a windsurfer from the MDC shore along the Medford side," Wright says. The MDC owns a long stretch of lakefront along Mystic Valley parkway, from Winchester, where the swimming beach is, down into Medford.

Lower Mystic Lake does not have any public swimming areas, although swimming bans are not heavily enforced, and many private property owners along the lake do have small beaches or docks.

However, in addition to allowing sailboats and windsurfers and canoes, small motorboats are allowed to use Lower Mystic.

Each town has places to play

By DIANE REZENDES

So you're bored. Maybe you're new in town and don't know what's available to do around here. Or maybe you've lived here all your life and just never paid attention to what's around.

Summer vacation has come and gone, but you still have some free time — what are you going to do with it?

The recreation department has some answers. Sure, you think, and a mental image comes to mind: a bunch of kids sitting around in a park knotting hemp or shooting hoops while the grounds bake at 90 degrees.

Maybe that's what recreation was at one time, but as this society becomes increasingly leisure-oriented, recreation departments are responding with more and varied programs.

Ken Cereghino, recreation director for Winchester, says he is "trying to develop a more contemporary approach." In fact, Winchester has no summer playground program at all.

"Recreation in the '80s is not limited to sports and games," he adds. "We're targeting specific groups of people and providing physical, social and cultural outlets."

Debbie Hayes, assistant director for recreation in Arlington, agrees with Cereghino and adds, "People think recreation is for kids, but we have to go with the population, and there are fewer kids now.

"Four of our schools have closed, and the general population has decreased. Our biggest group now is people in their 20s and 30s. So we've closed down some of the playgrounds and added programs for adults."

In the late '70s, 18 playgrounds were open. In 1985 only six offered programs for young people, yet 11 age- and interest-specific day camps have been added.

Like Winchester, Arlington is offering fewer general programs while offering more programs targeted to specific groups of people.

One of the toughest groups to provide programs for is adolescents. Dan Brosnan, director of Arlington Recreation, attributes the difficulty to "the fickleness of that group. They have nothing to do, but don't know what they want."

One program which has been successful is Arlington's "Workreation."

Young people ages 12 to 17 work in the town. Some do maintenance — others serve as junior counselors for programs.

They are "paid" in credits which may be used for recreation programs. Each hour worked earns an hour in any recreation program which normally charges a fee. In addition, the kids gain valuable work references as well as experience.

Belmont directs its efforts for teens toward more traditional programs. William McKenney explains, "The Belmont Recreation Department provides an oportunity for each of the town's residents to participate in an enjoyable activity during their leisure."

The department provides facilities for a summer Recreation Center for younger teens at the Wellington School. Movies are shown nightly, and the 13- to 15-year-olds play volleyball, frisbee, table hockey and basketball.

In Winchester, a seven-week program offers a different focus for each week.

Individuals may sign up for from one to seven weeks. Themes include: acting and theater, bicycle trips to Martha's Vineyard, canoe trips, lacrosse, mountaineering, television production and photography workshops.

In addition to recreation deptartment programs, area residents can enjoy boating on Spy Pond and Mystic Lakes, where the Massachusetts District Commission operates Sandy Beach for summer swimming. The Winchester Fells is off-limits to swimmers and fishermen. Arlington's Menotomy Rocks Park has a vita course and a pond for skating and fishng.

Each town also has privately operated youth programs for baseball, soccer, hockey and other sports.

The following listings are highlights of some recreation deptartment programs. For further information call Arlington Recreation at 646-1000; Belmont Recreation at 484-2310; Watertown Recreation at 924-2074 and Winchester Recreation at 721-7125.

Childcare offered by local organizations

By DIANE BRONCACCIO

New families moving to the area have many options when it comes to childcare.

The area is rich in family day care and day care centers, nursery schools, babysitters plus afterschool, youth and recreational programs for children from infancy to 12 years old.

The question is how to choose the best facility.

The following suggestions come from Christine Rowan of the Watertown Free Public Library in her excellent reference, Childcare: A Resource Handbook, which sells for $1 at Watertown Free Public Library.

First, parents should meet the day care workers to decide whether or not the children will be comfortable with them. Do they seem to understand children? Do they share the parents' concerns about nutrition, creativity and discipline? Do they invite parent participation?

Second, parents should consider the physical space of the center. Is it suitable for both indoor and outdoor play, for active group play as well as for quiet, individual pastimes? Is it clean, well-ventillated, safe and well lit? Is there enough variety of play materials available that both entertain and teach children valuable skills?

Other criteria that parents might consider includes: the children's age groups; the teacher/child ratio; the teachers' qualifications, experience and competence; how the staff feels about noise, messiness, sharing and quarreling; what kind of meals or snacks, if any, are available and how often are they served; how are toilet needs handled; and what is the center's philosophy and goals.

Babysitting

Babysitting refers to short-term care for the children, often in the family home, with pay based on hourly fees. Here are some area babysitter services.

Childcare Resource Center, 24 Thorndike St., Cambridge, provides assistance in setting up playgroups, babysitting exchanges and child-care centers. The center provides a wealth of other information for parents, including listings on day care centers, family day care providers, nursery schools and after-school programs. Call 547-9861, 9 a.m. - 5 p.m.

International Homemakers, P.O. Box 701, Brookline, 02146, offers babysitting services for children of all ages at the rate of $7 per hour, with a three-hour minimum, for one to five children. Reservations are requested seven to 10 days in advance. Call 566-7901.

Parents in a Pinch, offers babysitting for children of all ages and can be called on short notice. Wages range from $7 to $9.50 per hour depending on the time of day and the number of children. Call 739-KIDS.

The Parent Connection, 1210 Mass. Ave., Arlington, a resource center and support network for parents, offers workshops plus babysitter and day care referral service. Membership is $25; the parent network only is $5. Call 641-2229.

University Home Services, Room 207, 111 Washington St., Brookline, offers overnight sitting for newborns and children of any age. The fee for one to two children is $57 per 24-hour period, with a 24-hour minimum. Advance reservations are advised. Call 277-1743.

Warmlines, 492 Waltham St., West Newton, provides a resource center, with files on day care centers, play groups, nursery schools and babysitting co-ops. Call 244-6843.

Family day care

Family day care is the supervision of one to six children in the home of a registered family day care provider. Usually, providers serve snacks or lunch but do not provide transportation.

Providers are licensed by the Office for Children, which certifies that the provider has met the minimum requirements for operating a family day care home. Therefore, parents should be sure to plan an initial interview with the prospective provider.

A current list of registered family day care providers is offered free through the Massachusetts Office for Children.

For Arlington and Winchester, call 729-4530.

For Newton, call 965-9810.

The Robbins Library, at 700 Mass. Ave., Arlington, posts an extensive list of the latest nurseries, day care centers and family care providers in the Arlington region. Also, the Belmont Memorial Library, 336 Concord Ave., post current lists of providers and day care facilities. In Newton, Watertown and Winchester, the public libraries carry day care and nursery information in their reference sections.

Town meetings continue

A New England institution valued by many as the closest they will get to pure democracy is the town meeting.

Alexis de Tocqueville, on visiting developing America many years ago, observed, "Town meetings are to liberty what primary schools are to science; they bring it within the people's reach, they teach men how to use and how to enjoy it."

The Arlington, Belmont and Winchester town meetings are representative as opposed to open, meaning that registered voters by precinct choose their representaives who will sit as town meeting members.

Watertown held town meetings until 1981, when it replaced its 65 town meeting members with a nine-member town council and a full-time town manager.

Unlike town meeting members, the town councillors meet with the town manager twice a month and in special sessions when necessary.

The town councillors — a council president, four at-large councillors and four district councillors — are elected to two-year terms at a salary of $1,800 each.

The town manager is appointed by the council.

As in town meetings, residents are entitled and encouraged to attend town council meetings and inject their views into any discussion of town matters.

In small towns the meetings are open and on the announced day every voter is able to come and speak his mind and vote on zoning bylaws, budgets and other matters.

Town meetings are always held in the spring — the annual meeting — as well as at other times as may be needed. Notice is posted and advertised well in advance and a warrant, an agenda of articles, is prepared.

The meetings are run by a moderator, a presiding officer usually elected by the townspeople. He must be an expert in parliamentary procedure to keep order in the meeting as debate proceeds. He must see that articles are handled correctly.

The town clerk is the record-keeper of the meeting, recording all votes and keeping permanent town records of the actions.

Many town boards and committees make presentations to a town meeting. A finance committee, sometimes called a warrant committee, reviews the money and budget articles and has recommendations ready.

The selectmen, planning and redevelopment boards and school committees don't always agree, and they try to convince town meeting members to support their own positions. Some of these other boards report on the non-money articles.

The meeting is conducted according to parliamentary manner and protocol. A quorum is determined, committees give reports, articles are read, motions have to be properly made and voted, withdrawn, reconsidered or whatever.

A town meeting sets towns apart from cities which have mayors and elected city councils, often well-paid and full-time. Town government is government by people who are elected or chosen to serve, often at no pay or for a stipend.

FLOSSING FACTS

Q. I'm a little confused about the type of floss to use and how to use it.

A. You should clean your teeth with dental floss at least once a day. The best time is after brushing at the end of the day. Slip the floss gently between the teeth and floss up and down each side until the floss makes a squeaking noise. This motion removes the invisible buildup of plaque. Unwaxed floss, does the job best. Also be sure to slide the floss carefully under the gum margin of each tooth. If you need more help your dentist or hygienist can provide a step by step demonstration.

Towns reflect history

With the founding of the Massachusetts Bay Colony in 1630, settlers moved out into the countryside as land grants were awarded by the general court. Some of the area which now includes Arlington, Belmont and Winchester was part of Cambridge and Charlestown.

Much of the land was deeded to Cambridge in 1639 by Squaw Sachem, widow of Chief Nanepashemet, for 21 coats, 19 fathoms of wampum, three bushels of corn and a coat every winter.

The deed is said to have been signed on the land which Squaw Sachem kept for herself, along Mystic Lakes in the area of the present Winchester Country Club; or in the section of Cambridge Street, Winchester, between Church Street and upper Mystic Lake.

More than 200 years later West Cambridge, which became known as Arlington, was whittled in size as the communities of Winchester and Belmont were created.

Arlington was first settled in 1635. The town was variously called Menotomy, the Northwest Precinct and Second Parish of Cambridge before the town was incorporated as West Cambridge in 1807.

Land was taken from this town for Winchester in 1850 and for Belmont in 1859.

West Cambridge's last name change occurred in 1867 when the Town of Arlington was incorporated. It is said that the name was picked in honor of the new national cemetery in Virginia. It also helped that the name began with "A," giving the town an advantage in political convention nominations which were made alphabetically.

Belmont was incorporated in 1859 after a six-year battle for approval in the legislature. The towns of West Cambridge, Watertown and Waltham fought the incorporation, but finally lost. Two-and-a-half square miles of West Cambridge in the present Belmont Center and Belmont Hill area, was taken from West Cambridge.

The name Belmont was supposedly chosen because China trade merchant John P. Cushing agreed to help finance the incorporation drive if the new community was named for his estate, "Bellmont."

Winchester was settled as Waterfield in 1638. Its present name was chosen 1850 when the village, then known as South Woburn, was incorporated.

The name of Winchester was chosen to honor Boston merchant William P. Winchester of Watertown, a colonel of the Independent Company of Cadets, known now as the First Corps of Cadets. He gave the town $3,000 in appreciation of the honor. His family gave the town a portrait and silver bowl after Winchester's death.

Plan carefully for home restoration

By DIANE BRONCACCIO

Some of the finest and most famous architecture in the country is here in New England.

Area cities and towns which were settled in Colonial times have an abundance of historic, antique and one-of-a-kind vintage homes in a variety found nowhere else. In fact, 47 percent of area housing was built before 1940.

Some houses have been well-preserved, but others have been badly neglected. Worse yet, according to restoration experts, are those which have lost valuable original detailing in the name of remodeling or "modernization."

"There are two kinds of old home buyers," said John L. Worden, III, president of the Arlington Preservation Fund. "The first are those who went looking specifically for an antique house; the second are people who just stumbled across them. The first group, since they knew what to look for, are probably going to be linked to the proper resources for restoration.

"The second group, while they may have an appreciation for what they've bought, may not know how to go about it. In an effort to do-it-themselves, they may do some things to greatly impair the value of an antique building."

Worden defines an antique house as built before 1910.

"A historic or architecturally significant house, however, such as one built by Frank Lloyd Wright or a good example of art deco architecture could also be built in a later period."

One of the major mistakes homeowners make, in Worden's opinion, is installing vinyl or aluminum siding on an old house.

"If the house already has a condition — such as ants, termites, wet rot or dry rot — and you cover it with siding, that stuff can be working away in there, and yet the outside of the house will look fine — at least until something falls down.

"Aesthetically, the trouble with siding is that it is typically done with no regard for the architecture of the house — and there are some horrible examples around. A lot of detail, like brackets and corner boards and different decorative elements went in to make the whole a pleasing prospect to the original beholder. The typical aluminum siding guy just comes in and knocks all that stuff off and just makes it one tight 'skin' all the way around the building. If someone wants to put that all back the way it should be, they run into tremendous expense."

"Renovation and restoration are two different things," said architect John Coons, senior partner of Sasaki Associates in Watertown. "Restoration requires fluency in the historic period of the house — knowing what the original paint colors were and so forth. Historic research would be one of the first things to do.

"The next thing would be to look for a good contractor." Research, Coons emphasized, should come first.

"You'd be at a disadvantage if you first come to the architect, contractor or professional builder without any previous study," he says.

"Ask for references, see work that he's done. The work itself speaks louder than anything he can tell you that he's done. Also, talk with him to see if the proper chemistry exists between you — that chemistry is as important as the contractor's achievements and abilities."

Coons has an antique home in Concord, which he has been restoring over the past six years.

"It's an ongoing project," he explained.

"I don't think restoring necessarily improves the property value of residential property unless the neighborhood supports it. Much of restoration and renovation is not done from the point of good investment, but from personal pleasure.

"It's a labor of love, a personal interaction with the house," he stated.

For those who want help in taking the first steps toward renovation, many resources are available.

The Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities (SPNEA) has an archives at its Boston headquarters, 141 Cambridge St., with documentation about New England's streets and buildings. Nearly 500,000 photographs and drawings from local history, from the 1840s to the 1930s are on file. The self-indexing files, classified by localities, building names, street names and architectural period should be helpful to any old house researcher. Generally, the archive's services are free of charge.

The SPNEA Conservation Center, 185 Lyman St., Waltham, offers professional consulting services for individual properties.

Staff members can be hired to come to the home to assess what's original, what's been added on to the house, what condition are things in, what can be repaired, what needs to be remodelled.

They can even analyze what kind of original paint or wallpaper was on the walls for those who want to restore their homes as authentically as possible.

The Conservation Center also offers furniture workshops, which restore valuable pieces for museums and for private individuals.

For more information, call 891-1985.

The Boston Society of Architects, 305 Newbury St., offers a free referral service for those seeking professionals who are qualified to do home restorations. For referrals, call 267-5175.

Also, the BSA Bookstore, 66 Hereford St., offers a rich selection of books on restoration.

Preservationist John Worden highly recommends The Old House Journal Magazine, on file at the Robbins Library in Arlington, as a good starting point for a resident considering renovation.

The Arlington Preservation Fund offers Arlington residents low-interest loans to finance restoration processes.

The loans are for exterior work, and the average loans have been under $10,000. Interested parties should write to the Arlington Preservation Fund at Post Office Box 493, Arlington 02174, for an application and further details.

LASTING VALUE, CUSTOM WORKMANSHIP, AND COMFORT THAT CAN'T BE MASS-PRODUCED

If mass-produced furniture doesn't satisfy your individual tastes, or doesn't provide the support, seating comfort and durability you want, Creative Comfort offers an alternative:

Your own unique combination of design, fabric (over 1000), wood, cushioning, numerous sizes, and other custom options (including high back, or firm support); made with care in our own workshop with craftsmanship that is hard to find these days; using cushioning and finishing materials of unusually high quality, together with extremely solid construction.

All of this custom work and quality comes at a moderate price, because you buy it where it is made. Sofa shown is in low-to-mid $800's in oak and many fabrics.

You will really save on long-term costs. A complete new set of cushion covers for the sofa above in many quality fabrics cost only about $130, less than a quarter of normal reupholstering expenses. The frame should last a lifetime. In the long run, this is probably the least expensive furniture you could own.

Since this furniture isn't mass-produced, it isn't available in normal stores. It is only available at our workshop/showroom in Belmont (1½ miles straight off Route 2, or 15 minutes from Cambridge by bus or car). Free literature with prices mailed on request.

Watertown residents 32,000

By RICHARD MANUGIAN

Watertown, a 32,000-person community packed into 4.17 square miles just six miles northwest of Boston, is the 10th most densely developed city in Massachusetts.

Five quiet parks belie the town's density, however, and much Watertown land runs along the restful Charles River.

The town was established in 1630 and contains 21 historic landmarks.

Known for the familiarity and ethnic flavor of its neighborhoods, Watertown boasts a rich cultural mix of Armenian, British, Canadian, Greek, Irish, Italian and other nationalities.

As recently as 1970, a United States census listed nearly half of Watertown's residents as foreign-born or first-generation Americans.

Ethnic restaurants and social clubs abound, offering visitors a tremendous selection of food and cultures.

Watertown is also a fiercely political town whose residents typically involve themselves with elections on both local and higher levels.

The town's 18,000 registered voters are 60 percent Democrat, 25 percent independent and 15 percent Republican.

Years ago dominated by industry and manufacturing, Watertown today counts light manufacturing and high technology companies among its diverse economic base.

Watertown also boasts a public Metropolitan District Commission swimming pool.

Public schools say welcome

Watertown Public Schools

A person deciding upon a school setting for their children would do well to consider the Watertown Public Schools. Watertown provides services for all children from Kindergarten through Grade 12. There are five nicely located schools serving the K-6 population; two schools, located at opposite ends of our town, serving our 7th and 8th grade students; and one comprehensive high school providing a wide variety of offerings to grade 9-12.

The Watertown Public Schools Staff is a collection of highly qualified teachers with very superior credentials. Specialists serve students in a broad range of subjects and special services.

Our full day kindergarten suitably provides for the needs of today's youngsters. Challenging curricula, supported by the best materials available, are part of every program system wide.

Watertown's Special Education Program provides support and opportunity for students who may require a unique educational plan. In this area, prekindergarten through post-high school, services are made available wherever needed.

The Enrichment Program is designed to foster a broadening of normal classroom activity. The vast resources of this Greater Boston vicinity are explored for their potential to strengthen the learning environment.

Libraries, Guidance staff, a strong Music Program, Art, Physical Education, good class sizes, generous community financial support, and opportunities for citizens to become involved are some of the ingredients that make up this school system.

The Administration and Staff, dedicated to serving you and your family, invite you to visit the Watertown Public Schools and view some of the programs we offer to our students.

Welcome to Watertown!

Low-income housing sites back on agenda for fall town meeting

By GEORGE DERRINGER

Low- and moderate-income housing, the bugaboo of Winchester for the past several years, is back in the foreground.

Seven previously rejected sites for the state-mandated housing will be back on the agenda at the November town meeting.

The issue erupted again "like a bolt out of the blue," in the words of one selectman, Monday night during a regular meeting of the board of selectmen.

Despite the objection of Wade Welch, chairman of the board, selectmen have invited representatives of nearly every town board and committee related to the housing program to attend next Monday's meeting.

Those groups could include the planning board, the housing authority, the special town meeting committee on housing, the citizens advisory committee to the housing authority and the fair housing committee.

A letter from David Mortensen, chairman of the special study committee on low- and moderate-income housing formed by the spring town meeting, put Section 705 state-mandated housing back in the spotlight.

Mortensen said his committee voted unanimously to submit 16 articles for the fall town meeting.

Most controversial Monday were articles seeking town meeting authorization to put Section 705 family housing on seven town-owned sites previously rejected. Those sites are:

• The corner of Johnson Road and Amberwood Drive, currently land that could be used for an expansion of the Vinson-Owen School.

• The corner of Ridge and Lockeland Road, adjacent to the west site fire station.

• A site on Andrews Road.

• A site bounded by Brantwood and Horn Pond Brook roads, at the northern end of Sylvester Avenue.

• Another site on Horn Pond Brook Road.

• A site between Canal and Hemingway streets, rejected as recently as the spring town meeting.

• And a site on Washington Street, abutting Leonard Field.

In his letter, Mortensen refers to the sites as "alternative sites." The spring town meeting approved seven units of Section 705 housing at four

> "We're creating a rat's nest. As it is, the problem is one of communication. The last thing we need is more people involved," Deering said.

Dogs get off probation for barking

Kaiser and Kaiserina, two dogs owned by Mrs. Charles Atwood of 43 Swan Road, can stay.

The dogs were put "on probation" Aug. 4 during a public hearing by selectmen. Several neighbors, led by W.J. Smyly of 35 Swan Road, had complained about the dogs' barking.

Monday night, selectmen studied three complaints received by the dog officer during the past month. In two cases, the dogs were not barking when dog officer Nick Molea arrived.

In the third case, the male dog was whining inside the home but he had been castrated the same day to try to improve his disposition.

"If I were in that position, I might be whining also," said John Carr, an attorney representing Mrs. Atwood.

Selectmen agreed and dropped probation for the dogs, noting that the case could be brought again if problems reoccur.

Baptist condos denied

By MAUREEN QUINLAN

Eleven proposed condominiums will not be erected on the grounds of the First Baptist Church on the corner of Mt. Vernon and Washington streets.

The zoning board of appeals voted unanimously Tuesday night against building the condominiums, citing traffic congestion and safety as their main concerns.

A town meeting voted in May to rezone the land but the board of appeals has the power to vote on the use.

The denial was without prejudice which means lawyer Paul F. Amico may come before the board again and address several safety problems that concerned the board.

Questions were raised about lighting, traaffic congestion and noise.

Chairman Ferdinand S. Pacione said, "that's a very congested area traffic-wise.

"I have some grave concerns about the safety. I'm not satisfied," said Pacione.

Member John Looney agreed. "I have had concerns of safety all along," said Looney. "It could be a relatively positive use for the area. It was the will of the town to allow that conversion."

Looney suggested a denial without prejudice. He invited the developers to address the safety concerns and come before the board again.

Neighbor Mary Pronski of 128 Washington St. said, "I'm very much opposed to this. It's an extremely

Town dump fees raised

By GEORGE DERRINGER

Winchester "bit the bullet" Monday night and adopted new fees for use of the town's transfer station.

It costs the town $57 to haul a ton trash to the North Andover waste-to-energy plant and dispose of it there. It's no accident that the commercial haulers will be charged $57 a ton after Nov. 1.

Household refuse, however, will cost commercial haulers only $28.50 per ton for disposal, as will leaves, grass and wood chips.

Starting Sept. 22, however, the fee will be $57 a ton for tires, building demolition debris and brush.

Selectman Judie Muggia said the increase should cause only minimal effects on average householders, who usually pay $1 to $1.50 per bag to have their trash hauled.

The new regulations have a few question marks, however. Resident stickers, which now cost $4 for two years, would cost $10 for each vehicle for two years if the rules are not changed before September 1987.

Selectman Bob Deering objected to charging a fee for each vehicle. "It's not the number of cars that counts; it the amount of stuff," he said.

Mark Lombardi, another selectman, countered, "The way it works

Winchester gives statewide victors its majority vote

With no local contests on the ballot, Winchester voters in both parties voted for the eventual winners in statewide primary contests Tuesday.

Democrats

In the Democratic primary, Evelyn Murphy won support of 1,641 town voters while Gerard D'Amico got 852 votes. Murphy won statewide.

Jim Shannon got 1,586 votes in the primary for attorney general while JoAnn Shotwell got 786 votes. Shannon was an easy statewide winner.

A. Joseph DeNucci got 1,106 votes in primary race for state auditor wehile Maura Hennigan got 825 and Charles Yancey 252.

Joseph Langone III won support of 1,215 Winchester voters for the governor's council seat from the sixth district while Renato Mastrocola got 541 votes.

Paul Casey of Winchester, unopposed for the Democratic nomination to the state house of representatives, got 1,880 Winchester votes.

Incumbent Middlesex County district attorney Scott Harshbarger got 1,485 votes while challenger Stephen McGrail got 487.

Paul Sullivan led four candidates in the race for county commissioner, getting 681 votes. Bill Schmidt got 546, Barbara Auger-Collins 509 and Anthony Pini 260.

Sheriff John McGonigle won 1,484 votes in town while challenger Henry Sullivan got 545 votes.

In other uncontested Democratic primary results, Gov. Michael Dukakis won 1,978 votes, Michael Connolly 1,750 for secretary of state, Robert Crane 1,522 for state treasurer, Ed Markey 1,962 for Congress and Richard Kraus 1,682 for state senator.

A total of 2,579 Democratic voters cast ballots Tuesday.

Republicans

In the Republican primary, Winchester voters again voted for the winners in statewide races.

Greg Hyatt led three gubernatorial candidates, getting 173 votes. Royall Switzler got 155 and George Kariotis, who will probably be the party's nominee if the others drop out as promised, 151 votes.

Nick Nikitas got 489 votes for lieutenant governor. Two Republicans wrote in the name of Democrat Evelyn Murphy.

Rep. Bill Robinson got 438 votes for state auditor while Andrew Natsios, current chairman of the state GOP, got only 188.

Rep. Sherman "Whip" Saltmarsh of Winchester, unopposed in the primary, got 642 votes. Two Republicans voted for others. Saltmarsh will face Democratic challenger Casey in November's general election.

Edward Harrington, unopposed on the ballot, got 560 votes for attorney general. One Republican wrote in the name of Democratic candidate Shotwell.

In other uncontested primary races, Deborah Cochran got 493 votes for secretary of state, Joyce Hampers 541 for state treasurer and Albert Onessimo 479 for county commissioner.

A total of 732 Winchester Republicans voted in the primary election.

Selectmen united for town meeting on trash tonight

Selectmen will recommend that the town buy five trailers.

By GEORGE DERRINGER

Winchester selectmen will present a united front to tonight's town meeting.

On both questions to be faced by the elected body, selectmen unanimously endorsed the recommendations of town manager Chad Maurer.

To supply additional money for operation of the transfer station, selectmen will recommend taking $236,000 from the town's "free cash" to offset dramatic increases in the tipping fee at the waste-to-energy plant in North Andover.

"Free cash" is money raised by the town but not spent. The total is currently about $1.5 million.

Tipping fees at the refuse disposal plant will rise from about $32 per ton to $48 per ton, largely because the plant is reimbursed for the electricity it produces according to the amount utilities would pay to generate the same electricity at an oil-fired plant.

In a second article, selectmen will recommend that the town buy five trailers to haul its trash to North Andover.

In addition, they will recommend that the $155,750 needed to buy the trailers from the low bidder be financed over five years.

Originally, the town projected the fiscal 1987 budget using a fee of $11 per ton for hauling. The low bid this summer was $36 per ton and the only other bid was $28 per ton.

Town manager Maurer said a hauler has been found to haul the town's trailers to North Andover for $6 per ton in the first year and $6.45 per ton in the second year of a two-year contract.

Although financing the purchases over five years will cost the town around $23,000 in interest at 5 percent, the town's free cash is currently earning about six and one-half percent interest. Therefore, it makes better sense to finance a capital purchase, Maurer said.

Selectmen unanimously agreed Monday night. Earlier, a subcommittee of selectmen Mark Lombardi and Wade Welch reached the same conclusion.

In other action Monday, selectmen:

• Appointed Mike Saraco to the Wildwood Cemetery Advisory Committee. An opponent of the town charter provision which abolished cemetery commissioners, Saraco was largely responsible for creation of the advisory committee.

• Approved the Winchester Chamber of Commerce haunted house on Palmer Street from Oct. 24 to 31. The event will probably actually last one night less, according to Cathy Alexander, director of the group.

• Postponed consideration of a new downtown parking plan until next week.

• Granted an auction permit to Roger Houle of Seekonk for Sept. 27. Houle originally sought a permit for a Sunday auction at 18 Canal St. but selectmen said they opposed noisy events in residential neighborhoods Sunday mornings.

Speaking in opposition to the Sunday auction, selectman Mark Lombardi said, "If this goes through, if somebody on Swan Road or Myopia Hill wants to have an auction on Sunday, I can't vote against it."

• Decided to investigate the true cost to the town of making computer tapes and labels available to the public.

Such computer records are public records by law and the town may charge political parties only one cent per name for tapes and two cents per name for labels.

Selectmen were reluctant to charge a different rate for anyone else, including businesses, but decided to investigate the actual cost by selling one set of labels and monitoring the time and expense involved.

During the discussion, however, Lombardi said the town already has different rates for public records. It charges homeowners one price for a list of residents while charging businesses more.

• Heard a recommendation from selectmen Frank Sopper that bullet-proof vests be purchased for police officers. The vests cost about $220 each, Sopper said.

Selectman Wade Welch said the jackets are part of ongoing negotiations with the policemen's union and that they had "been taken off the table."

Later, Welch amended his statement. He said when policemen turned down their contract this year, all items were again placed on the negotiating table. He would not comment further.

• Held a brief debate about the role of selectmen. Sopper asked why policemen had to wait as long as six weeks this summer before getting paid for special details. The town manager said delayed payments by contractors had caused the problem.

Selectman Bob Deering wondered why a selectman, not the town manager, was approached with the problem. Sopper said he likes people to bring their problems to him.

GETTING AN APPRAISAL

A real estate agent can recommend a fair selling price for your home. You should be aware, though, that this is not an official appraisal conducted by a qualified appraisor. When should a homeowner get such an appraisal?

When selling your home, setting a fair value is the fastest and best way to market it. It's nice to have that official appraisal to help in evaluating price recommendations.

Another reason for hiring an appraiser is the matter of tax assessments. Many homeowners who felt their properties were overassessed were able to secure reductions after obtaining appraisals which supported their claims.

If a government plans to take your property by eminent domain, it might save you a good bit of money to hire an appraisor who is experienced in condemnation work. You stand a better chance of getting more money for your property in a court of law if you have a fully documented appraisal.

No. 1 in Winchester because we care. . . . It's more than just a business with us. . . . it's you and the professional service we provide for you that is the cornerstone of our continued success . . . that's why more buyers and sellers select ANN BLACKHAM & CO. to be their Real Estate broker.

Board denies request to change business on Main St.

By MAUREEN QUINLAN

The gas station at 562 Washington St. will keep on pumping gas.

Kenneth Binding, previous owner of the Mobil gas station, sold his business to John D'Orsi of Stoneham. D'Orsi hoped to tear down the gas station to replace it with a retail cookie shop which would also sell gingerbread houses.

The zoning board of appeals voted 2-1 against a special permit allowing D'Orsi to change the use of the business. The denial, they said, was without prejudice. Board member John Looney said the owner may come before the board within the next two years and address the board's concerns about safety and traffic impact.

After the meeting, D'Orsi's attorney, Lawrence Murray, walked back into the room enraged. "For shame on you, Jack Looney, for shame," he said, adding that two selectmen's comments wrongly influenced the board's decisions. Selectmen Mark Lombardi and Frank Sopper spoke against the proposal.

Earlier in the meeting, Murray gave a comparative analysis of the benifits of a cookie business in the residential area. He gave the board petitions signed by 22 abutters of the property in favor of the change.

Murray said, "It's a golden opportunity for the town." He said the current building is in disrepair and is "an eyesore."

Murray presented the board with architectural renderings of the proposed cookie business. The drawings allowed for six parking spaces for customers and employees and a loading dock with an entrance from Washington Street and an exit off Forest Street.

Looney said all special permits require safety considerations. Looney asked Murray and his client about the volume of business they project.

D'Orsi said 50 percent of the business will be done out of the building. D'Orsi said he works from his home and travels throughout the Commonwealth to shows to sell gingerbread homes.

"I want a Winchester address to get a couple of more dollars for the product. I love the exposure of the building," said D'Orsi.

Murray asked, "Would you rather have a gas station across the street from you for the next 50 years or a cookie store?"

Looney said he was not convinced the traffic and safety would be any better with the operation of a cookie store.

"Is the property use going to be less intrusive — the presentation to this point has not convinced me," said Looney.

Sopper voiced concern about the number of parking spaces. Sopper said on-street parking would cause problems. D'Orsi said he expected to have three to five employees working for him, depending on the time of year. His business, he said, would be seasonal, citing Christmas time as the busiest.

He said employees would park in the spaces next to the building.

Bob Amadeo of 92 Forest St., a neighbor and a former employee of the gas station, said he was in favor of the business, but had reservations.

"When I worked there, traffic was tremendous. I don't think you'll see more traffic," said Amadeo. He voiced concern about garbage disposal.

Murray re-emphasized the "aesthetically pleasing design." of the proposed new building.

Lombardi spoke as a citizen at the meeting.

"I consider that part of my neighborhood," said Lombardi. He said he is concerned about the traffic impact and the safety of children in the area who might walk to the cookie store.

"They (the gas station) served a purpose in the neighborhood," said Lombardi. Lombardi raised the question about projected volume of business. Neither Murray nor D'Orsi offered concrete statistics.

Murray urged the board to give serious weight to neighborhood approval of the new business.

Porras asked Amadeo if he witnessed car accidents in the area.

Amadeo said, "I can say I witnessed quite a few accidents, not in the entrances and exits of the station, more in the intersections."

Daniel Chane of the planning board, a neighbor, favored the new business.

"It is a better use, a cleaner use," said Chane.

Porras said, "I'm not convinced we're not going to have a lot of problems."

Because chairman Ferdinand S. Pacione was not present for the petition, he did not vote.

Looney said, "I have some very strong concerns with the impact of traffic. I have not been convinced this use would be equal to or better than the other." Looney voted no.

Alternate member Robert H. Oppenheimer voted in favor.

In other action, the board voted 2-1 against a petition to grant Charles and Elizabeth Doucette of Upland Road permission to subdivide a lot on Middlesex Street. The Doucettes asked for a dimensional variance to build a single-family home on one of the lots on the property.

The Doucettes sought to build a 9,900-square foot home. The by-law stipulates single-family dwellings can be no more than 6,500 square feet. On the other lot, a two-family dwelling would be reduced to 7,059 square feet. The by-law stipulates two-family dwellings to require 11,000 square feet.

The Doucettes' intent was to build a two-story home with the intent to live on the first floor due to Elizabeth Doucette's health. The Doucettes own the land.

Papers take town to collection

The Town of Winchester has been turned over to a collection bureau by Century Newspapers, which have headquarters in Winchester.

The papers turned two of their accounts, the town selectmen and the town manager's office, over to the Metropolitan Collection Bureau for "immediate payment," according to records at the town office.

Century Publications, which publishes The Winchester Star, sent the town a bill for $398.57, including interest.

Assistant town manager Mark Twogood says the town agrees it owes $343.92 but needs verification of the remaining amount and a list of the items for which it was charged.

In addition, Twogood said, the town has had a long-standing policy of not paying interest on its bills. Century has claimed payment of $29.99 in interest charges since April 1985.

Century staff members have promised to try to determine the exact items of advertising for which the town was charged in an effort to straighten out the dispute.

Washamerica raises $15,000

For five days in August, each participating car wash donated parts of its proceeds to the drive. Among those participating was the Shield System in Winchester.

Officials 'pleased' with settlement of town suit

By GEORGE DERRINGER

Winchester town counsel Doug Randall is "very pleased" with settlement of a $310,000 suit brought by the town against the firm which was hired in 1980 to appraise town properties.

Under the settlement, Patten Associates of Portland, Maine, will grant the town about $35,000, including $10,000 in cash and $24,000 of the total $178,500 contract which the town withheld from the appraisal firm.

According to the 1980 contract, Patten was to have completed reappraisal of all real estate and personal property in Winchester by June 30, 1981. Massachusetts law requires complete reappraisal every 10 years.

The appraisal was not complete by the contracted date. In the town's estimation, Patten took 20 weeks longer to finish the job. Tax bills were sent out late.

In 1982, selectmen directed Randall to bring suit. The town's suit claimed more than $300,000 in damages, counting interest paid by the town to borrow the funds it did not raise through quick payment of taxes and counting interest the town could have earned by investing tax receipts.

Patten, however, pointed to Clause 18 in the contract, which stipulated a penalty of one percent of the total contract for each week the revaluation was delayed.

One percent of the total contract is $1,785. Multiplying by 20 weeks, Patten contended it owed no more than $35,700 in penalties.

To further complicate the issue, Patten's bonding company contended the job was 90 percent complete by the target date. Therefore, the bonding company said, Winchester owed all but 10 percent, $17,850, of the total contract.

The suit was scheduled to come to trial last week before Superior Court Judge Edward M. Ginsburg, normally a judge of probate who also handles some other cases.

In a summary judgment Thursday morning, Ginsburg ruled that damages were limited to the amount specified in the contract, $35,700.

Nonetheless, Randall was pleased with the settlement.

"The result means the town will get almost total payment of the penalty set forth in the contract," Randall said.

In addition, the inconvenience and expense of "having 20 people sit around the courthouse" was avoided, as was the cost of the trial itself, Randall said.

Patten's work remains controversial, however. The revaluation done by the firm is the "flawed base" which assessors try to update each three years until another complete appraisal is done in 1990.

Household hazardous waste collection planned

Three Winchester organizations want to help residents eliminate poisons lurking in almost every home.

The health department, the department of public works and the League of Women Voters will join forces to collect hazardous wastes from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 18, at the town garage on Lake Street.

Among common hazardous wastes are old paint cans, solvents and pesticides left over from last year's gypsy moth infestation.

Because they are hazardous, such wastes should not be stored indefinitely. It's also illegal to discard them with household trash.

If disposed of in backyards or storm drains, such hazardous substances threaten water supplies, animal life and vegetable gardens. But the cost of hiring someone to cart them away is too much for many individuals.

The town has hired North East Solvents Service, a licensed hazardous wastes disposal firm. The company will be on hand Oct. 18 to supervise, assist with waste identification and answer questions.

The following items should be brought to the collection:

- Pesticides, even those which are now illegal, such as Chlordane, malathion, DDT, parathion, arsenic and strichnine.
- Paints, thinners and solvents.
- Drain cleaners.
- Chemistry sets.
- Engine radiator flushes and finishers.
- Car waxes, antifreeze and degreasers.
- Stains and varnish.
- Photographic chemicals.
- Asphalt and roofing tar.
- Pool chemicals.
- Asbestos.
- Rug, upholstery and silver cleaners.
- Rodent, mosquito and weed killers.
- No-pest strips, flea powder and flea collars.
- Fertilizers and herbicides.
- Air conditioning refrigerants.

If possible, substances should be brought in their original containers.

Items which should NOT be brought to the hazardous waste collection include:

- Used oil, which should be taken to the place where new oil was purchased.
- Explosives, including fireworks and ammunition.
- Radioactive materials.
- Aerosol cans and gas cylinders, including fire extinguishers and oxygen tanks.
- Pesticides containing trichlorinated phenols and one up, including the trade names Silvex, Ortho, WeedBGone and Toxaphene.
- Wood preservatives containing pentachlorophenol.
- Outdated pharmaceuticals and prescription drugs.
- Car batteries.

Fee to rise for town's dump stickers now, you go to get a sticker and they ask how many cars you have. You say eight and you give a sticker to everyone in your neighborhood," he said.

The new system will be more closely monitored and stickers must be affixed to cars, not passed from person to person, selectmen agreed.

The department of public works will aldminister the new sticker system, not the board of health.

After unanimously adopting new transfer station rules, selectmen were reminded by Welch that Lombardi predicted in the spring of 1984 that some board of selectmen would have to "bite the bullet" and increase fees.

Frayed cord causes $100,000 in damage to Bacon Street home

By MAUREEN QUINLAN

A frayed appliance cord apparently sparked a two-alarm blaze that gutted the kitchen of a 10 Bacon St. home around midnight last Friday, causing more than $100,000 damage.

Winchester fire chief Robert W. McElhinney reported no injuries. The owner of the home, John P. Robinson, escaped with the help of two Winchester police officers, Kenneth Greene and James Dean. Police took Robinson to Winchester Hospital where he was treated for shock, McElhinney said.

According to police reports, a loud explosion rang through the neighborhood. Robinson awakened to the sound of his smoke alarm and immediately called the fire department, according to the reports. Officers Greene and Dean were first to arrive. Reports said Greene vaulted a locked fence and brought Robinson, who was standing at his back doorway, with the help of Dean, to safety.

McElhinney said, "He was a lucky man to get out. The smoke detector saved his life."

McElhinney described the blaze as "very serious." He said the kitchen was completely destroyed and parts of the attic damaged. He said the home, previously the Old Mystic School, suffered extensive heat and smoke damage.

A team of 16 Winchester firefighters, with the aid of Medford and Woburn fire departments, had the blaze under control within 30 minutes, McElhinney said.

The chief said the fire was caused by an overheated, worn appliance cord. McElhinney said the fire spread through the kitchen quickly due to the amount of flammable materials.

McElhinney said, "The fire was probably burning for some time before he (the owner) was alerted."

Junior library has new color monitor

The Winchester Public Library's junior library has a new color monitor for its Apple IIe computer. The Apple, which is coin-operated, is used by library patrons in a number of ways.

Small children use library-owned software to play a variety of reading readiness and learning games. Older children are more likely to play one of the video or adventure games, while adults may use the micro cookbook program, the SAT tutor, or bring in their own software.

"The color monitor is wonderful. It makes all our games and programs look brand new," says Heidi Zeigig, head of children's services.

"We are now choosing new programs we couldn't use before because they call for color monitor, especially educational programs for preschoolers and elementary school kids. This is going to make our computer much more versatile," she says.

The color monitor was purchased from revenues generated from the Apple computer. The Friends of the Winchester Public Library bought the Apple for the junior library, and so, indirectly, have made the purchase of the color monitor possible.

Judy Storeygard, president of the Friends, added "The Friends organization exists to support and improve the services the library offers to Winchester. We are delighted that the junior library has been able to upgrade its equipment this way."

The Apple computer is available on a first come, first served basis in the junior library. The cost is 25 cents for 7½ minutes or $2 an hour. Very small children must be assisted by an adult.

The library staff will assist new users in getting started and solve any problems encountered using the machine.

Kaplan to describe biography writing

Justin Kaplan

Justin Kaplan, noted biographer of Mark Twain and Walt Whitman, will speak at the Winchester Public Library at 2 p.m., Sunday, Oct. 5.

The free program, entitled "Writing Lives," is sponsored by the Friends of the Winchester Public Library.

Kaplan will talk about how he chooses subjects and will encourage informal audience participation.

He won the National book Award and the Pulitzer Prize in 1967 for "Mr. Clemens and Mark Twain" and the American Book Award for Biography in 1981 for "Walt Whitman: A Life," which came out in a new edition in 1985.

This fall he has written a foreword to "The Illustrated Harvard: Harvard in Wood Engravings and Words" published by the Globe Pequot Press.

Kaplan has won critical acclaim for writing biographies which are scholarly but read like novels because of his attention to the requirements of a good story. He is a Cambridge resident.

In other action, the board granted William Muller of 164 Ridge St., a one-year special permit to park his pick-up truck, a commercial vehicle, in his driveway during the day.

Town by-laws state no commercial vehicles may be parked in the driveway of a residential home.

Muller will have to face the board next year to determine whether he may continue to park his truck in his driveway.

Businesswomen plan meeting

The Winchester Chamber of Commerce invites any business or professional women to a dinner meeting at 6 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 24, at Maximilian's restaurant.

Cathy Jackson, owner of Bayberry Shoe, and Martha O'Neil, owner of Topsy Turvy, will speak about the "ups and downs" of owning a business.

The group is designed for women who live or work in Winchester and would like to meet with others to discuss areas of mutual concern.

Anyone in the community is welcome to attend and should call the chamber office at 729-8870 for reservations.

REAL ESTATE AND YOU

By Dick Murphy
The Bixby & Porter Co. Realtors

HOW LONG WILL IT TAKE YOUR HOUSE TO SELL?

Did you ever wonder why some houses sell so quickly and others stay on the market for months, even years, before someone buys them. Price is important, and so is the way a home is marketed. Just as important, however, is basic appeal.

Once the listing agreement is signed, your Realtor will give you some suggestions about simple ways you can help people fall in love with your house. If you follow his or her advice, you will help set the stage. It may mean sprucing up the yard, painting the exterior placing some pretty flowers in a vase on your dining room table. Your Realtor's job is to market your home and to make sure the buyers see it. The seller's job is to make sure that what we show our buyers looks as good as it possibly can. If you maximize the appeal of your house, you will minimize the length of time it will take us to sell it.

If you're planning a move, contact the professionals at Bixby & Porter Company Realtors. Call us at 729-7000 or stop by our offices at 33 Thompson St., Winchester.

Flu, pneumonia shots will be given Oct. 7-8 at Jenks

Winchester's annual influenza and pneumonia clinic is scheduled from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. Tuesday and Wednesday, Oct. 7-8, at the Jenks Senior Center.

Both flu and pneumonia shots will be offered. Flu shots are free; pneumonia shots cost $5.

Influenza is highly contagious, caused by a virus and spread through sneezing, coughing and speaking. Since virus strains frequently undergo genetic changes to form new strains, immunity from influenza viruses normally wanes in nine or 10 months.

Protection from one strain does not guarantee immunity from another. This year's vaccine will protect recipients from three flu strains, including A Chile, A Mississippi and B Ann Arbor.

For people who have received a flu shot since 1978, this year's shot will act like a booster shot. Recipients will start building immunity within 48 hours, instead of the four to six weeks needed for first-time vaccinations.

People who should receive the vaccine include high-risk individuals who would have the greatest chance of developing life-threatening complications from influenza.

They include people with a chronic illness such as diabetes, heart disease, kidney disorders, respiratory disorders and everyone over 65.

Some people should check with a physician before getting a flu shot. They include those with an allergy to eggs, those who received another type of vaccine within the previous 14 days, those taking anti-cancer medication and those who have a fever or are ill with something more serious than a cold.

Pneumococcal infections are a major cause of pneumonia, meningitis and otitis media. The pneumovax-23 vaccine to be administered at the clinic confers immunity against the 23 most common forms of pneumococcus.

One immunization of the vaccine should provide long-lasting, if not lifetime, immunity. It is not recommended that those who have received the shot receive it again.

Those who should get the shot include those 50 and older and those with chronic illnesses in which there is an increased risk pneumococcal disease.

Those who should check with a doctor before getting a pneumonia shot include those with severe cardiac/pulmonary funcation in whom a systemic reaction can pose a significant risk and those with a fever or other active infection.

Area's Council For Children seeks new members and ideas

The Mystic Valley Council for Children will meet at 7 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 24, at the First Congregational Church, 21 Church St., Winchester.

The meeting will provide an orientation to the Mystic Valley Council for Children, its board of directors and council committees. The agenda will also include information about upcoming events. The meeting is free and open to the public.

One goal of the Mystic Valley Council for Children is to inform citizens about current children's issues and increase community awareness by offering public educational forums. One upcoming forum will focus on "How to Select Child Care."

The Mystic Valley Council for Children is one of 42 throughout the commonwealth. Councils are part of the Office for Children, a state agency responsible for recruiting and supporting the involvement of citizens in public decisions regarding children's services.

The Mystic Valley Council for Children is composed of citizen volunteers who either live or work in Arlington, Burlington, Lexington, Wilmington, Winchester or Woburn. The common concern of the council members is the welfare of children.

Various committees of council members promote quality services and programs for children. At present, the council committees include Employer — Supported Child Care; Family Day Care Provider Support Network; Legislative; Campership Coalition; Forum Planning; Community Review and Proposal Review which evaluate children's services and programs in the area. New and present council members may join a committee of their interest and new ideas for committees are always welcome.

Each year the Mystic Valley Council for Children looks forward to gaining new members who add different perspectives, creative and innovative ideas and additional enthusiasm. Becoming a council member does not necessarily have to be time-consuming but rather enables members to be informed about children's issues and help make decisions about local children's programs and services.

Anyone concerned about children is welcome at the Sept. 24 meeting.

Pre-registration is appreciated. Please call Mary McCarthy, community representative to the council, at 729-4350 to register or for additional information.

Sandblasting of lead paint banned here

The Winchester board of health after conducting a required public hearing, amended its sandblasting regulations.

The board of health passed a regulation which was approved by the Division of Air Pollution Control of the State Department of environmental Quality Engineering banning the powersanding of lead base paint both in the exterior and interior of any building in the town.

"The board of health took this action as the result of complaints regarding homes that were being powersanded in the Town containing lead base paint," said health directer Joe Tabbi.

Any person in the town who is planning on painting a home and is uncertain as to whether it contains lead should contact the health department at 721-7121. An inspector from the department will test the home at no charge to determine if lead is present.

Reception to raise $ for band Gator Bowl trip

The Winchester High School marching band is on the march again. The band led by director Priscilla Miller, has been selected by nationwide competition to participate in the Gator Bowl Festival this December as part of the Gator Bowl football game.

Interested townspeople are working to raise the necessary funds for this trip. At the meeting of the committee last Tuesday at the home of chairman Sandra Rodgers, the director reported that the Winchester band has been selected from among the 16 bands participating in the festival to appear with only three other bands in a half-time show at the football game itself.

"Originally there was to be no participation of any of the festival bands in any half-time show," Miller said. "At this point I don't know why, but the organization producing the bowl decided it wanted some high school bands at half time. We were picked to be one of them."

The meeting was called to plan for a fundraising reception at 5:30 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 19 at the Knights of Columbus hall.

The reception will be in the tradition of similar ones in the past to raise funds for band activities. It provides an opportunity for those who believe in the extraordinary learning experience that a high school marching band gains from musical competition to financially help make these experiences possible.

The high point of this year's reception will be an appearance by the world-famous musical conductor and performer, Harry Ellis Dickson, to lead the band in a short musical presentation. Perhaps best know currently as the associate conductor of the Boston Pops Orchestra. Dickson has an extensive career in many facets of music.

One of his career commitments is to try to capture the interest of young people in music, and he hopes his appearance at this reception in Winchester will be another successful effort to accomplish this.

When the committee heard Ms. Miller's good news about the additional half-time show, many members recalled the excitement of the Peach Bowl half-time show last year in Atlanta. For that show there was no attempt to select from among the many Festival bands for the half-time: all participated.

According to Miller, "This may mean the Gator Bowl organization wants something a little easier to handle. Whatever the reason, we are one of only four bands in the show. I think that says something special about Winchester's band."

The marching band includes not only students who play musical instruments, but also the drum majors, the flag corps, the rifle squad, the cheerleaders and the tumbletts. This is the complement of students that serves to entertain the fans at the football games throughout the season, and to support the football team with great enthusiasm.

Because of this new half-time show opportunity on the trip, the plans developed over the summer must be greatly modified. The plans as they now stand have the nearly 175 students and chaperones leaving Winchester early in the morning Dec. 26 to fly to Jacksonville. Intense practice will occur immediately on arrival for the pre-game show and the half-time show because the Gator Bowl game is the very next day. Although Miller will have rehearsed the music with the band, the formations, timing and other details will not be known until the band gets to Jacksonville.

Practice cannot wait for the following day, Dec. 27, because that day brings (1) a competition parade in the morning, (2) a pre-game massed-bands show at noon, and (3) the half-time show at the game itself. It is anticipated that both the pre-game show and the half-time show will be carried nationwide on CBS television.

Festival competition will take place Sunday, Dec. 28.

Performances will not be over after the competition, because the band also has been invited to play Monday at the Epcot Center at Disneyworld. The band will march and play in a parade with all the Disney characters. It will also give a concert at the performance center.

As a concession to reality, the band will have an opportunity to actually enjoy the Disney Center Tuesday before returning to Winchester that afternoon.

"The very busy schedule that the band will follow demonstrates this trip will not be just for a lark. The band is going to the Gator Bowl to experience, through participation, a band competition, to play in a national collegiate bowl game, and to perform in a world-renowned resort center. And in all these events they will be appearing as representatives of Winchester," Miller said.

The Band has served as an outstanding emissary for the town at two other national competitions in the past — the Cherry Blossom festival in Washington D.C. in 1983, and the Peach Bowl Festival in Atlanta in 1984. At both, Winchester earned several awards for performances, including second place in the Peach Bowl parade.

By competiting so successfully, the band has earned the respect of the high school marching band community nationwide as a band from a small town in New England (an area not usually known for high-caliber high school marching bands) that knows how to rise to national competitions.

The Winchester band does not structure itself especially to be a competition band.

"However, when it does come up against such bands, it indeed holds its own," the director said.

"Of equal importance, the band demonstrated that the Town of Winchester knows how to help instill values of hard work, commitment to cause, quality of performance, and pursuit of excellence in its young people. The town also knows how to financially make this possible by coming to the support of the band for the competitions," she said.

Tickets for the reception are available at Henderson Stationers and from committee member Lucy Peck, 134 Mt. Vernon St., 729-2492. Opportunities are also available to make tax-deductible contributions.

ABOUT TOWN

Job Bank list openings

The Winchester Youth Center Job Bank, a referral service that matches students in grades 7-12 with prospective employers, has a variety of employment opportunities.

Particularly needed are students 16 and older to fill a number of permanent part-time jobs. Many of these jobs are in offices, retail stores and restaurants in Winchester.

Babysitting and yardwork jobs are also available.

Interested students should drop by the Youth Center, located in the McCall Junior High Building, or call 721-7129.

Flea market space available

The Winchester Chamber of Commerce flea market will be from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 27, at the town hall parking lot. Raindate is Sept. 28.

Spaces are still available to display antiques, crafts, collectibles or assorted attic treasures. Rather than organize a garage sale of their own, residents may call the Chamber office at 729-8870 for reservations to take part in the flea market.

Town gets $1,805 for two elections

Winchester will get $1,804.80 from the commonwealth for its 1986 primary and state election costs.

The state must bear the increased costs caused when polling hours were increased by the legislature in 1983. Polls now open at 7 a.m.

Under the requirements of the Proposition 2½ tax limitation law, the state must bear any increased costs its action causes cities and towns. Winchester documented increased costs of $902.40 for each election because of the extension in voting hours.

Drama workshop hosts new series for kids

Former workshop participants and Cinderella actors are invited to join newcomers at the Winchester Drama Workshop's new series for boys and girls in grades four through six, with third graders included if space permits. The 10-week series opens Wednesday, Sept. 24, from 3 to 5 p.m. in the social studies area of Winchester High School, second floor front.

With the goal of more effective communication for both the actor and the person, the workshop will begin with yoga exercises which stretch, relax and tone the body and nervous system. Then it will focus on each of the five senses increases awareness; mime and movement facilitate organic communication; theatre games educe spontaneity; and improvised scenes bring life experience into artistic form.

After leading after school workshops in Winchester since 1972, Paulett Taggart now works with drama in Watertown elementary classrooms. Material from the school curriculum is used with techniques to stimulate right brain intuition, effecting a balance with traditional left brain cognitive learning. The ideal of whole brain education is receiving increasing world-wide attention.

Darlene Jackaway, a drama workshop favorite from Omega Theater in Boston, will return as co-leader and Arup De from McCall Junior High School group will add the male point of view as junior assistant.

Thanks to financial assistance from the EnKa Society and the Rotary Club, the drama workshop fee is minimal. Registration opens Sept. 20 at the recreation office in McCall next to the gym, using the auditorium door.

COMMENT

Oh, no — housing again!

Low- and moderate-income public housing, Winchester's most talked-about and least acted-upon subject for several years, is back.

The last town meeting made a good faith effort to settle the issue, bowing to state demands that the town provide sites for seven mandated units of such housing.

Despite the genuine effort of the Winchester Housing Authority to win speedy approval for those sites, a special study committee formed by the very same spring town meeting has placed seven more sites on the warrant for the fall town meeting.

Why?

Perhaps the special study committee doesn't understand the bureaucracy Massachusetts voters and politicians have together created. It takes months for a single state agency to approve one site, let alone the four approved by Winchester in May.

More months will be needed to advertise for bids from architects. About six weeks then are needed for design. Yet more months will be needed to advertise for contractors' bids to actually build the housing.

The special study committee needs to understand that the bureaucracy, including Transportation Secretary Frederick Salvucci, who must approve the Woburn Loop housing site, moves painfully slowly.

A lack of progress since May doesn't mean the housing authority and/or the selectmen are dragging their feet.

The addition of "alternative sites" as the committee has suggested will only muddy the waters. And it's naive to think the state won't notice that "Winchester has more housing sites available."

You don't need to be a prophet to see what the state will think of next.

How silly can you get?

Tuesday's primary election in the 34th Middlesex District for the state house of representatives demonstrated just how silly politicians can be.

Both incumbent Republican Rep. Whip Saltmarsh and Democratic challenger Paul Casey actually campaigned and conducted "get out the vote" drives. Trouble is, they had no challengers.

Each man was already assured a place on the ballot for November's general election. Why did anyone need to see a motor home emblazoned with Casey signs driving around the streets Tuesday?

Campaigning for an election you can't lose is downright silly. Maybe worse.

BEACON HILL ROLL CALL

The House and Senate. The House and Senate continues to meet in informally and are expected to resume formal sessions shortly after the primary election.

This Week, "Beacon Hill Roll Call" presents part two of a special report on more tax proposals which have been considered by the House in 1986.

Investment Tax Credit(H 5600)- House 105-38, rejected an amendment raising the current one precent investment tax credit for businesses to three percent until December 1989.

A Yea vote is for the amendment. A Nay vote is against it.

Representative Sherman Saltmarsh voted yes.

Return Surplus(H 5600)- House 110-34, rejected an amendment requiring that any surplus at the end of a fiscal year be divided equally among persons filing a state income tax return the following year.

A Yea vote is for the amendment. A Nay vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

Gambling Losses(H 5431)- House 87-52, rejected a bill allowing gamblers to deduct their gambling losses, up to the amount of their winnings, from their state income taxes.

A Yea vote is for the bill. A Nay vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted no.

Fees(H 5800)- House 114-33, rejected an amendment striking a section of a supplemental budget extending for one year the power of the Secretary of Administration and Finance to set fees for various state licences and giving the legislature 60 days to veto any hike.

A Yea vote is for striking the section. A Nay vote is for the section.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

Deeds Excise- House 120-10, rejected a bill increasing from $2.28 to $5.00 per $1000 the current deeds excise which a seller pays when transferring real estate. The measure distributes the $2.72 increase by giving $1 to a land acquisition program, $1 to the county and 72 cents to a hazardous waste cleanup fund. It also provides for local communities to apply to the state for money to buy conservation land or clean up waste sites.

A Yea vote is for the bill. A Nay vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted no.

Sales Tax(H 4980)- House 92-47, rejected an amendment reducing the sales tax from 5 percent to 4 percent.

A Yea vote is for the amendment. A Nay vote is against it.

Saltmarsh did not vote.

Estate Tax(H 5569)- House 101-36, rejected a bill making some provisions of the recent changes in the estate tax laws effective July 1, 1985 instead of January 1, 1986.

A Yea vote is for the bill. A Nay vote is against it.

Saltmarsh voted yes.

Public speaking was never easy

By TERRY MAROTTA

I've been giving a few speeches in public lately.

It's funny, because when I was little, the thing I hated more than anything else was giving speeches in public - standing up in front of an audience of serene seated peers who could look me up and down, tune me in or out, whistle, hum, and even take short naps while I dangled there reciting my piece with knees trembling and hot clothes snaking about my torso in ropey humid coils.

I used to fake sick the day it was my turn to stand up and recite in Public Speaking Class.

If I did find the courage to come to school that day, I'd faint, as often as not, halfway through my opening remarks. At the least I'd fall up the stairs as I climbed to the stage, and fall down them again as I stumbled back to my seat, blind with embarrassment, my tender young psyche wholly unravelled by the spectacle I'd made of myself.

I didn't know then what I know now: that there's a trick involved in making speeches. It's a craft, a simple skill, as easily mastered as tying your shoes or flossing your teeth.

I know this because I've just recently come across a dandy little book called How To Speak in Public, written by a Mr. Grenville Kleiser and published in 1910.

Take the very question of stage fright. Kleiser faces it squarely on page 14: "If the mouth becomes uncomfortably dry just before speaking," he advises, "the flow of saliva will be quickly promoted by chewing a piece of paper."

As to preparing in advance for the expert launching of one's words, he suggests one should "commence a humming tone . . . Sing Le La Law Lah Lo Loo . . . Repeat with bright and sad vibrations.

Practice the following in pure clear-cut voice, he goes on: Hup He Ha Haw Ho Hoo."

Then, "with the thumb and first finger, gently close the nostrils and pronounce several times with the utmost nasality, "O Precious Hour", later removing said digits to try saying it the regular way.

What could be simpler?

Further on in the book, in a sharp and schoolmasterly way, Kleiser lays down more tips:

"Don't unbutton and unbutton and button your coat," he advises.

Do not allow the hands to "fumble, twitch or play with each other." (You know what rascals those hands can be, he seems to imply.)

Don't let them rest on the watch chain or in the buttonhole", and never under any circumstances allow them to dwell "in the pockets while one is before an audience." (Only think of the havoc they could wreak in there!)

Finally, Kleiser advises, "let one gesture glide into the next," but remember: "frequent and meaningless movements should be studiously avoided." In general, he concludes, "Seldom apologize," in the course of your remarks.

Now these are excellent tips indeed, it seems to me.

I put them to the test just last week, in fact, when I addressed the dinner meeting of a local charity.

I got into the spirit of the thing by thinking 1910. I wore tweeds, a watch fob, and a handlebar mustache.

I sat at the end of the dais, softly practising my loo loos and ha has during the fruitcup. I pinched my nose and sang "O Precious Hour" during the remarks that introduced me. Rising to take the podium, I wadded up the paper tablecloth, popped it into my mouth and gave it a good chew.

I took out a small hammer and some brads, and tacked my hands to the lectern to keep them out of mischief.

Then I began my speech. My gestures were frequent and meaningful: I used my feet. My voice rose and fell, with vibrations both sad and bright.

I didn't apologize, not even once, and when I stood down at last, acknowledging the waves of applause with a modest bow, I knew myself indebted for eternity to the wise and instructive soul of Mr. Grenville Kleiser.

Hospital's ambulatory care unit to aid elderly

To better assist elderly or handicapped outpatients, a Medical Ambulatory Care Unit (MACU) service was initiated during August by Winchester Hospital.

Unique to Winchester Hospital, the service provides a place where patients can report for outpatient testing, be escorted to and from tests, and receive nursing care and observation until time to return home again.

The MACU is located on Three-West. Last fall, the area began serving ambulatory patients who needed endoscopy services. Previously, the floor housed the intensive care unit until, in 1983, it relocated to new quarters in the just opened Hood Wing, adjacent to the surgical suite.

"While we still do endoscopy, we are providing other ambulatory services as well. That is the reason that we adopted the new name," said Peggy Dwyer, R.N., head nurse and MACU coordinator.

"It is the same concept as surgical day care, except that the unit serves the medical ambulatory patient," she added.

According to Dwyer, patients like the area.

"It is quiet and private, and fosters the sense of security and wellness that the program strives to encourage."

She said at many hospitals, a patient is asked to report for tests and then given directions "to go here or there" and to "do this and that." If a patient is elderly or bewildered, finding the way can be tiring and threatening.

The MACU changes all of that.

"We receive patients who have been booked by their physicians. We reinforce the instructions that physicians have given to them.

"Some patients need help preparing for an exam or tests. Often they seek and need further explanation and education about what they are to do, and why."

Patients needing tests are escorted to the location of the test or tests, and then are returned once again to the MACU for nursing care and observation.

"We see that patients receive tests in the proper sequence. We have someone with them throughout the process. We do all that we can to promote their wellness," Dwyer explained.

When a patient leaves the hospital, the MACU continues to provide attention.

"We call the patient at home to inquire about complications, to see that the individual has contacted the doctor for test results and otherwise monitor necessary follow-up care and attention," she said.

The MACU continues to be the location of endoscopy procedures. These include gastroscopies, colonoscopy, sigmoidoscopy, and diagnostic/treatment procedures for pancreatic and gall bladder problems.

The MACU also is where outpatients receive transfusions, testing for nervous system disorders and biopsies.

The MACu also plans to do stoma therapy and diabetic teaching.

"The unit represents an accessible, efficient, cost-effective central area where patients receive primary nursing care and assistance during multidisciplinary testing or screening, and treatment. The service is provided to outpatients, in support of physicians and the care they provide," Dwyer said.

Doing this on an outpatient, ambulatory basis reflects an emphasis upon saving patients and their insurers money, by avoiding unnecessary hospital admission for diagnostic purposes.

"The unit adds a caring, human component to a process that otherwise may seem impersonal to an outpatient," Dwyer said.

She expressed gratitude to all of the hospital departments who have been helpful in assuring quality care for medical ambulatory patients.

"It truly has been a team effort," she said.

Winchester women to describe visit to Soviet Union

An exhibit at the Winchester Public Library highlights a visit to the Soviet Union by three members of the Winchester League of Women Voters.

The women will present a slide show entitled "Beyond The Hotline: Winchester Women In The USSR" at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 30, at the library's meeting room. The event is in conjunction with the organization's annual coffee for new members.

Women who took the tour were Jeanette Baird, Ellie DuToit and Pat Wells. The three Winchester members gave their town the strongest representation of any town or city among the 42 League of Women Voters on the tour, which was designed to study American and Soviet women in politics.

The current exhibit at the library includes the gifts received by Winchester's representatives on the tour and information about educational services the league offers to citizens about local, state and national issues.

The Sept. 30 program is free and open to the public.

Further information is available from the Winchester president, Gail O'Reilly, at 729-0536.

Childlessness workshop tackles fertility issue

"Childless — Not By Choice," a four-part workshop on infertility sponsored by Winchester Hospital, will be offered to the public Tuesday evening, Oct. 7, and continuing Oct. 21, Nov. 4 and 18 at the Woburn YMCA, 137 Lexington St.

Workshops will run from 7:30 to 9 p.m. and will be conducted by Sally Stevens Eldred, family life educator for Family Services of Greater Boston.

The purpose of the series is to share with persons affected by infertility the facts of the diagnosis and its effects on those who must experience it. Issues to be discussed will have relevance to those presently dealing with the infertility problem and to those who are related to or working with someone facing the problem.

Programs will be presented by Sally Stevens Eldred, who has worked in medical rehabilitation, family counseling and hospice services. Inspired by personal experience, she became active with Resolve and founded the Resolve of Greater Hartford in Connecticut.

She was a consultant and participant for the documentary, "In Search of a Child" produced by the University of Connecticut School of Medicine in 1983.

For further information, please call the education department of Winchester Hospital at 729-9000, ext. 3010. Enrollment is limited.

Mothers to learn "letting go"

Mothers, grandmothers or other child care providers who find themselves drying tears as their 4-to 7-year-old charges reluctantly leave late for school each morning are encouraged to enroll in a four-part workshop which begins Sept. 24.

"Learning To Let Go" is being offerred by the education department at Winchester Hospital. It will be held four consecutive Wednesdays, beginning Sept. 24 and continuing Oct. 1, 8 and 15 at 9:30 to 11 a.m. in the Professional Development Center at the Lynch School, 154 Horn Pond Rd.

Sessions will be conducted by Debra Cantor of Lexington Family Counselling. She will address the problems and how to deal with them when children fearfully resist leaving the security of home for a day at school.

Registration fee is $22. Please call the education department at Winchester Hospital, 729-9000, ext. 3010, for more details and registration.

K of C plans drive to aid handicapped

"The Massachusetts Knights of Columbus have a simple philosophy that every child, regardless of race or religion, deserves to live as normal a life as possible. That's why we strive to help the handicapped, retarded and blind in Massachusetts get the most they can from life," says Grand Knight James Rafferty of Winchester Council.

"Since 1977 our members have conducted this annual charity drive and once again we will be out in force on Columbus Day Weekend standing in front of local stores and shopping districts soliciting the kind contribution of passersby. We will be easily identifiable by the red and yellow aprons we will be wearing with the words "help retarded children" emblazoned on both the front and back."

Residents of this area have been very generous and we Knight of Columbus are extremely grateful," he says.

In 1980 the Massachusetts Charity Fund Trustees awarded $300,000 to the Cardinal Cushing School for retarded and handicapped youngsters in Hanover, in 1981 $400,000 to the Mercy Center for Developmental Disabilities in Worcester, $175,000 to the Sunshine Village for the Retarded in Chicopee, $60,000 to Camp Paul for Exceptional Children in Chelmsford, $96,000 to the Boston Center For Blind Children in Jamaica Plan, $81,000 to the South Shore Rehabilitation Center in Quincy, and last month trustees awarded $125,000 to the Project Triangle in Malden, a center which helps train retarded individuals to perform jobs in industry and helps to place them in meaningful positions of employment.

Grand Knight Rafferty emphasizes, "In addition, grants are continually awarded throughout the year to handicapped individuals needing financial assistance to purchase wheelchairs or other similar equipment. For information ask any member of the Knights of Columbus to contact me."

"In behalf of all the countless number of retarded and handicapped people, whose benefit all this money goes to assist, I want to thank the citizens of our community."

Lincoln students to sell treasures at Sunday flea market

Lincoln School students will toss aside traditional elementary school pursuits and become entrepreneurs when they host a flea market from 2 to 4:30 p.m., Sept. 21, at Manchester Field.

The flea market will feature used toys, games, books and other childhood treasures.

Items of more adult interest will be sold at a parent's table. Proceeds from the sale of quality home and gift items, donated by Lincoln School parents, go to the Lincoln School Association.

The event is open to the general public, although only Lincoln School students may participate, for a $1 fee, as vendors.

A refreshment stand sponsored by sixth-graders and parent volunteers will offer cookies, brownies, other baked goods and juices for sale. Earnings are earmarked for the class trip to Camp Sargent.

High school students provide pre-school care

Pre-school children and their parents are promised fun and excitement, as well as great care, from Winchester High School students taking a special home economics course.

Children age 3-5 can take part in the high school's "early childhood" course for juniors and seniors, says Harriet Nelson, coordinator of home economics at the high school.

Children will participate in games and activities and meet new friends while high school students will provide a cheery atmosphere, Nelson says.

Snack times, exercises and story times are a part of the program. Parties, including Thanksgiving and Christmas observances, are planned.

Interested parents should register from 9 to 10 a.m. Thursday, Sept. 25, in the home economics are of Winchester High School.

All-star music groups to start

The all-star band, orchestra, and chorus, sponsored by the music department of the Winchester public schools, will begin rehearsals Thursday, Sept. 25.

These ensembles allow capable students to have a very satisfying musical experience with others of their age, making music together that would not be possible in individual schools.

The groups perform at the CSA concert in the spring, providing funds for the Community Schools Association scholarship which is awarded to a graduating music and an art student.

Students who have attained second-year proficiency on their instruments are eligible to join the performing groups.

All-star students will be bused from their schools to rehearsals, which occur released Thursdays and conference Thursdays. Students will be asked to bring a lunch from home those days.

After eating in the school lunchroom, they will be picked up by bus around 12:15 p.m., and taken to the high school or junior high.

When the rehearsal concludes at 2 p.m., parents will arrange for transportation home.

15 players battled in outdoor tourney

The Winchester Tennis Association's 1986 outdoor tournament came to a successful close Sunday as the remaining quarters, semis and finals were completed.

More than 150 entrants had been whittled down to just 15 players for the final competitions Sunday, when a large gallery applauded and basked in early fall sunshine.

Rain Friday night and early Saturday efforts of the town public works department put the courts in good shape for weekend play, tourney officials said.

Louis Desmarteaux took the men's singles championship, playing his best in the final against Bob Horne Jr.

Desmarteaux hit every shot with purpose and walked away with a 6-2, 6-3 victory.

In the semifinals, Horne edged Neil Hurley in three sets as each player demonstrated respect for the other's game. Desmarteaux won his semifinal against Joe Palumbo, who got off to a slow start and lost 6-0, 7-5.

Diane Intravaia successfully defended her women's singles title for the fifth consecutive year, downing Chris Andersen 6-2, 6-4 in the final.

Andersen jumped to a quick lead by winning the first two games but Intravaia toughened and won six games in a row. Andersen made a mini-comeback in the second set but had to settle for the runner-up's bouquet.

On the way to the title match, Andersen lost only six games, including four against Pinky Samoiloff in the semifinals. Intravaia had a more difficult semifinal match against steady Kathy Hurley but eventually won 6-3, 7-5.

Despite injuries, Sachems impress as season begins

Open season on Saturday

By DAVID DEMARCO

For a football team with more wounded than a Red Cross field hospital, the Winchester Sachems aren't looking that bad.

Winchester had a 15-minute scrimmage with Arlington High Friday night at the Middlesex League jamboree in Waltham and came away with a 13-6 victory.

The Spy Ponders scored on the very first series of plays, using a roll-out, play action pass to take a 6-0 lead with 10:54 left to play.

The Sachems came back four minutes later as Vinnie Benincasa made a key interception to set up the Sachem offense in Arlington territory.

Halfback Darrin Cromwell scored on a trap play with 4:22 left, knotting the score at 6-6.

The Ponders turned the ball over to Winchester again on the ensuing kickoff. George Nowell recovered for the Sachems on the Arlington 15-yard line, again giving his team excellent field position.

This time, fullback Danny Costello powered the ball in from the Arlington three-yard line.

The Ponders turned the ball over twice more before time ran out on the Winchester offense.

Friday's scrimmage proved a good showing for the younger players and an excellent gauge of the Sachems' depth this fall.

Saturday morning the two teams met again at Knowlton Stadium in Winchester.

This time Winchester showed much more evidence of having 17 players injured. The Sachems were sluggish and tired from the previous evening and could only manage an 8-8 tie.

The outstanding linebacker play of junior Greg Winn stood out for Winchester in the morning scrimmage.

Everyone is planning to be back for Saturday's regular season opener in Somerville. It should prove interesting to fans to see what the Sachems can do at full strength.

PREVIEW: Here's what to look for Saturday afternoon:

Traditionally, this game has been a blowout for Winchester but Somerville had an improving season last year, rebounding in the second half to post a 4-5-1 record.

Coach Emerson Dickie's team runs the multiple-I and, if the score is close, will keep the ball on the ground as much as possible.

The Highlanders have very little size. Their offensive and defensive lines will be hard-pressed to dominate the bigger Winchester interior line.

Both Sachem cornerbacks, Mark Shaw and Cromwell, will have to be on their toes to shut down Somerville's split lend, Bobby Abbott. He is the best receiver on the Somerville team and the Highlanders go to him frequently.

Out of the backfield, Bill McLase will run the ball for Somerville. This is his second year of varsity action and the big halfback is likely to carry the load on the ground.

For Winchester, the option will again be the order of the day. However, quarterback John DeMarco likes to throw the ball. Look for the Sachems to come out with a twins right formation early and often.

The Sachem running attack will be very powerful with a great deal of talent in the backfield. Cromwell, Artie Gordon, Murray and Costello should all see a lot of action.

When Winchester does put the ball up, look for Shaw, John Matheson, Rhett Moody and Benincasa to be on the receiving end.

All together, this looks to be another year when the Sachems will dominate, at least on paper.

Sachems boys' team wins twice

By STEVE GOUDSOUZIAN

The boys soccer Sachems had to start their season against one of their toughest foes in the Middlesex League, the Wakefield Warriors.

Winchester had looked strong while winning three pre-season games, allowing only one goal against. All seemed ready.

But the Sachems were noticeably nervous during warm-ups Sept. 9, feeling the pressure of a big game.

Play was even in the early going as Wakefield played its usual aggressive, all-out game. The Warriors were easily the most mentally prepared team Winchester had seen this year.

The Sachems scored early as left wing Kenny Fowler sped by his man and crossed the ball where center forward Mike Rice could pound it into the goal.

Wakefield hardly gave up. The Warriors ferociously attack every loose ball and often sent five or six forwards on attack, challenging the Sachem defense mightily.

The defense finally cracked. An errant Sachem pass back to goalie Scott Racek was picked up by a Wakefield wing with a man free in front of the goal. The game was tied 1-1.

The Sachems showed heart as they came back. Chris VerHawgen rocketed a shot that bounced off the bottom of the crossbar and into the net. Play became sloppier, which benefitted Wakefield most as momen-

Sachemettes still seek first goal

By DAVID DEMARCO

Winchester High School's field hockey team started the season slowly, losing its first three games of the year.

Last Wednesday, the Warriors of Wakefield came to Winchester to give the Sachemettes a 6-0 defeat in the season opener.

"We lost to a much better team," said Winchester coach Mary Brown.

Still, the Warriors didn't score until the last 30 seconds of the first half.

"Wakefield is one of the top teams in the Middlesex League but we hung in there," Brown said.

Friday, the Sachemettes played another strong team, Melrose. The Sachemettes had a much better outing, limiting Melrose to only three goals.

Winchester's defense has improved but the Sachemettes are still look-

Winchester opens girls soccer season with a tie, a victory

By DAVID DEMARCO

The Winchester High School Sachemettes got the girls soccer season off to a slow start, playing Wakefield to a 1-1 deadlock last Tuesday, but they bounced back to beat Andover 2-0 Friday evening.

Winchester seemed tentative in the opening minutes against Wakefield but bounced back to put on a lot of pressure in the last 10 minutes of the first half.

The Sachemettes' only goal of the evening came on a miscue by Wakefield's defense. While passing the ball back, the Warrior goalie misjudged the ball's speed and had to watch it roll gently into the net. Debbie Nowell got credit for the goal.

Wakefield answered several minutes later as Dawn Serekia scored an unassisted goal off JoAnn Shusta.

The Warriors took over momentum at the start of the second half, when most of the play was in Winchester's defensive end. Luck was not on the Sachemettes' side when they put on a lot of pressure of their own. The Wakefield goalie made four great saves in a row.

For the evening, Winchester had 25 shots on net and Wakefield only eight. Play seesawed back and forth for the remaining minutes.

Debbie Maida again played outstanding defense and was all over the field all night long. Jane O'Neil and Charlotte Reese played well.

Senior Kim Small made a nice defensive play in the second half to thwart a good opportunity by the Warriors.

"Wakefield was a tough team but I like our attitude. We were ready to play. We're still growing, but we played hard," said coach Chris Scanlon.

Friday night, Winchester endured a long trip and a long rain delay to beat Andover High 2-0.

Katie "Scooter" Binding and Nowell scored in the first half. Their goal proved enough for the victory.

Winchester will visit Burlington tomorrow afternoon and host Reading Monday. Both games are at 3:30 p.m.

CSSM swimmers end good summer

Winchester members of the Community Stars and Stripes of Medford (CSSM) swim team finished the summer on a strong note.

Billy Shuh, 10, and Michael Carroll, 12, swam at the Junior Olympic Swimming Championships at Harvard University.

Shuh swam six events, improving his time tremendously in all. His strongest finish was in the 100-yard butterfly, where he finished third, and in the 50-yard fly, where he was 11th.

He also swam the 50-, 100- and 200-yard freestyle and the 200-yard individual medley (IM).

Carroll finished third overall, seeing close finishes in all nine of his events. He was second in the 400-freestyle, missing first by just .03 seconds.

He was first in the 100-fly, second in the 200-free, missing first by .11 seconds, and second in the 200-IM.

He was also second in 50- and 100-free, fourth in the 100-breaststroke and fifth in the 50-breaststroke.

In a previous meet at Dover, N.H., both boys were joined by Amie Joseph, 12, and Victoria Tobakis, 11.

Shuh qualified for championships in six events and finished third din the 100-breaststroke, fifth in the 50-breaststroke and 11th in the 100-backstroke.

Tobakis swam strongly in the 200-IM, 50-free, 100-backstroke, 200-free and 50-fly.

Joseph entered the 200-IM, 100-breaststroke, 50-, 100- and 200-free and the 50-fly.

Carroll placed first or second in all events and qualified for 11 championship events.

ing for some offense, as well as their first goal of the season.

Star of the game for Melrose was Missy Della Russo, whose two goals in the first half proved to be enough.

"There are a few things we have to work on," said coach Brown. "We're beter than we have shown."

Monday, the Sachemettes against lost without scoring, falling 4-0 to Watertown.

Winchester will travel to Reading to visit the Rockettes at 3:30 p.m. tomorrow, host Stoneham Monday and visit Lexington Wednesday, Sept. 24.

tum changed in the Warriors' direction.

Wakefield was given an indirect kick from about 30 yards out because of a penalty given to Sachem sweeper Steve Goudsouzian. Winchester did not cover Wakefield well enough as the ball sped on the ground toward the goal, reaching the net virtually untouched.

The Sachems kept on. Rice got his second goal of the game, hustling in front of the net to head a ball into the goal for the winning score in a 3-2 decision.

Melrose became the second Winchester victim Sept. 12, when the Sachems were without the services of fullback Mark Bortman and halfback Karim Ek, who were away, and wing Fowler, who had been injured in the Wakefield game.

Melrose had surprised Stoneham in its season opener and came to Winchester ready for a big upset, especially since the Sachems were cocky and joking around before the game.

Winchester needed a few reminders from coach Gene Bouley and some team leaders to keep the game in mind.

The game began evenly with Melrose getting some offensive flow and Winchester having trouble finding the net. For 20 minutes, there was no score.

Finally the Sachems came through when junior halfback Paul Erbafina picked up a loose ball, burst through the defense and scored. It was all the Sachems would need.

But the Sachems stayed hungry. Rice, hustling in front, got the second goal of the half as Winchester increasingly dominated play.

At halftime, the Sachems led 2-0 but were disgusted with themselves. They flew into the second half with a vengeance, pounding the ball in the net four times.

Erbafina displayed his powerful shot as he cranked in a Mike McGeehan cross.

Sophomore Vandy French scored the first goal of his high school career.

Halfback Stephen Reeve split the Melrose defense and took a blistering shot that was blocked by a spectacular save but the rebound was knocked in by hustling forward Anthony Cuccinatti.

Paul Capodanno, starting in place of Fowler, scored off a loose rebound as the ball flew over the outstretched goalie and into the net.

Coach Bouley used all of the bench as the Sachems wore down a discouraged Melrose squad, cruising to a 6-0 triumph.

Winchester will host Burlington at 3:30 p.m. Friday at Skillings Field. The Sachems will visit Reading Monday and host Stoneham next Wednesday.

Tennis tournament

four seeds all advanced to the semifinals.

In Saturday's semifinals, Will Aldrich won a lengthy three-set match against Jack Corf, winning 4-6, 6-3, 6-2. In the other semi, Bob Horne Sr. gave Salter a solid test but lost 6-2, 6-4.

Salter came to the courts ready to play Sunday morning. In the finals, Aldrich played fine tennis but did not win a game against the impeccable play of champion Salter.

Peggy Wiseman and Dee Dee Cunningham, the second-seeded team in women's doubles, held off the top-seeded team of defending champions Joan Byrne and Mary Golden to take the title.

Wiseman and Cunningham took an early lead in the first set and won it. They dropped the second set but again took an early lead in the final set. Byrne and Golden came back to make it close but Wiseman and Cunningham won the deciding set 6-4.

Brothers Joe and David Palumbo combined to win the men's doubles crown in the day's most exciting event.

In the lower half of the draw, Desmarteaux and Salter beat Vandy French and Chris Scanlon 7-5 in the third set.

French and Scanlon had four match points against their opponents but the mentally tough Desmarteaux and the always hustling Salter persevered.

Both teams had won three-set victories to reach the semifinals, Franch and Scanlon downing Phil Coonley and Leo Laurentano while Desmarteaux and Salter beat Alex Popp and Bill Wolfe.

The Palumbo brothers made themselves the story of the event, however. Joe, a senior at Winchester High School, and David, a student at the University of New Hampshire, came out in the doubles final with all guns blazing against Desmarteaux and Salter.

The Palumbos took the first set 6-0. They let up only slightly in the second set against a determined pair, winning 6-4.

Bill Wolfe and Joan Byrne captured the mixed doubles title, defeating Janet Burke and Don Ellis 6-3, 6-3 in the finals. Wolfe had his intimidating overhead and powerful serve working for him while Byrne played her usual steady game.

Burke and Ellis won more games from the eventual champions than any other opponent, however.

The men's singles final will be shown on cable Channel 19 in Winchester at 10:30 a.m. Sunday, Sept. 21, and may also be repeated Sept. 22.

Winchester residents co-captains

By JIM WOODWORTH

Two Winchester residents are among the three senior co-captains for this season's Boston College men's soccer team.

Steve Masiello, the son of Thomas and Diane Masiello; and David Suvak, the son of Lawrence and Susan Suvak, are joined by Scott Jones of Yarmouth, Maine, as Eagle co-captains.

Masiello, a forward, is in his third year on the BC team. He led the Eagles in scoring as a sophomore with six goals and 12 total points before scoring one goal in seven games during an injury-plagued campaign last year.

A graduate of Rivers Country Day School — where he was captain of the hockey and soccer teams — Masiello was a member of the Massachusetts State Select Soccer Team in 1981 and 1982 and was chosen for the Eastern Regional Select Soccer Team in 1981.

After a year at Boston University, where he was on a hockey scholarship, Masiello transferred to BC, where he is enrolled in the College of Arts and Sciences.

Masiello's lone goal last season was a game-winner. He is also the only Eagle ever to score three goals in one game against a Division I opponent, accomplishing the feat against Vermont as a sophomore.

Suvak is in his fourth year with the Eagles. After a freshman year in which he played 19 of 20 games and earned most improved player honors, he broke his arm in the second game of his sophomore season and missed the rest of the year.

A defensive back, Suvak earned team most valuable player accolades last season while play in all 20 games.

The Winchester High School graduate was a Massachusetts State Select Soccer Team choice three times in high school and gained all-scholastic and all-Eastern Massachusetts honors while playing for Sachem coach Gene Bouley.

Suvak is enrolled in BC's College of Arts and Sciences. Because of his injury as a sophomore, he is eligible to play next season.

BC, coming of an 8-9-3 season, is coached by Ben Brewster, in his 10th year at the Eagle helm. With 15 lettermen returning, including eight starters, BC's outlook to improve on last season's record is bright.

The Eagles opened the Big East season Sept. 1.

ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

Leda Sullivan will be one of several artists who will demonstrate her work during the Winchester Art Association's first picture lending party of the year from 1 to 4 p.m. Sunday, Sept. 28, at an Arlington Street home.

Picture lending party is Sept. 28

Artist Leda Sullivan's oil paintings are now on view at the Winchester Art Association Gallery. She will be one of the artists demonstrating during the first picture lending party of the season. It will be held Sunday Sept. 28 from 1 to 4 p.m. at the Arlington Street home of Dr. and Mrs. Roy Johnson.

During the first hour artists who are loaning their work to the scholarship will be present. Carolyn Latanision chairs the picture acquisition committee. She says that meeting the artists, becoming acquainted with the variety of media in which they work and choosing a different piece every six months gives subscribers an inexpensive opportunity to become knowledgeable and even to purchase art through the program.

Refreshments will be served until the time for choosing the art work. Dorothy Ponti, who is coordinating the 1986-87 picture lending said that there can be quite a bit of suspense as each subscriber's name is drawn by lot enabling them to take home their preference.

The sociability, entertainment and final receipt of an original work of art becomes doubly satisfying to patrons and artists who are also contributing to the artistic education of one of Winchester's own high school graduates.

The Winchester Art Association has organized picture lending parties for more than 20 years. Scholarship gifts amounting to about $2,000 a year are administered by the Winchester Scholarship Foundation. For $20 a year two people can attend two parties, choose two pieces of art and share in this educational benefit program. Please call Mrs. Frank H. Wilder, 729-6346, evenings, to purchase subscriptions.

Frank Barnes is a long-time Winchester resident. For about twenty years he has been painting in oils: landscape, still life and marine subjects.

His sister, Marietta B. Cornwall, a prominent Boston commercial artist and portrait artist in Rockport, influenced him to start and try his luck. He studied with her for several years at the beginning of his career.

Barnes is a past president of the Winchester Art Association, was treasurer and is now a member of the board. He is also a member of The Copley Society of Boston and of the North Shore Art Association of Gloucester.

He has shown his paintings in Massachusetts and outside in New England in various places including the Farnsworth Museum gallery in Rockland, Maine, the Annisquam Gallery and the Copley Society gallery in Boston. His paintings can be seen in many homes in the area and elsewhere along the eastern seaboard.

Educationally he has been influenced by the American Post impressionist school of the early twentieth century.

On Cape Ann, where many of his paintings have been executed, he has been influenced by his association through the years with many Rockport and Gloucester artists — principally Wayne Morrell and Aldro Hibbard.

Brother Edward Rice is a Xaverian Brother, a religious congregation of teaching brothers who administer and staff several Catholic secondary schools in the Archidiocese of Boston. He is the art instructor at St. John's Preparatory School in Danvers. Rice also conducts adult evening classes in oil painting and screen printing during the fall and spring.

Rice earned a bachelor of arts in American History from the Catholic University of America in Washington, D.C. in 1968, and an master of fine arts in art education from Boston University in 1978. It is only within the past twelve years that Rice has pursued his childhood interest in visual art.

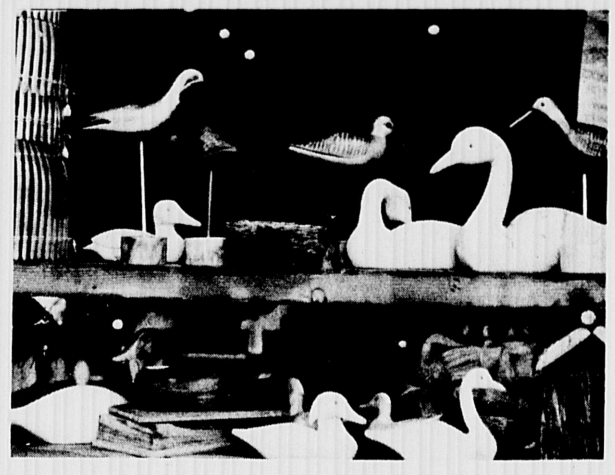
While at B.U., Rice was introduced to the printmaking processes of etching and serigraphy. He pursued printmaking as his studio major. Rice has done extensive work in printmaking, more particularly with serigraphy. Serigraphy is the term applied to silkscreen printing when it is used as a fine art. A dominant feature of his serigraphs are the color blends in the background of his images, sometimes soft and subtle, other times bold and vibrant.

Rice is a member of the Winchester Art Association and the Danvers Art Association. He has won several prizes in juried shows conducted by these organizations. More recently he won first and second prizes in printmaking in the Danvers fall exhibit of 1985.

His prints are currently on display at the Upstairs Gallery in Middleton, at the Christine-Louise Gallery at Popponesset Marketplace in New Seabury and at the Hunt Memorial Hospital in Danvers.

Rice participated in the Marblehead Arts Festival. Since several of his works deal with a religious theme, he choose to submit one of his etchings to a national juried art exhibit entitled: "Sacred Arts VIII." The exhibit is currently on display at the Billy Graham Center Museum in Wheaton, Ill.

Rice will conduct a one-man show during the month of October at the Peabody Institute of Danvers, (the public library of Danvers.)



This picture is one of Faith Davidson Waltman's photographs. Waltman will join several artists for a picture lending party Sept. 29.

Surabian operates design business

Freya Surabian of 35 Glengreen St., a 1986 graduate of the interior design program at Chamberlayne Junior College in Boston, is now operating Freya Surabian Interior Design in Winchester.

She is also enrolled at the Boston Architectural Center.

Hogan becomes bridal consultant

Jackie Hogan of 5 Sheridan Circle, a 1986 retail merchandising graduate of Chamberlayne Junior College in Boston, is employed as a bridal consultant at Pronuptia Bridals, Inc., in Boston.

Studio Guild classes to open

The Studio Guild of Winchester, an art class for students of all ages and at all levels, will hold its fall organization meeting at 10 a.m. Thursday, Sept. 25, at the home of Mary Gaye Deskin, 397 Highland Ave.

Men and women interested in joining the guild or in learning more about fall classes are invited.

Patrick Carter will direct the guild in its 51st year of classes. A painter and draftsman, Carter is working on an advanced degree in the combined Tufts/Museum of Fine Arts program. He has many years of experience in art, including teaching at both secondary school and adult education levels.

Carter's work has been exhibited widely in museums in Delaware and neighboring states. An art show mounted by his students in the Delaware prison system received considerable acclaim within the state and in Washington, D.C.

Guild classes are Thursday mornings from 9:30 to 11 and Tuesday evenings from 7:30 to 9 in the upstairs parish hall of the Parish of the Epiphany. Students may elect either the morning or the evening series or may participate in both. Carter will teach both drawing and painting.

For more information, please call Barbara Carter, president of the guild, at 729-3666.

Gobeille returns to Burlington stage

Shelley Gobeille of Winchester will return to the state of the Burlington Players for the 1986-87 season.

She last appeared in the Players' cabaret production of "Something Wonderful" in May and will return this fall in "Godspell." The play will be staged the weekends of Sept. 19 and 26 at the Park Playhouse, off Winn Street in Burlington.

Ticket information is available from 229-2649. Other shows on the season schedule include "Habeas Corpus","On Golden Pond" and "Witness for the Prosecution."

Arts auction donations sought

Community support is sought for community arts. The recreation department, which is adding arts programs to its offerings, is conducting a fund-raising compaign to raise funds for and community interest in arts activities.

Donations will support such programs as summer park concerts, winter concerts, arts festivals, summer theater, arts camps, field trip and arts publications.

The focal activity of the initial fund-raising campaign includes an auction of goods and services donated by local individuals, groups, and businesses, to be Saturday Oct. 18, at the town hall, during the October Arts Festival, co-sponsored with the library.

Donations are sought for this auction. Donations may be of any type, not necessarily arts-related, of any value and in good condition. Donors should contact the recreation department at 721-7125. Cash contributions are also accepted.

Each auction donation will be accompanied by the name of the donor while on exhibit and during auctioning, unless anonymity is requested, thus providing an opportunity for local merchants, artists, craftspeople, or groups to publicize their businesses or activities.

Mr. and Mrs. William Anthony Mara

Jean Theresa Ciarcia and William A. Mara exchange wedding vows

Jean Theresa Ciarcia and William Anthony Mara were married July 20 at St. Mary's Church. Reverend George J. Butera officiated the double-ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Ciarcia of Winchester. The bridgegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Mara of Pittsfield.

The bride wore a chapel length gown made of silk organza. The full skirt and short puffed sleeves were covered with schiffly embroidery. The fitted bodice, with sweatheart neckline, was decorated with Alencon lace, sequins, and beading.

Her headpiece consisted of a beaded wreath and a fingertip length veil with marrod edges. The bride carried a cascading bouquet of Phaelenopsis orchids surrounded by white roses and stephanotiz. The ivy filler was clipped from her mother's wedding bouquet 29 years ago.

The bride's mother wore a blue gown made of silk chamois. The floor length trumpet skirt, and blouson, bodice was accessorized with white sequins. The groom's mother wore a lavendar full length gown made of embroidered lace.

Diane Fiore, of Wilmington, was the maid of honor for her cousin. Bridesmaids were Nancy Mara, of North Reading, Susan Mara of Pittsfield, sisters of the bridegroom and Maria Sacco of Charlestown, friend of the bride.

The matron-of-honor wore purple while the bridesmaids were dressed in lilac. The floor length gowns had a v-neckline and diagonal waist. The matching headpiece was trimmed with beads and accented with gathered tulle (netting) in the back. They carried a cascading bouquet of purple orchids, freesia, and lilac chrysanthemums.

The bridge groom was attended by his best man, Mark Goldie, of Houston. Ushers were John, Wayne, and Daniel Ciarcia, of Winchester, brothers of the bride, and Stephen Fradkin, of Pittsfield, cousin of the bride groom.

The reception was held in the Harborview Ballroom of the Danversport Yacht Club. Attending the guestbook was Linda Murphy, of Framingham, cousin of the bride.

The bride graduated from Winchester High School and Boston College. She is employed as a financial anaylst with Digital Equipment Corporation.

The bridegroom graduated from St. Joseph High School in Pittsfield and Boston College. He is a systems analyst for General Electric.

After a wedding trip to Hawaii, the couple reside in North Reading.

More donate to Jenks Center expansion project

Appreciation is extended to recent donors to the Jenks Senior Center expansion fund.

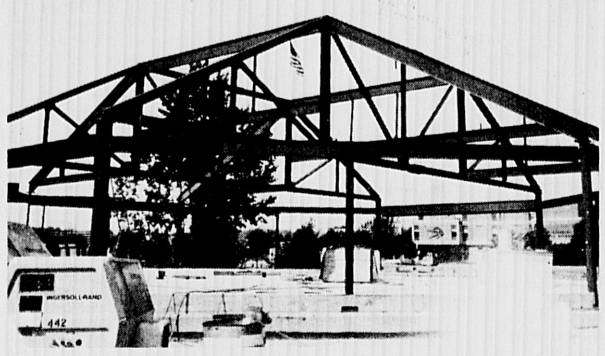
Also, Dr. Paul and Eleanor Fitzgerald; John L. and Anna B. Gerardi; Mr. and Mrs. Edmund A. Gullion; Colleen and Ron Hertel; Edward E. Hicks; Daniel and Florence P. Hrtizay; Francis J. and Nancy M. McMahon; John E. and Barbara A. Kent; W.P. Keyes; and Julie E. and Charles Khuen.

Also Mrs. Edith M. Knoettner; Ronald H. and June C. Kossel; Mr. and Mrs. Bernard F. La Page; Mr. and Mrs A.J. Martini; Robert and Patricia A. Merenda; Margaret A. Millican; M. Louise Moran; Aram T. Mouradian; Mrs. Nancy Norberg; Robert K. Porter; and Ann M. and John A. Sutherland.



The Jenks expansion program is well underway. Completion of the addition is slated for January 1987.

Fair donations still needed

Desperately needed are more saleable items for the tenth annual Fall Fiesta Fair Oct. 1 and 2.

Hand knit mittens of all sizes, socks, hats, scarves, sweaters and other articles of inner and outer wear are needed. The baked goods table is appealing to the cooks of the town for breads, pastries, jams, jellies, preserves and fresh garden produce.

Faye Boliver has saved the day by assuming the chairmanship of the white elephant table. She is looking for things that are practical and in good condition, especially household items.

The gift shoppe needs choice glassware, antiques, trays, vases, china, and any other valuable articles. Silver, gold, pewter, and copper will be gratefully received.

The men's boutique asks for items such as checkers and other games, new billfolds, belts, lighters, pipes, key-rings and all kinds of tools.

Electrical items in good working condition are needed for the appliance table. Such items as toasters, electrical fry pans, toaster ovens and electric can openers are needed at an early date to give Ed Palmer a chance to go over the articles before placing them on sale.

The women's boutique will appreciate such articles as attractive glassware, ornaments, linens, dishes and candles.

Also needed is costume jewelry such as bracelets, brooches, beads, earrings, necklaces and rings.

Contributions of any saleable items will help to increase the proceeds of the fair.

The fair must be a financial success to help with the operational costs of extended facilities since bills will be much higher when the building is completed.

Building update

Sept. 10 at the construction site at the Jenks Senior Center, an American flag was hoisted and placed atop the steel roof frame of the center.

This "topping off" event marks a milestone in the progress of the construction of the new addition. A small tree or a flag is used by the construction company as a symbol for "topping off," indicating that the height of the new construction has been reached.

Sept. 9, a 900 pound compressor hung from a 150-foot crane in preparation for lifting the truss girders in place. The steel beams weighed more than 7,500 pounds each.

Italian dinner set for Oct. 1

An important event of the tenth annual Fall Fiesta Fair will be the Italian dinner from 5 to 7 p.m., Oct. 1 at the Knights of Columbus Hall.

Helen Murphy, chairperson of the dinner committee, is planning to accommodate 600 people. The menu includes lasagna and meatballs, green salad, rolls, wine, dessert and coffee or tea. The public is cordially invited to attend.

Tickets may be obtained at the Jenks Senior Center reception desk or from Harry Chefalo, ticket chairman for the event.

Jenks plans trip, Nov. 5

Nov. 5, the annual trip to Vanity Fair Factory Outlet in New Bedford is scheduled with lunch at Yesterday's Restaurant. Menu choice includes schrod or chicken. The bus leaves Jenks Senior Center at 10 a.m. and returns at 5 p.m.

Anne Feuss is in charge of the trip.

Be sure to eat an early breakfast since lunch will be served at 11:30 a.m. Here is a good opportunity to buy Christmas presents at reduced prices.

Day trip to Christo's

On Nov. 19 a trip to Christo's Restaurant in Brockton is planned featuring the Gaylords.

Fall town meeting to consider low-income housing again

sites, including one at Mullen Park, two on the former Woburn Loop railroad near Cross Street, three on Palmer Street near the Mary Murphy Apartments and one at the corner of Cambridge and High streets.

Creation of alternative sites was clearly not popular with selectmen.

As soon as town manager Chad Maurer read the list of articles submitted for the fall town meeting, including those from the special study committee, selectmen Bob Deering spoke up.

"I'm aware of the lack of progress in housing," he said. "But these sites are all zoned as conservation districts." He said he was unsure why the sites had been submitted.

"Were they meant to be an alternative to what we have or were they meant as a back-up plan?" Deering asked no one in particular.

Deering said he thought the special study committee was supposed to talk to everyone involved in housing plans, make the issues clear to everyone, and report back to the fall town meeting.

Instead, Deering said, the committee seems to have taken the role of being "the driving force in housing.

"We're creating a rat's nest. As it is the problem is one of communication, the last thing we need is more people involved," Deering said.

The housing authority should be the leader in housing issues, he said.

"I have real serious doubts about the purpose of this committee," Deering said.

Welch said he shared "many" of Deering's concerns and said he believes the housing authority "is moving along at a good clip" implementing the housing plans approved in the spring.

Deering pressed on. He said the board has talked about a joint meeting between the selectmen, planning board and housing authority since he was elected in March but no meeting has taken place.

"The dialogue has got to open up," he said.

Several minutes of discussion were diverted while selectmen debated whether the articles submitted by the special study committee had to be placed on the town meeting warrant.

Town counsel Doug Randall hedged, recalling that warrants submitted in the past, including one dealing with abortion, had been rejected by selectmen even though petitions to include the article were legally drawn and signed by more than 10 voters.

Welch, also an attorney, disagreed strongly. Reading from the town charter, Welch said the town is bound to include any article submitted by 10 voters or by "any elected or appointed multi-member body" of town government.

"Town counsel is wrong, flat out wrong," Welch said. "The charter says the selectmen shall, not may, place on the warrant any legally drawn article."

Welch tried to get the rest of the board to discuss only the inclusion of the articles submitted by the committee, not their content.

He failed.

Town manager Maurer said the special study committee "has a hard time understanding the bureaucracy and how long it takes to get housing under construction."

However, he said, the housing authority is "working hard to get the seven units" approved in the spring by town meeting also approved by the state.

Selectmen Judie Muggia speculated that the intent of the study committee may have been "to put all of the alternatives originally mentioned" before town meeting.

Deering said submission of the housing articles violated common sense. "People have been talking about this issue for three years. This committee has been in existence four months," he said.

As recently as last Thursday, neither the housing authority nor the citizens advisory committee to it knew about the special study committee's plan to bring seven new sites up for discussion, Deering said.

Welch told the board, "You don't start dialogue by hammering the committee. You shouldn't panic. Maybe the committee is not trying to disrupt our effort."

Welch said selectmen should put the committee's articles on the warrant and invite committee members to state their intentions.

Selectman Mark Lombardi objected. "We're tipping our hand to the state," he said. "After we build seven units, we'll already have seven more sites available. We'll be saying we have room for more housing."

Lombardi asked rhetorically, "What if we don't put these articles on the warrant? What are they going to do, take us to court?"

Deering also had reservations. He noted that one article concerns the Canal-Hemingway site rejected in the spring, in part because of a promise by Welch not to put housing on that site.

"You'll be criticized for putting it back on the warrant," he said, apparently to Welch.

Deering pointed out that the study committee had not proposed any new sites, only some previously rejected.

"This innovative committee could have come up with different sites," he said.

Welch again tried to cool the discussion. "Why get all excited? They're just articles. You're overreacting," he said.

"You're a lame-duck selectman," Deering reminded the chairman.

"Hot rhetoric doesn't advance the cause of housing," Welch said.

"Well, I can't walk out on the Canal and Hemingway people," Muggia said. "But that's not what we're debating, the content."

Selectman Frank Sopper said selectmen had one more opportunity to discuss housing with the planning board and the housing authority, next Monday night.

"We may convince them to withdraw one or two articles," Sopper said.

"For the record, I'm not in favor of putting them on the warrant," Deering said.

Saying he was alarmed with the discussion, Welch said firmly, "Now that action is finally happening (in housing), it would be a tragic mistake to go back to rhetoric."

Welch asked if selectmen wanted to invite other boards next week. Three heads, those of Deering, Sopper and Lombardi, nodded affirmatively.

"There has to be jawboning," Sopper said.

"Let's get it all out in the open," Deering said.

"This is heavy stuff. We all should talk about it," Sopper said.

"I agree," Muggia said. Welch agreed to invite everyone involved for the 7:30 p.m. meeting Monday.

The meeting room could be crowded, several selectmen said.

Two other articles proposed by the special committee would appropriate town money to supplement state monies for Section 705 housing construction and create a new committee "to prepare a long-range housing plan" and appropriate money for its expenses.

Like they say in the Army, there's always somebody that doesn't get the word. Just when we figure EVERYBODY has heard of us, we're hit with "BLDG. WHAT?" or "I love your ads, but I've never been to your store."

Story by Liesa Healy

Lighthouses still with

"So tonight wandering sailors pale with fears
Wide o'er the watery waste a light appears
Which on the far-seen mountain blazing high
Streams from lonely watchtower to the sky." Homer

For centuries, lighthouses have shone across the waters of New England harbors, guiding vessels past dangerous straits and rocky shoals.

Dubbed "beacons of hope" by historian Thomas Raddall, they have long served as symbols of the booming American marine industry, a comfort to sailors, and in this century, a popular subject for artists and photographers.

Although many consider lighthouses unique to New England's seacoast, they were invented ages before the settlement of the New World.

The first lighthouse was the Pharos, erected by the Egyptians in 300 B.C. One of the seven wonders of the ancient world, it stood 450 feet high and burned for over 1,000 years.

In 50 B.C., the Romans began building them in their own ports, and by the 12th century, the idea had spread to Europe.

The first lights in the New World were primitive versions of their European counterparts.Throughout the 17th century, most of them were just lanterns, dangling from sticks placed at harbor entrances.

From these makeshift beacons, some villagers, or "down Capers" devised a way to reap their share of the flourishing 18th century sea trade.

On dark nights, these "moon cussers" would stand along the beach, swinging "Judas lanterns" to lure ships into treacherous waters.

Thinking the beacons marked safe areas, the captains would guide ships toward the shoreline. After they crashed onto the reefs, the villagers would stand by while the craft broke apart and its crew drowned or struggled to shore.

At daybreak, the townsmen would comb the beach for precious cargo.

This practice continued into the 18th century, even after European-style towers began to dot the coast. In fact, many New Englanders opposed the construction of lighthouses because they hampered the "moon-cussing" business, which had become quite profitable in some coastal communities.

The first light tower in the country was erected in Boston Harbor in 1716. Also thought to be first in the New World, Boston Light became a station for American troops after the British tried to capture it in 1775.

Despite the efforts of Major Benjamin Tupper, the enemy eventually landed and blew up the tower.

During the 18th century, the number of lighthouses continued to grow. Permanent lights were constructed in most major harbors on the Eastern seaboard, along with some on the West Coast.

Although the total figure is uncertain, some historians believe that by the end of the mid-19th century, lighthouses on both coasts numbered as high as 1500.

Perhaps its large concentration in this region accounts for the identification of the lighthouse with New England. By 1825, two-thirds of all lighthouses in America guarded harbors between New York City and northern Maine.

In Massachusetts, Boston Light sparked the construction of a score of other lighthouseth in Boston Harbor and along inlets on the North and South Shore.

Today, almost 30 lighthouses line the Massachusetts coastline, from Newburyport to Martha's Vineyard. After World War II, however, most were either decommissioned, automated, or condemned due to neglect.

Although lighthouses are no longer crucial to navigation, they stand as proud reminders of the most profitable era of the American marine industry.

But these "beacons of hope" are more than mere monuments to the ships they aided.

Visiting a lighthouse can be a fascinating sidetrip on a vacation or weekend getaway. Unlike a museum, which features organized exhibits and programs, a lighthouse is a lonely place, unrestored and exposed to the elements.

Affected by the ravages of wind and water, it is an ever-changing structure; it is history in the raw.

Before visting a lighthouse, a trip to the local library could result in some curious facts about the structure and its grounds.

Plymouth Light (1769) in Plymouth Bay was struck by a stray cannonball from a British ship but continued to operate throughout the Revolutionary War.

And during the 1950s, when author Edward Rowe Snow --"The Flying Santa"-- dropped a package on Baker's Island, the lightkeeper rushed out onto the beach to spell "Merry Christmas" with driftwood.

Old photographs or lithographs can provide an interesting contrast to the real thing. Due to vandalism, neglect, and the influence of the elements, most lights are much changed from 50-year-old pictures on postcards.

Often, the present-day structure is a reproduction of the original.

Brant Point Light, built in Nantucket Harbor in 1746, was reconstructed eight times before 1901. The twin towers at Newburyport Harbor were first built on Plum Island, then moved due to the shifting channel of the river.

In addition, other buildings which were once part of the tower complex may have either been added or demolished.

Long Point Light (1827) in Provincetown, at one time one of the largest lighthouse complexes in the state, included a large keeper's house, bell tower, and barn.

By the 1850s, 200 fishermen and salt works laborers comprised a community centered around the tower.

Just as each lighthouse possesses its own history, it also has a unique location worthy of a visitor's attention.

In Massachusetts, a light can stand on a flat, sandy sweep (Great Point), on pilings in the harbor

(Minot's), or in its most common setting -- a steep, craggy cliff overlooking the sea, a favorite view of artists and photographers.

In each location, the vegetation, wildlife, and shape of the shoreline are interesting features to examine, especially in light of how they have affected the condition of the structure.

Reaching the lighthouse can be a memorable excursion. Since few travel agents or charter companies place them on must-see agendas, visitors are responsible for planning their own approach.

If the lighthouse is on a rocky ledge, wear hiking boots instead of sneakers. Even if there is a clear path to the point, scout around upon arriving.

If the lighthouse lies in the harbor, check with local charter companies to find out which cruise can either provide the best view, or better yet, travel directly to the island.

Those who choose to sail themselves should ask someone from a charter company or a local yacht club about the safest and easiest approach to the island.

Once on the grounds, visitors are allowed to have picnics, take pictures, or play ball -- but not to enter the lighthouse.

Although most are either deserted or automated (only three in Massachusetts are still manned by keepers), the lights are federal property and tourists are expected to honor government guidelines.

In addition, an empty, isolated lighthouse, like any abandoned structure, could be a dangerous place to explore.

With the exception of Salem's Derby Wharf Light, which opened in mid-August, not one Massachusetts light is open to the public at present.

One local group is trying to change that. For the past four years, the Lighthouse Preservation Society in Rockport has been gathering support for the rehabilitation and preservation of local lights.

With the support of Sen. Edward Kennedy, the Society is recommending that the Coast Guard lease the lights to a private investor or non-profit group.

The lessee could use the tower and outbuildings to establish a restaurant, inn, or youth hostel.

Currently, though, the lights stand alone, bearing up under the forces of vandalism and neglect.

Whether they become popular tourist spots or quietly fade from the shoreline, one thing is certain -- this may be one of the last seasons to see the lonely sentinels in an isolated atmosphere of natural beauty.

Final journey

In Virginia Woolf's novel, To The Lighthouse, character James Ramsay finally journeys to the lighthouse he had meant to visit — but never did — while he was a child.

The novel describes his first view of the lighthouse: "There it loomed up, stark and straight, glaring white and black, and one could see the waves breaking in white splinters like smashed glass upon the rocks...

"So it was like that, James thought, the lighthouse one had seen across the bay all these years; it was a stark tower on a bare rock.

"It satisfied him."

What's On The Boards

From left: Tintypes is a big hit at the American Stage Festival, through Sept. 28, in Milford, N.H.; storyteller Spaulding Gray weaves his macabre magic through Sept. 21 at Trinity Repertory, Providence; Donn Simione shines in the famous title number of Singin' In The Rain, at Boston's Shubert Theatre.

Solid hits brighten fall season

Singin' In The Rain is heavenly

REVIEW

It's happy. It's joyful. It's carefree, it's tuneful and hummable. It's a delectable souffle, cotton candy, apple pie and ice cream. It's a lovable Hollywood fairy tale of make-believe and tinseltown! It's Singin' In The Rain. The yellow brick road, at least until Sept. 20, leads not to the Land of Oz, but to the Shubert Theatre.

But it was not always thus. The Broadway production was gutted by mediocrity — a stick of a leading man, totally inept direction and amateurish choreography, diffused focus and oppressively long filmed sequences.

Fortunately, the national touring production has been completely and masterfully re-directed by Lawrence Kasha and re-choreographed by Peter Gennaro.

Under Kasha's helm, the show is now as tight as a drum, Gennaro's dance routines ooze with pizazz, and the transformation is stunning!

Even the score has been revised.

Peter Wolf Concepts for scenery, Robert Fletcher for costumes, Thomas Skelton for lighting, and a fine orchestra under the baton of Raymond Allen are worthy successors to their New York counterparts.

Purists who have seen the MGM 1952 film classic multiple times might find it difficult to accept others than Gene Kelly, Debbie Reynolds and Donald O'Connor recreating their roles on stage, but for the rest of us, this mounting is captivating, gloriously infectious, and a great season's opener.

Adaped by Betty Comden and Adolph Green, with a bevy of familiar favorites by Nacio Herb Brown and Arthur Freed, Singin In The Rain boasts a young, energetic, effervescent, good-looking and talented cast who whoop up a storm.

And, if Hollywood should ever decide to concentrate on musicals again, Donn Simione, in the Kelly role, could become a household name and a star of the first magnitude. He is winning, handsome and personable, animated and charismatic, with a fine baritone voice and strong acting ability. While he may not possess the flair of Kelly or the elegance of Astaire, he is, nevertheless, a solid hoofer.

Simione gets stellar support from Brad Moranz as second banana. Re-creating the O'Connor role, Moranz is simply sensational whether singing, dancing, acting, taking pratfalls or cracking jokes. Equally impressive are Jennifer Smith as the queen of silent screen and Alan Sues as the outrageously swishy movie director. Elek Hartman is also noteworthy as the studio head. Cynthia Ferrer is pert and pretty as the ingenue (the Reynolds role) but does not measure up vocally.

Singin' In The Rain opens in Hollywood in 1927, at Grauman's Chinese Theatre, where a film featuring silent screen stars Don Lockwood (Simione) and Lina Lamont (Smith) is premiering.

When Don attempts to escape his adoring fans, Cosmo (Moranz), Lockwood's former vaudeville dance partner, loyal side-kick, and current studio pianist, wards off the crowd. During this breather, there's a chance meeting between Don and Kathy Selden (Ferrer), who dreams of a lofty career in theatre.

At the celebration party that evening, a huge cake is rolled in, out of which steps Kathy. Don jibes Kathy, who takes offense, and a pie meant for Don ends up in Lina's face, abruptly ending the budding relationship with Don and a possible future with the film studio. But Don is smitten and searches frantically for Kathy.

Don and Lina have just wrapped up shooting on their next film, The Dueling Cavalier, when Al Jolson's talking picture The Jazz Singer opens, making silent films obsolete overnight.

Faced with financial disaster, studio head R.F. Simpson (Hartman) and director Roscoe Dexter (Sues) agree to hold back release of the film and make it into a talking musical, The Dancing Cavalier.

But Lina speaks with a grating Brooklynese and is "a triple threat. . .she can't sing, she can't dance, she can't act." As Cosmo tells her, "Your talking may bring back silent pictures!"

Cosmo discovers Kathy when she auditions for a film role, and Don and Kathy pick up their romance.

Endless vocal coaching for Lina proves futile and endless "takes" leave Simpson and Dexter distraught and desperate.

Kathy is prevailed upon to dub her voice for Lina's and the film proves a smash in its preview.

Kathy seems destined to remain Lina's voice forever, but Don has other ideas and, at the reception following the premiere, Lina's inflated ego proves her undoing.

Kathy goes on to stardom and, for Don, she does indeed prove to be his "lucky star."

The score is easy listening and toe-tapping with 15 popular standards including You Stepped Out Of A Dream, You Are My Lucky Star, Broadway Melody, a terrific rendition of the novelty What's Wrong With Me? by Smith.

There are eight numbers choreographed after Gene Kelly and Stanley Donen, including Make 'Em Laugh, You Were Meant For Me, a beautiful rendition by Simione and Ferrer, a fabulous song-and-dance routine of Moses by Simione and Moranz, the memorable Good Mornin' by Simione, Moranz and Ferrer, and the title tune, jubilantly re-created in the rain by Simione.

Spalding Gray an artist at work

REVIEW

It is 8 p.m. precisely and noted monologist Spalding Gray walks briskly to center stage of the Trinity Repertory Company to present his Swimming to Cambodia.

The stage is virtually barren except for a table and chair, microphone and a glass of water. A pulled-up blind hangs suspended on one side of the table — it proves to be a pull-down map of Asia — and on the other side, a large white placard — later revealing an enlarged map of Cambodia.

The internationally acclaimed storyteller wears a lumberjack-checked shirt, loose-fitting, faded blue denims, and holds a manuscript in his hand. He is tall, attractive, well-built, in his mid-forties. His shock of curly brown hair is sprinkled with gray and his hairline, slightly receding.

Fresh from an extended sellout stint at New York's Lincoln Center, Gray is in Providence to relate some of his highly personal experiences in three of his most celebrated monologues: Swimming To Cambodia, Terrors Of Pleasure, Sept. 19 and 21, and Sex And Death To The Age 14, Sept. 18, 20, 21.

Gray is casual, relaxed and intimate — almost one-on-one. So disarming is Gray that he could easily be alone with you having a rap session, relating personal experiences studded with humor, candor and insight, questioning everything from lack of manners of today's children to the government's polictical policies at home and abroad. His open, home-town boy manner allows the audience to enjoy and live his stories vicariously.

Gray's work is clever, well-crafted, and beautifully paced. He excels at detail and doesn't mince words, calling the shots as he sees them, unmasking an inner turbulence along the way. He has a story to tell and as he chronicles his life, he reveals a vulnerability and a sharing of humanity.

Terrors Of Pleasure tells of Gray's misadventures looking for work as an actor in Hollywood to get the money to fix a disaster house in the Catskills. It is a quirky and often hilarious excursion through contemporary Hollywood and the absurd world of television and movies.

Sex And Death To The Age 14, his earliest work of note (1979), finds the Barrington, R.I. native recalling the awakening sexuality of the adolescent and a child's developing views on the nature and meaning of death, from pets to relatives.

In 1983, Gray auditioned for a minor role in The Killing Fields ("Well, if I get it, I get it! I can still walk and talk!").

The 90-minute condensed version of Swimming to Cambodia is an amusing, touching and disturbing journey that moves from outrageous hilarity to chilling revelation while examing the making of the film (Gray's first), and the search for the "perfect moment" that will explain the meaning of it all.

Its scope ranges from the brothels of Thailand to the sensory-deprivation tanks in California to the blood bath that was Cambodia.

Here Gray's expertise is shown to the fullest as he takes a world-wide calamity and compresses it into language that is comprehensible to all, with the eye of a reporter and the soul of an artist.

What About Art?

By Meredith Fife Day

A silverprint portrait from Robyn Wessner's photographic series, Night Rattles, at Bromfield Gallery, is one of many works on view Sunday afternoon, when area galleries celebrate Art Newbury Street.

Artful weekend events

Look for a festive, art-filled weekend Sept. 20 and 21 in both urban and suburban settings.

From 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Saturday, The Emerson Umbrella Center For The Arts in Concord opens the studios of its 60 resident artists. Their works are featured in a preview exhibition of its new gallery, set to open officially in October.

The artists' community is housed in a former school building at 40 Stow St., next to the Concord Public Library near Concord Center.

Among its residents are writers, weavers, sculptors, painters, illustrators, and artists who work in clay, wood, multi-media, film and graphics. A heatsmith, instrument maker, upholsterer and sign maker also practice their crafts at The Umbrella.

The exhibited work of these artists covers a broad range of concepts, styles and attitudes. A lively, varied show results.

Along with the opportunity to meet the artists themselves and visit their workplaces, The Emerson Umbrella offers an inviting weekend jaunt to the suburbs. Call 371-0820 for more information.

Follow that gambol with a trip into the decidedly more urban setting of festivities centered around Art Newbury Street on Sunday, Sept. 21.

Classical and jazz musicians play throughout the afternoon, and some forty galleries feature special exhibitions from 1 to 5 p.m. along Newbury Street, which is blocked off from Arlington Street to Massachusetts Avenue and turned into a pedestrian mall.

Many of Boston's leading art galleries are participating in this semi-annual event.

Among them is Bromfield Gallery, 36 Newbury St., featuring a series of large photographs by Robyn Wessner and the collages and small constructions of Buzz Masters.

Both artists' works are psychologically probing — Masters' in a cultural and sociological context, with her visual images given symbolic weight, and Wessner's in a more personal framework.

Talk About This And That is the name of Masters' exhibit. She explains that the pieces are taken from conversations and statements heard in everyday life.

They could as easily be taken from dreams. Such is the potency of the house as a symbol, used throughout her work.

Within and outside Masters' houses are eyes, stairs, falling snow, flames, tornados, and women and men.

The almost child-like simplification of drawing and construction makes the artist's images no less sophisticated and gives them more power as picture-symbols, speaking to our fears and insecurities, helplessness and mystification, our relation to each other and to nature.

Wessner's series of photographs, entitled Night Rattles, are portraits of herself and another person, all the same size and strikingly mounted in groups of two to 24.

Attention is focused, through the similarity of image and size and the regularity of their display, on the alterations occurring within each frame of the series.

Introspective and painterly, the portraits allude to subjective investigation and experimentation on the levels of subject matter, form and technique.

The works of both Wessner and Masters are provocative and charged with questions about life and reality. Their exhibit remains on view through Sept. 30. Gallery hours are 10 to 5:30 Tuesday through Satturday. Call 262-7782.

James Gemmill exhibits new paintings at nearby Gallery NAGA, 67 Newbury St.

A strong sense of geometry and an astute sense of scale give Gemmill's urban landscapes presence that is solid and grand regardless of the painting's size.

Many of the views are of London, where the artist has worked for over the past three years.

The weight and solidity of architecture holding its place in an aggressively reflective atmosphere which threatens to overtake it, creates an uncommon drama in paintings such as Wolverhampton II and Looking East From Blackfriers.

The drama of Gemmill's figurative paintings seems more forced and predictable.

The dizzying perspective of Crossing Over, in which a construction worker is viewed from below, or the ambiguous balance of Climbing Out, in which a climbing worker's fall might be imminent, lack, after initial viewing, the sustained visual power of the urban landscapes.

All the works are executed with a masterful control of the acrylic paint medium. Too frequently acrylic painted surfaces are heavy and inert with opaque and clouded color insisting it is plastic. Gemmill's manipulatiton of transparent and translucent layers denies that lifeless quality, energizing and giving substance to the light-filled atmosphere so crucial to the vision he states through his work.

Gallery NAGA is open 10 to 5 Tuesday through Saturday and exhibits Gemmill's paintings through Sept. 27. Call 267-9060.

Farther along Newbury St., Francesca Anderson Gallery presents five representational artists in their New Talent exhibit. The show of still lifes, landscapes and interiors continues through Sept. 27. Located at 132 Newbury St., the gallery is open 1 to 5 Sundays and 10 to 6 Tuesday through Saturday. Call 262-1062.

Zoe Gallery, 207 Newbury St., shows new paintings by Jane Smaldone along with sculpture and drawings by Martie Holmer, through Oct. 4. Call 536-6800 for gallery hours.

Paintings by Norman Toynton, abstract oil on pegboard constructions in series format, are on view through Oct. 4 at Stavaridis Gallery, 73 Newbury St. Gallery hours are 10 to 5:30 Tuesday through Saturday. Call 353-1681.

These are but a sampling. Many more galleries on Newbury Street open their doors to the public Sunday afternoon. For more information on this free celebratory event, call Anita of Pucker Safrai Gallery, 171 Newbury St., at 267-9416.

Home Improvement

Windows can insulate and illuminate

When consumers go window shopping, they're prepared for lots of leg work. They walk from window to window, dreaming of the best products to buy.

Consumers may not be aware, however, that they also should prepare for leg work when shopping for window treatments. There simply are so many options available that it takes time to consider them all.

It's not likely that one option will jump out as the perfect choice for a home. Any window treatment adds to a room's beauty. Many treatments also insulate, add soundproofing and prevent the sun from fading interior furnishings. So what are the best fashions for window dressing?

Draperies and mini-blinds are the two most popular types of window dressing, probably because both are extremely versatile, with styles to complement any decor.

Blinds, however, are the most popular window treatment, according to the U.S. Venetian Blind Association. This is partly because of their adaptablity to a variety of decors, but also is a result of the ease with which they are installed and cleaned, according to the association.

Draperies come in a variety of fabrics that let in varying degrees of light. Some can be laundered at home, some must be dry-cleaned.

Mini-blinds, since they are made of metal, usually can be cleaned simply with a feather duster. Their sleek design — a series of lightweight slats connected with a cord and controlled by a wand — allows varying degrees of light to filter into a room.

Mini-blinds come in a wide variety of colors and usually are installed with their own header for a finished look. If the blinds need to be softened to fit the decor of the room, they can be paired with fabric valances that accent the kinds and styles of furnishings in the room. For example, a valance can be covered in the same material used for sofa throw pillows to tie the window treatment to the rest of the room. Another possibilty is a wooden valance painted in a color matching the walls or baseboard molding.

Still another possibility is to combine blinds and draperies for classy look. With or without blinds, a flounce of fabric as a valance at the top of the window gives a romantic look. Draperies topped off with a boxlike cloth-covered valance give a neater look. For a classic look, heavy flowing draperies from ceiling to floor do the trick.

Tiebacks and valances give draperies their style, and there are almost as many tiebacks and valances to choose from as there are fabrics and weaves of draperies, according to Roberta Greenberg, a stylist for Burlington. You can find single and double poufs, cornices or winged cuffs on top; bows, gauntlet shapes, shirred and long knotted ties for the sides.

Another window treatment option — the fabric shade — is a merging of draperies and mini-blinds. These cloth blinds give a soft designer look in a wide range of colors, prints and textures. They fit in with any decor and can be custom-made, just like blinds, to fit any size or shape of window — even solariums and skylights.

Some fabric shades are bonded with a thin layer of aluminum for energy efficiency, according to Verosol, a manufacturer of shades. They cut glare, reduce directly transmitted solar energy up to 80 percent and at the same time are light enough to see through.

With the variety of window treatments available, window dressing has become high fashion. But, since all treatments are so versatile, what your windows will wear depends more on personal style than function.

Think big in small spaces

Real estate is one area where consumers literally are getting less for their money these days. Whether their monthly payments are for a home, condominium or apartment, consumers are paying more and more for less and less square footage.

According to Changing Times magazine, the average size house in 1978 was 1,655 square feet. Now, it's not uncommon for people to buy houses with as little as 1,000 square feet and condos with as little as 750 square feet. Apartments may be even smaller.

But smaller spaces don't mean that people are doomed to live in claustrophobic boxes. Interior designers and real estate developers have plenty of ideas for making the most of smaller living spaces.

Builders are adding structural improvements that make small square footage feel like a lot more. Some examples that potential buyers should watch for, according to Changing Times:

— Raised ceilings. One of the most effective ways to open up a home is by using a higher ceiling in at least one room.

— Sunken floors. Another visual device that lends a feeling of spaciousness to a home is to sink or raise an area such as the living room.

— Blended space. Square footage can be reclaimed for more functional uses by eliminating hallways where possible. The "great room" concept — a meld of the living, dining and family rooms — reduces the space needed for separate rooms.

— Built-in furniture. In many new homes not even a corner of space is wasted. Built-in furniture such as shelves, window benches and desks can turn unused corners into focal points.

— More light. Natural light gives rooms an airy feel. Thus, well-designed smaller houses make good use of skylights, kitchen greenhouse windows and unusually shaped geometric windows.

— Window placement. Just as important as the use of windows is their placement. If a window is directly in the line of vision of a person in a well-traveled spot in a room, his sense of space will expand to include the outdoors.

The more of these features that show up in a new home, the more expensive it will be. But even if people can't afford these structural extras, and even if they aren't buying a new place but are trying to make the most of the small home they own or apartment they rent, following are designers' tips to promote a sense of roominess:

— According to designer Carole Eichen of Santa Ana, Calif., stick to light-colored floor covering and avoid changing the color from one area to the next.

— Keep wall treatments as light as possible. Small patterns against a light background work well. Heavy-textured or large-patterned wallpaper tends to overwhelm a small space.

— Panel walls with mirrors to expand small spaces. Mirrors also can highlight a pleasant view or a painting on the opposite wall.

— A low contrast between the color of the furniture and that of the walls also will expand a room, so select light-toned furnishings if possible, designers said.

— According to Family Circle magazine, small rooms need light, so don't block windows with heavy draperies or plants. Use airy, open-weave draperies tied back to let in the view and light. If you must use large-print draperies, try to blend the background color of the fabric with the wall color, Eichen said.

— Avoid clutter decorating. Too many knickknacks close in a room. A few large-scale collectibles and plants and a single picture on the wall provide enough interest, according to San Francisco designer Dennis Slade.

— To free floor and table space, go with track lighting or overhead lighting as much as possible, Slade said. Use wall-mounted swing lamps in the bedroom to free the bedside table for another use.

— Most designers recommend multifunctional furniture such as sofa/beds, sofa tables with tops that flip up and convert to dining tables, and wall units. Multifunctional wall systems take advantage of vertical wall space without consuming precious square footage and serve a variety of needs. They can be entertainment centers, work areas, storage shelves — they even can hide a pull-out bed.

Following just a few of these tips can give your dwelling a new look and new meaning to the phrase "Cubicle Sweet Cubicle."

Carpets save heat

When carpeting is used throughout a home, heat loss can be reduced by 5 percent to 13 percent. With carpet and padding together, heat loss through the floor on an insulated concrete slab can be cut as much as 72 percent and on wood floors up to 54 percent. — CNS

First dishwasher

The first workable automatic dishwasher was developed in 1889 by Mrs. W.A. Cockran of Indiana. It took her a decade to perfect the machine. — CNS

Which wood?

Seven different kinds of wood are called Philippine mahogany. — CNS

A no-hands spigot

The Optima no-hands spigot has a sensor instead of a faucet. Thrust your hands under the spout and you deflect an infrared beam, triggering a switch. This starts the water flowing at a preset temperature. Optima is made by Sloan Valve Co., 10500 Seymour Ave., Franklin Park, IL 60131. — CNS

Dishwasher remembers

No more knob twisting or button punching on the $700 Kitchen Aid dishwasher, Selectra. Just touch the starting pad and the machine automatically follows the last cycle selected.

Another control lets you delay operation for up to nine hours. And an indicator shows you the relative energy used in each cycle. — CNS

Italian furnishings add panache and style

The phrase "Made in Italy" carries as much positive impact as the once-negative connotation of "Made in Japan." More and more, consumers automatically assume that if a product was designed and produced in Italy, it must have aesthetic as well as practical value.

Italian design is known for its use of daring shapes, bold colors and new materials. Italian creations absorb humor, wit and personality and combine it all with practical comfort. Italian chairs don't always look like typical chairs, but they absolutely mold to the body. And sitting in an Italian slouchy leather couch is like sitting on a cloud, even though most of these couches always look wrinkled. Of course, they look wrinkled because the Italians want them to look wrinkled. That's part of the design appeal.

"The customer equates good design with Italy," said Nancy Kent, product design and co-founder of Industrial Revolution, a design-conscious retail business with shops in Beverly Hills and West Hollywood, Calif. "They appreciate design, but they aren't educated in design. They know, though, that if they like it and it's beautiful, it could well be Italian."

How has the Italian design community earned this fame?

Italy traditionally has been the front-runner of inventive design. It reshaped the '60s and '70s with molded plastics; it shocked the '80s with Memphis design, the international style that, according to Metropolitan Home magazine, mirrored our restless, abrasive, eclectic world as no furnishings had before. It proclaimed a brave new world where the only rule was that there were no rules.

Italian design, quite simply, has influenced the world and paved the way for other designs. And it's likely to stay on the cutting edge of design.

According to Businessweek magazine, "The inimitable Italian look in ... design is found today in everything from ashtrays to air conditioners. ... That presence stands to become even more pervasive."

One reason for the popularity of this design is its individuality. In Italy, a product that is mass-produced usually is unsuccessful. People don't want what everyone else wants.

According to American designer Bruce Burdick, Italians aren't concerned with creating a particular fashion or style.

"Italians design possessions," he said. "They design things you want to possess. A chair that you are going to have in your home is an element. But you also want it to communicate, to say something about itself and you, and that's when it becomes a possession."

The individuality that makes Italian design successful probably is partly a result of Italy's location and history, said designer Piero Gatti, who in 1969 helped develop the "Sacco" chair we call the beanbag chair.

Italy, which unites Europe and Africa, has served as a passage for people migrating north and south. As a result, it has become culturally rich and diverse.

When the Romans established the empire, they absorbed cultures, Gatti said. Florence, Rome, Milan, Venice and Naples each produced their own cultural segment. The crux is that Italy has no specific design ideology, no single theme.

And Italians continually draw inspiration from other designs, improving on classics and paving the way for other new designs. For example, the Italian interpretation of the Bauhaus minimalist look is more colorful than the traditional black, white, beige and gray color scheme.

Several Italian designers said they draw inspiration from the rather flippant, whimsical, sleek design of the '50s.

"It's almost like an archaeological pursuit," said architect Alessandro Mendini. "It's the first style that comes to mind when I think of futurism."

Achille Castiglioni, often recognized as the master of Italian design, also points to the '50s as a jumping-off point. He said the '50s and '80s are coming from the same place.

Apparently, that place demands quality and innovation — and Italian design is more than capable of delivering.

Victorian furnishings add authenticity to old homes

At a time when many apartments and condominiums look as if they have been spewed out of an architectural mimeograph machine, an authentically restored Victorian home can give a surprising jolt of splendor.

One such home, built in 1882 by Orange County, Calif., merchant Hippolyte Cahen, was restored by Alan and LaDel Clendenen.

At dusk the home, with its cupola, stained glass windows, octagon shingles and cockscomb trim at the ridge of the roof, looks like a ghost from the days when ladies left calling cards and anyone who was anyone had household help.

Things old are nothing new to the Clendenens. He collects vintage cars and restores them and also collects antique clothing and furniture. What the house amounts to is a natural progression.

It took the Clendenens 4½ years to restore the two-story, 3,000-square-foot home. Today, stepping through its front door is like taking a step into history.

Victorian parlors (what we call living rooms today) conspicuously exhibited all the period's fads and fancies. Mrs. Clendenen puts it, "They called it gilding the lily. You put everything you could in the room and then you added a little more."

Victorians were very much in love with lighting, so much so that the parlor might resemble a lighting shop. One parlor could have as many as 20 different types of lamps — table, floor, hanging and wall sconces. The Clendenen parlor contains 15.

Two of the most interesting lights are a pair of brass-and-copper elephant-foot floor lamps from South Africa that operate on kerosene and flank the double-wide entry to the dining room.

"Alan's parents bought them for us at an auction. When I heard about them, I thought we'd have to hide them behind furniture. When I saw them, well, I think they're terrific," said Mrs. Clendenen.

Victorians also loaded tables and walls with trinkets, photographs, elaborately arranged flowers and examples of the lady of the house's handiwork.

Mrs. Clendenen didn't craft the framed human-hair floral wreath that hangs on the drawing room wall, but it is the sort of thing you might expect to find in an authentic Victorian parlor.

"When someone in the family had their hair cut, the hair would be collected and made into art," she explained.

Wallpaper was a Victorian mania, and virtually every room in the house was wallpapered — elaborately. That also is the case in the Clendenen home, but the couple has drawn a line. Unlike some of the Victorians, the Clendenens don't re-wallpaper annually to keep up with new styles that appear.

"We spent two years fooling around with the paper," Clendenen said. "We'd get samples and hang them on the wall to see if we could live with them."

The drawing room scheme, including the ceiling, is an intricately worked puzzle of seven patterned papers ranging in color from yellow and deep green to burgundy, sage, cream and metallic gold, another trademark fad of the Victorians. Sixteen inches down the walls from the 10-foot ceilings runs gold picture molding for hanging art.

The upper division of the Victorian upper class — in other words, those who could afford it — simply fell to pieces over wall coverings that imitated a variety of materials such as carved wood, embossed leather or even cast plaster.

Below the wainscoting in the Clendenen dining room is the ultimate in imitations. It's called Lincrusta, a wall covering made of linseed oil and flax that's actually a type of linoleum. In this case, it appears to be ornately carved wood.

The Victorian period was a time of expanded travel and trade, and these advances were reflected in the decor of Victorian homes. They coveted anything from the Orient, the Middle East and Asia. The Clendenens have captured the craze in the form of a Japanese porcelain garden bench, an Oriental-style black-and-gold corner knickknack shelf and cloisonne and Turkish vases, all in the drawing room. In the dining room a are framed silk print and Oriental fans.

Drapes throughout the drawing room and dining room are heavy chintz with elaborate valances and cornices with tassels for decoration. One window in the drawing room has a treatment that drips Victorian. A single drape is drawn back to one side with a puffed fabric decoration at the top corners of the windows. All windows have a second curtain of lace.

While authentic Victorian homes were long on decoration, they definitely were short on closet space. The Clendenens' home has only two.

"The Victorians used armoires and they didn't have all that many changes of clothes," Clendenen said. "We use armoires, too, and chests of drawers. We live with it. We don't find it inconvenient."

Thinking you know something about Victorian design and actually knowing something about Victorian design often are two different things, as the Clendenens discovered when they began to decorate the house.

"We thought we knew something about Victorian designs when we started the house," Clendenen said, "but we found that we didn't know as much as we thought."

The Clendenens found the following books to be especially useful in their work to restore their home to its original Victorian personality: "Tasteful Interlude" by William Seale; "New York Interiors" by Joseph Byron; "Century of Color" by Roger Moss and "Wallpaper in America" by Catherine Lynn. Another resource is "Renovating the Victorian House" by Katherine Knight Rusk.

Choose floor coverings for years of wear

You can tromp on them, stomp on them and generally abuse them. They'll stand up for years — if you've done your homework. While floor coverings are something you can walk all over, you can't just take them in stride.

Coverings must be selected with great care and consideration, simply because they are so durable — and somewhat expensive. While furniture, draperies, comforters and other components of interior design can be changed frequently, once a floor covering has been placed in a home it will be there for years — perhaps as long as the house itself. So, a consumer must be certain to choose something to meet his tastes — perhaps something flexible that looks good with a variety of styles in case his tastes change.

It wasn't too long ago that wall-to-wall carpeting was what every home owner had to have in his home. It accommodated any style of furniture, was easy to care for and provided an unbroken expanse of color that created a sense of spaciousness. But there are plenty of alternative floor coverings, and what's best for each home owner depends mostly on which room is being floored, how much traffic that room receives and, of course, the home owner's preferences.

According to carpet manufacturers, dense, short-pile yarns generally wear best, so they are best for areas such as hallways and family rooms that get lots of traffic. For bedrooms that get relatively little traffic, high-pile, soft texture yarns give a luxurious look that still is practical since the carpet doesn't have to be as durable. Multicolor carpets in which yarns are cut to several heights help hide dirt and traffic patterns.

Generally, dark colors more readily show lint and light colors show dirt. The newest nylons, however, are soil and stain resistant, so any color carpet made of these nylons can be considered a practical choice, according to Allied Fibers, makers of Anso IV nylon.

Wood floors, like carpeting, blend well with virtually evey architectural style and interior design. And there is a wide assortment of patterns, from the strong, parallel look of planks to the distinctive parquet look. Colors range from dark and rich to bleached wood tones, and surface treatments range from smooth to textured, according to Bruce Hardwood Floors, a manufacturer of oak, walnut and teak flooring.

Perhaps part of the resurgence in popularity for wood floors is their durability and ease of care, according to Hartco Flooring, a manufacturer of oak parquet flooring. A wood floor can last as long as the building in which it is installed, while carpets typically are replaced about every eight years, the company said.

Other flooring alternatives are less common than carpeting and wood flooring but still interesting. Quarry tile — a baked clay type of floorcovering with interesting texture, high durability, low maintenance and stain resistance — is a natural for Mediterranean and Spanish style homes. The catch is that quarry tile can be a bit expensive.

But it's not as expensive as marble. The expense of this material might intimidate at first. But marble, like diamonds, is forever. It doesn't have to be replaced every dozen years or so and it adds a touch of elegance and formality. But, marble stains easily, requires regular waxing and is a hard surface.

Brick flooring gives a rustic country flavor. It is hard underfoot, however, and requires waxing from time to time.

Slate, yet another choice, is highly stain resistant and relatively easy to install. It does scuff, however, so it's not the best choice for heavy traffic areas, and it requires periodic waxing.

If a home owner wants the look of stone, brick, slate or wood, but doesn't actually want to install any of them, he should take a look at vinyl floor coverings. They are inexpensive, stain resistant and a cinch to maintain — they require only a periodic application of vinyl dressing to restore shine.

This flooring is the most popular for kitchens and bathrooms, with designs ranging from photographic reproductions of stone, brick and tile to abstact prints. This type of flooring usually is replaced about every seven years, according to Mannington Mills, a manufacturer of resilient flooring.

There are two basic types of vinyl flooring. One is called rotogravure vinyl, in which the design is printed on the vinyl surface and then sealed in with clear protective vinyl or urethane layer. The thickness of this layer determines how long the flooring will hold up. The other type is called inlaid vinyl, in which the design is embedded in the body of the vinyl.

Vinyl is sold in tiles or sheets that are glued to the floor. Some vinyl tiles come with self-adhesive backing that makes it easier for do-it-yourselfers. Sheets are available in 6-foot or 12-foot widths, the latter making it possible to reduce or eliminate seams that make vinyl floors difficult to maintain over time.

Wicker, lace add romance to Victorian rooms

The romantic look in interior design can be every bit as unpredictable as romance itself.

The thing to remember when creating a room that drips with romance is that you can be just as whimsical as your heart dictates. I'm not saying you shouldn't follow basic rules of interior design, but romance has been known to bend more than a few rules, rules of good design included.

Heavy is "out" and light and airy are "in" for romantics who want their rooms to match their outlook on life. Forget about dark, overbearing antiques like the ones grandmother positioned throughout her Victorian mansion. They might be romantic in their own way, but they are far too heavy for what you're seeking.

Choose what's fresh and free-spirited. Pretty is quite acceptable, in fact, quite desirable, in a romantic setting. Pastel colors, the kind that seem to float like clouds, help set the scene, as do lighthearted prints and patterns.

Artwork can be just about anything you please as long as it is not a reflection of hard-edged modernism.

Windows play an important role in creating a romantic feeling. Austrian shades are fun and so are balloon shades and generous helpings of heartthrob lace. If you've got French doors in the room, let them bring a colorful garden setting indoors.

Ho-hum practical tweeds and gobs of velvet are too heavy for the lightweight attitude you're trying to capture. Stick to polished cottons — solids and prints. They were created to look pretty. Who could ask for more?

Romantics tend to be fearless people. After all, the heart is in control. Mix patterns and prints, but stick to a common color.

Soft lighting and romance go hand-in-hand. Avoid lamps and fixtures that might cast a glare. Fringed lampshades from yesteryear add a special touch that elevates an ordinary light fixture to new heights.

Gently curving, soft-line furnishings take the bite out of a room and the French seem to handle this sort of thing best. A reproduction 18th century French bombe chest is a graceful choice as an accent piece.

White or pastel-colored wicker also is an appropriate choice. Give the wicker pieces character and make them cushy comfortable with pillows covered in fabric that picks up a color or matches the pattern of other fabrics in the room.

Floors, too, have a place in romantic design. Natural wood floors with lustrous finishes add a glow. A single, large area rug helps anchor the setting, pulling it together into a single entity, which is your ultimate goal.

Buying furniture wisely is a fine art

Because furniture takes the largest chunk of a decorating budget, it deserves careful consideration.

With more than 5,000 furniture manufacturers in the United States alone, however, it's no easy task to evaluate all of the styles available, much less quality and price. Without preparation prior to a shopping spree, chances are slim you'll make a purchase that leaves you satisfied and sitting pretty in your home.

According to the editors of House Beautiful magazine, whether you're starting from scratch or just adding on, or whether you're decorating on your own or working with professional guidance, it helps to begin your search for furniture by sketching a plan on paper. This allows you to experiment with various furniture arrangements so that you can select one that best suits the room.

Once you know what pieces you need to fill the room, you'll need to focus in on the style of furniture you want. If you're uncertain, visiting a few furniture stores will help you decide what styles appeal to you, whether art deco, American country, neoclassic or Scandinavian.

Wood is far and away the most common material used in a variety of furniture styles. The American Furniture Manufacturers Association offers some advice that can help you make a wise choice of wood furniture.

First, realize that there are several types of wood furniture available — solid wood, veneered wood and other wood products. Solid wood means that all of the exposed parts must be made from a solid piece of wood. Solid wood furniture conveys an image of strenth and durability, but it has a tendency to warp, swell and crack if not properly cared for. It also usually is expensive.

More than three-quarters of the furniture manufactured today is of veneer construction with solid wood parts. A veneered panel is made up of three to seven layers, with a thin layer of a hardwood, such as cherry or walnut, on top. Its core is plywood, with all the layers bonded together in a high-pressure press.

Other wood products boast exceptional strength and durability and look much like natural wood at a fraction of the cost. Laminated wood, made of sheets of wood placed in one direction, is used for curved furniture surfaces. The bentwood chair is an example of furniture made entirely of laminated surfaces. Hardboard is made by bonding together tiny wood fibers and is used most often for doors, drawer dividers and back panels of cabinets. Particle board is made of wood particles and adhesives bonded together, and it may be covered with a hardwood veneer or can be lacquered, stained, varnished, painted or enameled.

The manufacturers' association recommends that consumers examine all wood furniture with the hand as well as the eye. Inspect the finish for overall smoothness. Look for a clear, deep and rich finish and for uniformity of color and grain patterns.

Operate all moving parts — table leaves, drop lids, flip tops, adjustable shelves, doors and drawers — to be sure they function satisfactorily. Make sure drawers fit snugly in their frames. Examine drawers carefully. The attention given to drawers is an important indication of the quality of the overall piece. The best drawers have wood sides and back panels about ½-inch thick joined by close-fitting joints, preferably dovetailed. Drawer interiors with a smooth finish help prevent fabric snags. Inspect drawer bottoms. They should be clean with no glue residue.

Upholstered furniture is another type of furniture available in a variety of styles.

Upholstered goods should be evaluated from the inside out, according to the booklet Home Furnishings and Equipment from the Money Management Institute of Household International. The basic parts to check out are the frame, seat base, cushioning and cover fabric.

The frame should be heavy, made of hardwood and sufficiently padded so that the wood cannot be felt. The seat base should have coil springs placed closely together — three coil rows is good; four is best. The cloth covering the springs and their padding should be a tightly woven fabric color-coordinated to the decorative cover fabric. Cushions should fit snugly, give even support and be reversible and interchangeable for maximum wear.

When selecting a cover fabric, remember that a closely woven fabric will wear the longest and that patterns and medium or dark colors will show the least soil. Look for fabrics treated to resist soils and spills. A fine quality upholstered piece will have straight seams and straight cording firmly stitched with no puckering. The pattern should be well matched all over, and buttons should be hand-sewn through the filling.

According to the booklet, it's imperative to try out all upholstered furniture at the store. Sit down and get up several times. There's no better way to find out if the furniture is too low, too high, too deep or not deep enough. Is the cushioning firm, yet comfortable and resilient? Does it retain its shape? Is the fabric scratchy? Does it shift easily? Gently push and pull at the arms — a well-constructed piece will be sturdy and will not sway.

Aside from wood and upholstery, there are many other materials used for home furnishings.

Plastics are being molded into entire pieces of furniture that are colorful, comfortable, durable and easily cleaned. They can withstand hard use and are resistant to heat, solvents, abrasion and moisture. Unfortunately, certain plastics can be dented beyond repair by a sharp blow, and others are easily scratched.

When shopping for plastic furniture, look for thick materials, smooth edges, flawless surfaces, uniform color and gloss and complete finishing on all visible sides of the piece. Check tags for manufacturers' care directions.

Metal furniture may be made of wrought iron, chrome, brass or chrome- or brass-finished steel and aluminum. Metal is strong and durable but not bulky. The construction of metal furniture usually does not present a problem because it is much stronger than normal household use requires.

Features to look for are smooth, rustproof finishes; points of stress that have been welded, riveted or bolted, and a groove, ledge or rubber pads to keep glass firmly in place on tabletops. Such glass should be heavy, tempered and at least ½-inch thick so it won't shatter under a hard blow.

Basket furniture, such as wicker, rattan, bamboo and cane, is lightweight and airy. It is crafted, often by hand, of various parts of tropical vines.

Tips on construction, care of homes old and young

Q. We recently purchased an older home that has a large fireplace. The first several times we used the fireplace everything was fine. However, the next couple of times the smoke came into the living room, even when we checked and made sure the damper was as wide open as it would go.

Do you have any suggestions on how we can check the functioning of our fireplace so the updraft takes the smoke away and leaves the living room free of smoke? — A.H.

A. It could be that the first two or three times you lit the fire the wind was in the right direction for drawing the smoke up the chimney. However, it could be that the top of your chimney isn't high enough to create the proper upward draft. It should be 4 feet above a flat roof, or 2 feet above the top of the highest gable. Tall trees nearby also may affect the draft when the wind is in a particular direction but this usually isn't too significant a factor.

If your home is older it may be that the chimney lining needs to be cleaned. Soot buildup can block the air (smoke) passage, usually after the fireplace has been in service for some time. First check to make sure there aren't any obstructions in the flue, such as a bird's nest or leafy branch that might have been blown in and stuck there.

To remove excessive soot you can buy a chemical cleaner that you throw on the fire. The chemical activates the soot, which is burned away.

Or you can load an old burlap bag with paper and a couple of bricks, tie a stout cord to the end of the bag and then lower the bag down the bag down the chimney from the roof. Be sure to have the damper closed when you try this; it is also a good idea to seal off the face of the fireplace with heavy paper and masking tape. Soot is as insidious as dust; it will stain anything it touches.

Q. We bought a 17-year-old mobile home. The walls are all wood paneled with what appears to be a glue-on.

Our problem arises from the fact that the surface is very sticky. I've washed it with soap and water, used cleaning solutions and kept the house well ventilated (it was fairly well closed up for the last few years before we bought it).

What can we do to remove the finish without getting into a very expensive job? We just want to be able to paint the existing walls. — J.W.

A. Since you plan to repaint the surface, I would recommend that you use liquid sandpaper to go over the current finish. This should remove the sticky residue as well as prepare the surface for painting.

Be sure to select a quality paint and apply a primer if the paint manufacturer's directions recommend one.

WE'LL MANAGE!!!

If you own an apartment house, you will have hired a management firm to relieve you of the duties of collecting rents, arranging for maintenance and repairs, finding new tenants, and paying the bills.

If you rent a condo or a single or multi-family house, however, you have to assume these time-consuming burdens yourself. If you do not live in the neighborhood, you may find these tasks quite a chore at times.

So, let us manage! Our rental manager will manage small rental properties at very modest monthly costs. When you are leaving the area temporarily and wish to rent your own home, or are the proud owner of a profitable two or three-family property you wish to keep without retaining the hassles, call our management agent, Lois Ardito.

Louise Ruma-Ivers is the immediate past President of the Greater Boston Women's Council of Realtors, and a past Director of the Marketing Institute for the Greater Boston Real Estate Board. She is a member of the Arlington Historic Districts Committee.

Dot Stein is a Vice President of the Greater Boston Real Estate Board and a Director of its Multiple Listing Service. She was a long-time Arlington Town Meeting member, and a member of the Arlington School Committee.

NEIGHBORHOOD POLICY

When looking at a home, note the condition of the neighboring houses. They could be old, elegant and in need of a coat of paint. Or, they may be small and well-kept. This should tell you much about the quality of life in the neighborhood. You can see if the neighborhood is growing and vital or headed for a gradual decline. This has particular importance in terms of resale value. A growing neighborhood may offer the best value as it approaches its peak years. This should be of concern if you choose to sell in a few years. When you feel the asking price does not reflect the condition of the homes around it, a real estate professional may be able to convince the seller to adjust accordingly.

Buying or selling real estate is a sizeable financial consideration. In such matters it is prudent to enlist the service of experienced professionals. at CENTURY 21 COLLINS REALTY, INC. you will find such real estate professionals ready to help you in all related matters. from a knowledge of the neighborhood services and property to familiarity with financing trends, to a host of other important matters rely on us. CENTURY 21 COLLINS REALTY, INC. is here for you at 783 Massachusetts Ave., 648-6900. We are open daily, evenings and weekends.

Cars up, lines out in town: Sopper

By GEORGE DERRINGER

Maybe the town shouldn't paint parking spaces on downtown streets at all.

Perhaps the parking limit should be extended from one to two hours.

Those ideas, as well as a continuing debate about the distance between parking spaces and crosswalks, occupied Winchester selectmen for 45 minutes Monday night.

Frank Sopper said many communities do not paint parking spaces at all while some paint only those places where parking is NOT allowed.

Such a policy often results in a de facto increase in the number of spaces because many cars do not fill a standard 20-foot space, he said.

Sopper cited as evidence a time Saturday morning when nine cars were parked near the post office on Waterfield Road. The latest parking plan submitted by town engineer Jake Ciarcia shows only seven spaces in the same area.

"The system of not painting spaces works elsewhere and it's working here now," Sopper said. Selectmen have debated a new parking plan for several weeks, since

Housing woes spark groups' debate, plans

By GEORGE DERRINGER

Winchester will pursue several avenues in its quest to provide seven units of state-mandated low to moderate income housing.

Philosophical differences among town bodies involved in the housing issue were apparent Monday night.

Several approaches to deal with the town's major problem, the rejection of the Woburn Loop site by the state secretary of transportion, were suggested.

Selectmen chose to follow all of the suggestions, with one exception. The town will not sue the Commonwealth, as suggested by members of the Winchester Housing Authority.

A heated discussion by selectmen a week earlier, when members of the Town Meeting Special Study Committee on Low and Moderate Income Housing submitted 16 articles for the November town meeting, resulted in a combined discussion of several boards this week.

Wade Welch, chairman of the selectmen, suggested asking Rep. Sherman "Whip" Saltmarsh to file a special bill in the state legislature that would free the Woburn Loop from state restrictions.

Saltmarsh, who supported the town's purchase of the Loop in December 1984, will file such a bill as soon as possible.

David Mortensen, chairman of the Town Meeting Committee, defended his group's unanimous decision to submit seven previously rejected alternate sites to the fall town meeting, saying it would leave the town in a "flexible position."

His position won support from Maryann McCall-Taylor, chairman of the planning board.

Selectmen, uncertain a week ago, were forced to include the alternate sites on the town meeting warrant.

Between last week's meeting and the Friday deadline for submission of articles, Mortensen's committee circulated a petition to include the articles on the warrant.

Mary Meader, chairman of the housing authority, said the town "still has seven units" because the authority "hasn't given up on the Loop." She said the authority and Saltmarsh will meet this week with Gov. Michael Dukakis in an effort to reverse Salvucci's decision.

Selectmen supported that action, hoping the governor would listen to "common sense," in the words of Welch.

But Bill McCarthy, a member of the housing authority, said the town ought to take legal action against the Commonwealth.

Ann Matarese, chairman of the Citizens Advisory Committee to the housing authority, agreed. She pointed out that the town had gone to court on lesser issues.

Selectmen informally rejected the legal option after hearing Welch describe several points that might hurt the town's case.

Selectmen also rejected a suggestion by Welch early in the meeting

After nearly two hours of discussion, nearly everyone agreed the town's promise to provide seven units must be fulfilled.

Tennis courts unsafe, close

By MAUREEN QUINLAN

Tennis anyone?

Students and parents can play tennis at their own risk at Skillings Road tennis courts.

Tuesday night school committee members voted unanimously to close the Skillings Road courts, effective immediately, citing the courts as unsafe and in deplorable condition.

The committee voted two weeks ago to reserve a space on the fall town meeting warrant to appropriate money to repair the courts.

Tuesday night members decided they could not afford to wait until next spring or summer to make improvements.

Superintendent Charles L. Mitsakos said no accidents have been reported. But school committee members said they could not take the chance and be held liable if someone is hurt.

"I feel a need to take action. I find the conditions of the courts deplorable and a serious hazard," said member Edward O'Connell.

Member Steve Powers, who raised the question of the courts' condition at the last meeting, said, "I have a problem postponing it until the summer of 1987. There are a lot of students using this facility." Powers agreed with O'Connell to close the courts.

O'Connell, who sat in for Michaël Ronayne as pro tem chairman, said, "I was aghast at the eruptions and the bubbles." He said town counsel Doug Randall advised the committee to post notice that the courts are off limits to students and not to be used by the general public. He said this would be sufficient to deter any suit against the town.

"We have a definite liability concern we can't avoid," said O'Connell.

Powers said, "My opinion is go foward with the warrant, I'll be glad to present it. We're dealing with a town that spent $5 million on town hall. We're asking for $60,000."

O'Connell said, "I'm somewhat disturbed about asking for an appropriation in the fall."

Member William Jervey, "I share Ed's concern. Taking it to town meeting in the fall isn't a prudent thing to do."

Mitsakos reported to school committee that no renovations or improvements had been made since 1972, when the courts were built.

Mitsakos said the courts are used mostly for physical education classes and early spring practice for the varsity boys and girls tennis teams.

He said the courts are used infrequently in the community because of their design and condition.

School committee postponed voting on whether to ask for an appropriation at town meeting, indefinitely postpone the article or give a brief report to town meeting.

In other school board business, members were told Winchester students in 1986 scored slightly lower on scholastic aptitude tests. The mean verbal score was 483, two points lower than last year. The mean math score was 521, also slightly lower than last year.

Mitsakos told the committee substitute teachers are needed. The salary is $46.50 a day and after 20 days it is $50. Substitutes are needed for all grades and in all subjects. Anyone interested should apply through the personnel department. A teaching degree is not required.

Mitsakos commended and congratulated:

•Thomas Budrewicz, assistant principal of the high school, for his work transferring school records onto computers.

Bette Tsoutouras of the high school English department, for her work with Winchester's participation at MacWorld Expo.

Rachelle Iserow, a speech therapist, for receiving an inservice grant of $1,500 to help the hearing impaired.

Kathleen Ahearn, Randall Hesse, Chester Liu, Caitlin Mullin, Robert Southworth and Scott Sterling for achieving semifinalist status in the national merit scholarship contest.

The committee accepted a Voiglander 116mm camera from Mr. and Mrs. Richard J. Donovan. The camera will be added to the photographic equipment at McCall Junior High School.

Special time set for voter registration

Town clerk Carolyn Ward has announced special hours and places for Winchester residents who want to register to vote in the Nov. 4 general election.

Registration can be completed during the clerk's regular hours, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., weekdays at town hall.

A special registration time is scheduled from 7 to 8 p.m. tonight at Muraco School.

The town clerk's office will also be open special hours. Those times include: 9 a.m. to noon Saturday, Sept. 27; 7 to 9 p.m. Monday, Sept. 29; and noon to 8 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 4.

The town clerk's office will be open for a long day Tuesday, Oct. 7, the last day for voters to qualify for the Nov. 4 election. The office will be open from 8:30 a.m. to 10 p.m. that day.

Trash disposal cost wins TM approval

By GEORGE DERRINGER

For once, all town meeting members, selectmen and finance committee members were unanimous.

Two hours of discussion at a special town meeting Thursday night resulted in a unanimous vote to appropriate $236,660 from "free cash" and borrow $155,750 at 5 percent per year to pay for this year's trash disposal costs.

Most of the meeting was taken up with official explanations of what turned out to be non-controversial articles.

Town manager Chad Maurer explained why another $236,660 would be needed to pay for "tipping fees" at the North Andover waste-to-energy plant where Winchester trash is trucked.

The major reason is the depressed price of oil, Maurer said. Projections were that a kilowatt hour of electricity produced by burning trash would be worth more than seven cents in 1986, the same price it would cost to buy oil to produce the same kilowatt hour.

But oil is cheap and a kilowatt hour costs only three cents whether you burn trash or oil to produce it. Thus, the Andover plant gets paid only three cents.

Sales of electricity were supposed to produce 58 percent of the plant's revenue in 1986. Instead, they provide only 28 percent.

The 22 towns involved in the project have to make up most of the difference, despite higher-than-expected revenues from private haulers who truck their own trash to the plant, Maurer said.

Winchester is in the second year of a 20-year contract to use the North Andover facility, said Wade Welch, chairman of the selectmen. And it would cost even more to dump the town's trash at another site, he said.

"The selectmen feel it's the only game in town," he said.

Although town meeting members delayed the vote on the article until they decided whether to buy trailers to haul the trash in, they voted unanimously for the article.

In a second article, town meeting voted unanimously to spend $155,750 to buy five trailers. Bids for hauling trash to the plant this year were $26 a ton and higher, compared to a bid of $6 a ton from a bidder who would only haul the trailers with his own tractor.

Several town meeting members pointed out that charging $26 a ton for trailer rental alone seemed hard to believe.

Gerard Polcari, chairman of the finance committee, outlined the remaining options and recommended buying five trailers, the same number used now.

He said the purchase should be

Solid waste group sees 59 percent hike

By ED ENGEL

Winchester may not have appropriated enough extra money to pay for the real increase in trash "tipping fees" at the North Andover waste-to-energy plant where it is burned.

Although Winchester appropriated enough to pay for a 50 percent hike from $32 a ton to $48 a ton, the real increase may be 59 percent, according to the New England Solid Waste Committee (NESWC).

Executive committee members, meeting Thursday in Lexington, said that the cost to dispose of a ton of Winchester's trash to their North Andover plant is likely to jump from a projected $32 a ton to $50.84 a ton.

NESWC comprises 22 towns and cities throughout New England, including Winchester.

Last month NESWC members announced that the tipping fee could possibly rise to $48 a ton for the fiscal year.

The tipping fee is the cost per ton to dispose of the trash.

The $50.84 figure is an average

State denies housing ok for Woburn Loop

By GEORGE DERRINGER

Winchester won't be allowed to build two units of low- to moderate-income housing on the Woburn Loop.

Maybe.

The town got official word Monday from state transportation secretary Frederick Salvucci.

Although Winchester bought the land in December 1984, the transportation secretary must grant consent before any use is made of the land. In Monday's letter, Salvucci repeated his traditional position: no buildings on old railroad lands.

"Based on the location of the Woburn Loop as it relates to Route 38 and its corridor character, consent to build . . . was not granted," Salvucci wrote.

"As secretary of transportation, it is my responsibility to ensure that the integrity of the railroad corridor and certain related properties are maintained for present and future transportation use," he wrote.

Salvucci suggested he might allow use of the Loop as "an industrial access road," however, if the town could swap Loop land for a housing site.

Salvucci's "final decision" came as a blow to the town's plan to build seven units of low-to-moderate income housing, including two units on the Loop.

For several years, the town has been under contract to provide such housing. This spring, town meeting finally approved seven units on four sites.

Town manager Chad Maurer said Salvucci's decision should not be seen as final. He cited several reasons to a large group of interested citizens Monday night.

"When the town acquired the site from the MBTA, Frederick Salvucci was chairman of the MBTA advisory board," Maurer said.

"The board there voted unanimously to sell the property to Winchester and included in its deed the notation that the land is no longer needed for transportation purposes," Maurer said.

"But in a later letter, Salvucci said the land is needed to build a road parallel to Route 38."

The town manager said Salvucci signed a deed, turning the Loop over to the town, which is "a legal document saying the land is not needed for transportation."

Maurer said State Rep. Sherman "Whip" Saltmarsh should file a special bill to exempt all of the Loop, in both Winchester and Woburn, from Salvucci's veto.

Passage of such a bill would "help the secretary out of his dilemma, the conflict between Salvucci of the MBTA and Salvucci the transportation secretary," Maurer said.

Others at Monday night's meeting suggested other avenues of appeal, including a personal appeal to Gov. Michael Dukakis later this week and legal action through the courts.

Developer offers aid for housing

By GEORGE DERRINGER

Winchester will get help in its public housing program from A. Horace Weene, who plans to develop home sites on Hastings and Sussex roads.

The 18-lot subdivision will receive town water through a new pipe to be installed along an existing path through the town forest.

Selectmen voted to approve the new pipe Monday night, provided Weene signs a letter agreeing to one of three options.

Weene could transfer title of one lot in the future development of land he owns on the north side of Sussex Road, adjacent to the town forest.

He could also contribute to the Section 705 "affordable housing" program for families of low-to moderate income on a lot-by-lot basis. Funds would be transferred to the housing program when each lot is sold.

Or Weene could assist by buying a lot or structure elsewhere in town for the housing program.

Selectmen asked to get Weene's signature on a formal agreement before granting permission for the new water line.

In other business Monday, selectmen:

• Approved the Aberjona Classic four-mile road race at 1 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 19. The race is sponsored by the recreation department and the Winchester High School student union.

• Welcomed Paul S. Flaherty, a career veteran of the U.S. Marine Corps, as the town's new veterans agent, workers compensation agent and fair housing coordinator.

Winchester Trails plans family walk for Oct. 5

Winchester Trails will open its fall season with a family walk at Locke Farm Sunday, Oct. 5th. The group will meet at 1 p.m. at the Jenks Center parking lot and car pool to the walk site with leader Betty Vanderbilt.

"Ponding" will be a highlight of the walk, an activity which will appeal to children and adults alike. Using strainers with long handles, enthusiasts can bring up material from the pond bottom to reveal a myriad of small creatures.

Locke Farm is one of Winchester's conservation lands used by Winchester Trails for third and fourth grade pupils' nature walks. These have been incorporated into the school curriculum for more than 10 years.

Leaders are volunteers who receive training from Winchester Trails, and then go out to share their learning and their excitement with the children.

The fall session of school walks is being scheduled Oct. 6-24. Refresher training walks are being held during the weeks of Sept. 22 and 29. Newcomers are always welcome to join these groups and learn more about Trails.

WHY SOME HOUSES DON'T SELL

The housing market is such that any house will sell at the right price. There is a market for broken down houses in poor locations (usually sold at some discount, but they sell). There is a market for multi-million dollar mansions, and they do sell. Then, on occasion, you'll note one house in particular is on the market seemingly forever. Why doesn't this house sell?

Usually, the basic reason is that the house is priced higher than the fair market value will bear, but sometimes there are additional reasons.

It may be that the seller has a high asking price and refuses to accept any legitimate offers for even one dollar less. This can cause a psychological blow to the buyer's ego. Maybe the husband wants to sell and the wife doesn't. Maybe the timing of the offer does not coincide with the seller's relocation plans. Perhaps the seller's attorney or accountant is overly cautious. However, if the price is fair, the house will sell, sometimes for MORE than the asking price.

Appeals board to repeat meeting

The zoning board of appeals will repeat its September meeting at 7 p.m. Oct. 14.

Because state law stipulates no public hearing may be held on election day, all votes cast last Tuesday night don't count.

The issue was brought to town clerk Carolyn Ward's attention last week when a North Reading town clerk called her. Ward said she wanted to know if she had heard of a law restricting public hearings on election day.

According to Ward, North Reading residents were upset about decisions rendered at a planning board public hearing and questioned whether meeting on election day was legal.

Ward said after researching the issue, she discovered state law stipulates no public hearings may be held on an election day.

Ward said she contacted chairman Ferdinand S. Pacione. A replacement meeting is slated for 7 p.m. Oct. 14 in the board of health clinic room at town hall. The board will hold its regular monthly meeting at 7 p.m. Oct. 21.

Town to try multiple strategies for housing that the town consider an article to purchase an existing duplex for Section 705 low-to-moderate income housing.

Roger Berman, chairman of the town's fair housing committee, said he would still support two units on the Loop but would also support putting alternate sites before the fall town meeting "as an option."

After nearly two hours of discussion, nearly everyone agreed the town's promise to provide seven units must be fulfilled.

Disagreement about timing and tactics remained, as Berman pointed out in a summary.

Welch presided over the joint meeting, calling on various people to present their views. Town manager Chad Maurer was tapped first.

He outlined progress on the four sites. A single-family structure at Mullen Field on Lockeland Road awaited only legislative action, he said.

Later, housing authority chairman Meader said both houses of the legislature passed the measure Monday. It awaited only Dukakis' signature, she said.

Maurer said another single-family site on former Ambrose School land at the corner of Cambridge and High streets awaits approval by the Executive Office of Communities and Development (EOCD), the body with which Winchester contracted to provide seven units of housing.

For a three-unit project on Palmer Street, the housing authority has already hired an architect to prepare a preliminary site plan, Maurer said.

The Woburn Loop site was rejected Monday, Maurer reported. (Please see separate story.)

Maurer recommended that Saltmarsh file a special bill to exempt the Loop from the authority of transportation secretary Salvucci.

Welch declared that Salvucci's letter leaves the town with five units of Section 705 state-mandated housing, two fewer than required under a contract between the EOCD and three town bodies, including selectmen, the planning board and the housing authority.

"One option is to pursue an exemption through the legislature," Welch said. "Another option has been proposed by the Town Meeting Committee."

Mortensen took the floor to explain the ideas of his group, which was severely criticized by a majority of selectmen a week earlier.

"We're anxious to explain," Mortensen said. "Our proposal was intended to be helpful, not hurtful."

He said inclusion of articles to provide housing on alternate sites would leave the fall town meeting "in a flexible position to consider a backup site."

Mortensen said the nine-member special committee had encouraged and supported the housing authority in efforts to get the seven units approved by town meeting approved by the state.

"But we refused to get into re-examining the adequacy of the sites already approved, although a lot of town meeting members wanted us to do so," Mortensen said.

"But as we approached the closing of the warrant for the fall town meeting, it became apparent secretary Salvucci was not going to approve the Woburn Loop," he said.

In order to give the town alternatives, the special committee asked to include all previously mentioned housing sites on the warrant for the fall town meeting, Mortensen said.

Town meeting would not be able to approved an alternate site unless one is on the warrant, he said.

Mortensen said his committee did not want to rank the seven sites but suggested the planning board, selectmen and/or housing authority should do so before the November town meeting.

If none of those groups does, the special committee will rank and recommend an alternate site to the meeting, Mortensen said, "to allow the town to live up to its commitment."

Mortensen said he realized many people would prefer the option suggested by Maurer, trying to get a special exemption for the Loop from state control.

"But I'm not aware of any other town which has been successful," Mortensen said. "And the housing authority has suggested other ways, including a suit against the commonwealth. But it's clear to our committee that the outcome of each approach is uncertain and they will require a lot of time."

Mortensen said the committee's petition to include alternate sites on the town meeting warrant should not have been "a bolt out of the blue" because "we thought we had made it evident what we intended to do."

Mortensen accepted blame for any "lack of communication."

Bob Frank, vice chairman of the Town Meeting Committee, said the group "holds no brief for any particular solution" but operates under the belief that town meeting believes it has "a moral and contractual obligation" to provide seven housing units.

In addtion, Frank said, town meeting members believe it is "inappropriate to be presented with a fait accompli."

The committee sincerely hopes the Loop site can be accepted, Frank said.

"But it's not at all clear the solutions on the table will solve the problem," he said. "We thought we would give the town meeting a choice."

Frank surprised some at the meeting when he said, "It's probable the town will be faced with further demands from the state (for housing) over time.

"We will probably be talking about the same sites again. So arguing whether a particular site is used in the first wave or second wave is more distracting than the time is worth," he said.

"At some time in the future, Winchester will be required to build additional units," Frank said.

After hearing proposals for special legislative action and the selection of an alternate site, Welch suggested a third option: the town could "go buy a duplex. We could put a money article on the warrant to appropriate funds to buy a duplex."

Welch sponsored such an article about 18 months ago.

Frank suggested the town might also think about "creating a mechanism so the town could at least acquire an option to buy housing, especially since the existing housing stock already conforms to the character of the neighborhoods, by definition."

Selectman Frank Sopper said the town could also think about renting housing for the state-mandated program.

Welch, however, said Sopper's idea could not help the town provide Section 705 housing, which must be owned by the town. "For the long term, there's nothing wrong with renting but it doesn't satisfy the terms of our agreement to provide Section 705 housing."

McCarthy pointed out that the housing authority already rents eight units, five more than the state required the town to have.

Sopper said the town should go slowly, perhaps using its own funds to provide public housing. He said the town could create "linkage" programs, requiring developers to provide either money or housing units in return for approval of their development plans.

"If we use our own money, we can show the state that we have 30 homes of housing" and don't need state programs, Sopper said.

McCarthy, responding to Frank's assertion that the state would make more demands, called it "news to me."

Frank repeated his idea. "The state has expectations beyond the low-to-moderate stock presently provided for," he said.

He also praised linkage proposals advocated frequently by Sopper and fellow selectman Mark Lombardi.

Welch next turned to McCall-Taylor for comment about Maurer's proposal to seek legislative relief through Saltmarsh.

She said she would rather have an alternative site on the town meeting warrant.

Mortensen said his committee had tried to provide an alternative but certainly did "not want the result to be more than seven units. As a committee, we support the five unit sites still in place, although some of us don't necessarily support each one," he said.

"So you want us to rank the site before town meeting and present a united front, like we did in the spring?" Welch asked.

Mortensen said yes.

McCall-Taylor said the town's pursuit of the Woburn Loop site could be a waste of energy that "could be better spent coming up with an alternative site."

Meader, leader of the housing authority, disputed the others' contention that Salvucci's letter effectively left the town with only five units of housing.

"We haven't given up on the Loop," she said. "In fact, Rep. Saltmarsh will meet with us and Gov. Dukakis this week. We'll fight for the Loop site."

Meader said she had told Mortensen's committee that the housing authority "opposed anything that might muddy up the waters."

The housing authority remains committed to having scattered sites, she said. "As a town meeting member, I remember when we bought the Loop. Nobody told us we couldn't build on the land."

Dan Chane, a member of both the planning board and the citizens advisory committee to the housing authority, said use of a plan to purchase existing housing "has to be limited because it tends to ghettoize a part of the town."

He said he was disappointed in the Town Meeting Committee, which he had seen for only seven minutes since it was formed by the spring town meeting. The town should rely on existing boards, he said.

Ann Matarese, chairman of the citizens advisory committee, voiced support for the housing authority's decision not to propose alternate sites to the fall town meeting.

"Proposing more sites sends a mixed message to the town meeting," she said. "We should take the state to court. After all, we were willing to go to court to stop the USA Today newspaper boxes. It's not frivolous to go to court against one bureaucrat (Salvucci) who has taken two positions.

"To abandon the Loop to the whims of Mr. Salvucci is a disservice to the town," Matarese said.

Welch concluded that most people were not opposed to seeking special legislative action to win approval for the Loop site, even if not all were optimistic about the idea.

Mortensen reiterated his view that such a plan "is uncertain and takes a long time. It's time to consider simpler and more available options."

He also wondered if the town would pursue the remaining five units if the Loop effort is unsuccessful. He said he had been told the town wanted to build all seven units at once.

"That means until we fill the two holes created by the loss of the Woburn Loop, nothing is apparently going to happen."

Selectman Bob Deering asked if Mortensen's committee would move to indefinitely poptpone articles for alternate sites if the Loop is approved between now and town meeting.

"Yes," Mortensen said.

Selectman Judie Muggia said town meeting members should be told the state "will never provide enough money for the units" so town money is going to be needed, whether existing stock is purchased or new structures are built.

Welch asked for comment by Berman, chairman of the fair housing committee. He supported putting alternate sites on the warrant.

Berman also said Salvucci's rejection of the Woburn Loop plan "seems autocratic, in light of the Swanton Street abutment that replaced the bridge."

Sopper said the town could be worried about nothing.

"We could have the answer to finding an alternate site this evening," he said, referring to an offer by a Sussex Road developer to provide a lot to the town in return for permission to run a new water line through the town forest to serve his development.

"It won't be in time for the November town meeting," Welch said firmly. "And we won't vote on any of those options suggested by the developer tonight."

Moments later, selectmen voted unanimously to ask Saltmarsh to file a special bill exempting all of the Loop from Salvucci's control. Sen. Richard Kraus has also pledged support, Welch said.

Welch agreed to withdraw his suggestion to include an article to purchase an existing duplex.

He said he could not pursue legal action, however, because of its inherent risks. He said the EOCD had never actually approved the Loop site anyway, the EOCD never got the warrant for the town meeting as it requested and the town, in fact, knew before the spring town meeting that it might not be possible to build on the Loop.

"The legal option would be counter-productive in the short run, though there's merit in the idea of legal action to free the Loop in the long run," Welch said.

McCarthy disagreed. He said town meeting didn't have prior knowledge it couldn't build on the Loop. "In fact, halfway through town meeting, you told a reporter you just found that out," McCarthy told Welch.

McCarthy also said the entire Section 705 program exists solely because of an executive order by a previous governor.

"There's no law about it but the state still says it will withhold our money if we don't do what they say," he said.

"And don't think this housing is for Winchester residents anymore. That's no longer a local option," McCarthy said. "As of Oct. 1, we'll have a minority quota 13 times the percentage of minorities in town."

Under new state rules, Section 705 housing must be specifically advertised to attract minorities.

Matarese objected to "committees usurping the authority of the housing authority. What's to prevent any group of 10 citizens from proposing six other sites?"

Legally, nothing, as long as they meet the deadline for closing of town meeting warrants.

Sopper again said the town did not need to rush. "Through linkage, we'll have more options to present to the next spring town meeting," he predicted.

None of the boards, including the selectmen, planning board and housing authority, ever actually agreed to rank the seven sites proposed by the Town Meeting Committee as alternate sites.

Those sites include the corner of Johnson Road and Amberwood Drive, the corner of Ridge and Lockeland roads, a site on Andrews Road, a site at the northern end of Sylvester Avenue, a separate site on Horn Pond Brook Road, a site between Canal and Hemingway streets and a site bordering Leonard Field on Washington Street.

Parking spaces may not be painted, board debates streets were repaved.

Selectman Judie Muggia was receptive to the idea, noting that Arlington recently repaved streets and did not paint parking spaces again.

Sopper also proposed doubling the one-hour time limit on parking. He said he felt abandoned, however, because several businessmen who told him they supported the idea and would attend a meeting of selectmen were not present.

Sopper said Cathy Alexander, executive director of the Winchester Chamber of Commerce, wanted to speak in favor of the two-hour limit, as did Dick Malcolm, president of the organization.

Neither was present but Alexander called to say the chamber "has no official position."

"I'm doing this for them. If they don't want it . . .," Sopper said with a shrug.

Wade Welch, chairman of the selectmen, suggested the matter be delayed a week and the chamber asked for comments. The board agreed.

In other parking matters, Sopper suggested the town again allow parking on Winchester Place, where trucks unloading once made parking impractical.

He also said parking should be allowed on Mount Vernon Street, across from the town hall.

Sopper convinced selectmen not to submit the new parking plan prepared by Ciarcia to the state department of public works for comment until selectmen have approved it.

Representatives of the chamber of commerce will be invited to the Monday, Sept. 29, meeting of seleletmen.

Selectmen also abandoned plans for plastic lines on crosswalks because no lines of any sort have been provided at school crossings. To get the quickest action, they agreed to have town crews paint traditional white lines at school crossings as soon as possible.

Big trash cost hike projected in meeting based on a 12-month period.

The fee will rise because revenues NESWC receives from selling electricity to New England Power Company have fallen.

NESWC, whose capacity is approximately half of the waste-to-energy plant in North Andover, uses these revenues to pay for the trash disposal.

Because of declining energy prices, the power company is paying less for electricity than originally estimated, and NESWC must pass on their extra costs to member cities and towns.

At the meeting, members looked into the possibility of prepaying the total tipping fee for the year as an attempt to stabilize at $32 a ton. But the alternative was rejected.

"We could just not get 22 cities and towns to prepay fast enough (for the plan) to be advantageous," one member said.

Towns would have had to prepay by July or August for the plan to be financially feasible.

Prepayment would also pose a legal question for municipalities like Winchester. The question concerns whether communities can pay for services not already rendered.

NESWC members first suggested the prepayment alternative in July.

If member towns had accepted the prepayment plan, NESWC would have invested the money and used the interest from the investment to pay for the difference between the projected and actual, higher, tipping fee.

As another alternative, NESWC has been trying to renegotiate contracts with private commercial haulers so they pay a higher tipping fee. But this option does not look like it will work, said executive committee members.

Before the North Andover plant opened in 1983, it signed a five-year contract with private haulers at $15 a ton, a high price then.

NESWC also tried to stabilize the tipping fee using excess bond money. But it was ruled that the action would nullify the tax-exempt status of these stabilization bonds.

Winchester, with Belmont and Hamilton, is one of three towns late in payment of tipping fee bills, committee members were told.

Trash tipping wins

financed because the town earns about 6.5 percent on its investments but can borrow funds for capital purchases at only 5 percent.

Town manager Maurer conceded that the bidder who wants to haul the town's trash for $6 a ton the first year and $6.45 the second year of a two-year contract would be in the driver's seat in two years.

But the town could reconsider its options then, he said. It would cost about $535,000 to purchase a tractor and do the town's own hauling, including the personnel involved, versus $585,000 in the next two years if the status quo is maintained under a $26/ton contract.

In his opening remarks, Polcari suggested the town could save money by adopting a mandatory recycling ordinance, eliminating illegal dumping by out-of-towners and strict enforcement at the transfer station.

His recycling proposal was not mentioned again Thursday.

SENIOR NEWS

Fall Fiesta Fair kicks off Oct. 1

The Winchester Seniors Association 10th annual Fall Fiesta Fair will open from 2 to 9 p.m. Oct. 1 and from 10 a.m. to 3:00 p.m. Oct. 2. Items for all tables are needed.

The event must be successful to help finance the additional operating expenses of the Jenks Senior Center.

Tickets for the Italian dinner at the Knights of Columbus Hall are available at the center reception desk. Raffle tickets may be obtained there for the $100 bill, the beautiful hand-stencilled quilt made by the crafts and stitchery group under the direction of Jane Norberg, and a hand-knit afghan made by Ann Ciampa.

Refreshments will be sold by Randy Kazazian's Snack Bar with sandwiches, finger desserts, coffee/tea, or soft drinks.

Building Update

The farming of the first floor of the addition to the Jenks Senior Center is well under way. The structure for the roof is in place. With cooler weather on the way, the old boiler will be kept in tact in case there are delays in installing a new heating source.

The new boiler was ordered but much more construction is needed before both sections of the building can be joined by one heating system.

Jenks thanks building committee

The building expansion committee was organized more than three years ago. Anthony Nowlan, a committee member, assumed the chairmanship in September 1985, when Norman Reed who was serving as chairman, moved to Cape Cod.

The committee worked diligently in planning with the architect and other specialists. The construction management team made up of Philip Locashio, architect, Anthony Nowlan, Larry Hutchings and Dr. Richard Norberg also worked on the project. Hutchings has given some five or six hours a day on the site.

Sincere appreciation is extended, not only to the construction management team, but also to those who worked for more than three years in planning for the lay-out of the addition to the building.

The following are commended for the excellence of their thinking:

Anthony Nowlan, chairman; Vincent Berger; Barbara Ciampa, administrator of the Council on Aging; Charles Craven; Helen Hodgdon; Larry Hutchings; Evelyn Jenks; Claire Masters; Mal Masters; Polly McGuigan; Robert Mulford; Ed Palmer; Byron Peterson; Norman reed; and Claire Flynn who did a vast amount of typing for the committee.

Kay Morris, left, Mary Collins, Clara Ford and Miriam Durant were busy last year at the Fall Fiesta Fair children's table.

Elaine Delaney, left, Charles Craven, Grace Dignam and Mary Devlin were treasurers of the Fall Fiesta Fair last year.

Flu and pneumonia Clinic Oct. 7 and 8

This year's influenza and pneumonia clinic will be from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. Oct. 7 and 8 at the Jenks Senior Center, again this year, both flu and pneumonia shots will be offered. Flu shots will be administered free of charge, but there will be a charge of $5.00 for pneumonia shots.

The influenza vaccine will protect against three flu strains: A-Chile, A-Mississippi, and B-Ann Arbor. People who should receive the vaccine include high-risk individuals including: persons with a chronic illness such as diabetes, heart disease, kidney disorders and respiratory problems.

People who should check with a physician before taking the vaccine include: those who have received another type of vaccine in the last 14 days; those receiving anti-cancer medication; and those who have a fever or are ill with something more serious than a cold.

Checks should be made out to the Town of Winchester.

Glaucoma clinic set for Oct. 4

The Rotary Club of Winchester and the Winchester Seniors Association will sponsor a glaucoma screening clinic at the Jenks Senior Center for persons 35 years of age and over, from 10 a.m. to 1:00 p.m. Saturday Oct. 4. Reservations are not required.

Anyone for Pinochle?

The "For Men Only" cribbage players who meet on Wednesdays at 1 p.m. are interested in forming a Pinoche group of players.

Men who enjoy the game are cordially invited to drop by at or sign up at the Jenks Senior Center reception desk.

National Eye Care Project

The Massachusetts Eye Care Project, a statewide program for the disadvantaged elderly, is bringing medical eye care at no cost to hundreds of older Americans.

Call 1-800-222-EYES-3937), a helpline that has been operating since June 21. Callers who don't have an opthalmologist or haven't seen one in the past three years, are eligible for eye care.

Elder advocates training

The summer 1986 publication from the Massachusetts Executive Office of Elder Affairs entitled, "Independent Age" carries an article on Health benefits counselors at the Jenks Senior Center in Winchester. This is found under the spotlight section of elder advocates. It states:

"Health benefits counselors at the Jenks Senior Center in Winchester have greatly benefitted from elder advocates training sessions. Richard Brownell, Heleh F. Cotter, Agnes Blyth, Helen Dame, Audrey Kuhn, Mary McLaughlin and Kay Morris went to elder advocates sessions as part of their training as health benefits counselors.

Blyth reports, "I was interested in Medicare and had a total lack of knowledge. I would recommend the elder advocates program to those who want to help seniors and are mystified by the various changes in Medicare."

The Jenks Senior center health benefits counselors have attended several training sessions and are to be commended for their willingness to become fully prepared in assisting seniors who have problems with health and hospital insurance forms and questions about coverage.

Their next monthly session for individual conference is Thursday, Oct. 16. Call the center for an appointment. This once a month service is scheduled the third Thursday from 9:30 to 11 a.m.

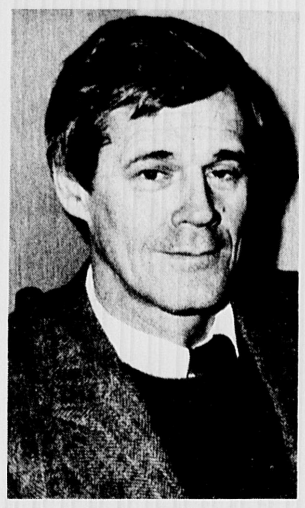
Junior high parents are Parent-to-Parent focus



James Garvin

Parents of junior high students will be the special focus when James Garvin speaks in the second program of the year sponsored by Parent-to-Parent of Winchester.

The program is scheduled at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 1, at McCall Junior High School.

Garvin, director of middle school education at Gordon College in Wenham and director of the New England League of Middle Schools, will speak about "Self Concept: Essential Ingredient to Effective Parenting and Schooling."

During the past year, Garvin has conducted more than 80 workshops with teachers and 100 workshops witl. parents, all dealing with understanding emerging adolescents.

During early adolescence, children change physically, intellectually and socially. Garvin introduces these changes to help his audience understand that such changes are normal and gives practical advice about dealing with changes in behavior.

His goal is to build positive relationships between adults and teenagers through improving the young people's self-esteem.

The topic will be most helpful for parents of children aged 10-14. The program is free and open to all parents. It has financial support from the EnKa Society.

Cooperative Nursery School starts new year

At the Winchester Cooperative Nursery School, children are settling into the first full week of the school year under the guidance of director and teacher Jean Mortensen and teachers Martha Wilder, Mary Jo Curley, Pat Malcom and Judy Andriesse.

The school, founded in 1968, offers a range of programs for 3- and 4-year-olds and pre-kindergarteners in which parents and children participate in a cooperative learning experience.

The beginning of classroom activity follows an orientation for parents, which included first-aid training for parent helpers conducted by Dr. Richard d'Entremont and nurse Kate Stakes.

Directors of the nursery school for the year include Gail LaRocca, president, Deborah O'Brien, vice president, Robert and Carol Salvo, co-treasurers, Chris and Rosemary Hooson, co-assistant treasurers, and Susan Fiorenza, secretary.

For more information about the school or its curriculum, call Winchester Nursery School at 729-2003.

Lincoln, Vinson-Owen name self-study evaluation teams

Principals Suzanne McGee and Susan Villani have announced steering committee members who will direct the Vinson-Owen and Lincoln Schools' efforts during its self-study and the subsequent on-site visitation by a team of professional educators selected by the Committee on Public Elementary Schools of the New England Association of Schools and Colleges (NEASC).

The steering committee of the Vinson-Owen School will be co-chaired by teachers Miriam Foley and Patrice Manley. Other members are teachers Carol Romboli, Andrea Falvey and Ron Brush and principal McGee.

Joanne Benton, instructional specialist, will chair the Lincoln School steering committee. Other members at Lincoln are teachers Robert Lynch and Sally Walter, parent representative Nancy Evans and principal Villani.

NEASC membership requires that a school undergo a self-study and formal evaluation at least once every ten years. Committee responsibilities will include coordinating a schedule of events for the school's self-study, collecting reports from various staff committees and making necessary preparations for the evaluation team's visit.

According to McGee and Villani, "The self-study will include the creation of a school and community report which will provide extensive information about the town as well as the school and the students it serves; the development of a statement of philosphy which reflects the needs, abilities and goals of the students; and a comprehensive assessment of all educational programs and services within the school.

"The focus of the evaluation will be to determine the extent to which our teaching and learning activities carry out the school's philosophy and goals."

This is the first NEASC evaluation for Lincoln and Vinson-Owen Schools. The visiting committee is scheduled to conduct the evaluation in April 1988.

The New England Association of Schools and Colleges is a voluntary league of over 1,400 public schools, colleges and universities, independent schools and vocational, technical and career institutions.

REAL ESTATE AND YOU

ARRANGING YOUR MOVE

Finding a good moving company is the first step toward an easy move. The Yellow Pages are a good place to begin, but a word of mouth recommendation from a friend or neighbor is the best advertising any mover can have.

Talk to friends about their experiences, and ask your Realtor if he or she can recommend one or more reputable companies. Then call around to check weights and charges. You can save a lot of money by packing yourself, but doing it yourself may affect the mover's liability if anything is broken. Like other service organizations, moving companies offer a range of services and charges. Some charge by the hour for local and/or long distance moves. The rates may also vary depending on the weight of your furniture and other belongings. Once you narrow down your choices of moving companies, you can ask a representative from each company to visit your home and give you specific information about price and service options.

Leaders of town meeting housing group explain its ideas, motivation

By DAVID MORTENSEN and ROBERT FRANK

The Town Meetings's Special Study Committee on Low and Moderate Income Housing has heard reports in the press and elsewhere suggesting that some members of the board of selectmen and others had questions concerning the Town Meeting Committee's reasons for requesting inclusion of alternative site articles in the warrant for the annual fall town meeting. This letter is written response to those concerns.

Simply put, the Town Meeting Committee believes that the Town should be in a flexible position to consider alternative sites as a "backup" in the event any of the seven units on the four sites approved by the spring town meeting cannot be built within a reasonable time because of legal impediments.

The Town Meeting Committee has consistently supported and encouraged the Housing Authority in the WHA's efforts to implement the "7-unit, 4 site" plan approved by the spring town meeting. Although many citizens and town meeting members have expressed dissatisfaction with the particular four sites, the Town Meeting Committee has consistently refrained from reopening discussion on the merits of those four sites, recognizing that the town meeting had voted to approve them and because we had felt it important to support, no impede, the Housing Authority's efforts to implement the "7-unit, 4 site" approach.

The advisability of having an alternative site option as a backup is hardly a new concept. Specifically the Town Meeting Committee discussed the advisability of such an option in separate meetings with each elected board — the selectmen, planning board and housing authority — during the summer.

While there was not unanimity of opinion, some members of each of those bodies expressed the view that it would be wise to have that option available. Over the course of the summer, moreover, it became increasingly probable that the so-called "Woburn Loop" site would not be approved by Secretary Salvucci.

Despite this virtually predictable outcome, the Housing Authority, in its discussions with the Town Meeting Committee, has declined to consider backup the sites in the event that disapproval became a reality. Instead, (such as suing the Commonwealth) or overturning the decision (by proposing special legislation).

Insofar as we can tell, however, the outcome of such efforts is uncertain; and it is certain that they will take a long time.

The Town Meeting Committee therefore felt that — in the event Secretary Salvucci indeed disapproved use of the Woburn Loop site — the time had come for the various town boards responsible for the Town's compliance with its contract with EOCD to re-examine the options available, including resort to a backup site.

Unless someone proposed warrant articles, however, the option of presenting a backup site to Town Meeting would have been foreclosed. Since no one else proposed such warrant articles, the Town Meeting Committee has done so.

In proposing warrant articles involving seven backup sites, the Town Meeting Committee has not proposed new sites. The seven are exactly the same sites — no more and no less — selected as suitable by the Citizen's Advisory Committee a year ago. They happen also to be within the control of the town.

These sites were accepted by the housing authority at its meeting Sept. 23, 1985, and were in turn proposed to EOCD by the selectmen Oct. 2, 1985.

Four of them were specifically approved by the EOCD on Dec. 19, 1985.

Of course the Town Meeting Committee does not propose that all of the seven sites be selected. What is proposed is that the town have the option available to select one of the seven as a backup for the Woburn Loop site, if it is disapproved.

The Town Meeting Committee also has not undertaken to "rank" the seven sites in terms of which is more preferable. The Town Meeting committee feels that the process of site selection would best be done in the first instance by the elected boards, with the advice of the Citizen's Advisory Committee. The Town Meeting Committee is disinclined to make a recommendation as a specific site unless all other boards decline to do so.

To those who have reportedly questioned whether the Town Meeting Committee, in making this request, exceeded its own charter, our response is that the Town Meeting Committee was among other things specifically charged to make recommendations, and it would be impossible to recommend that any action be taken if the warrant articles necessary to permit debate and action on the recommendations are not before the Town Meeting.

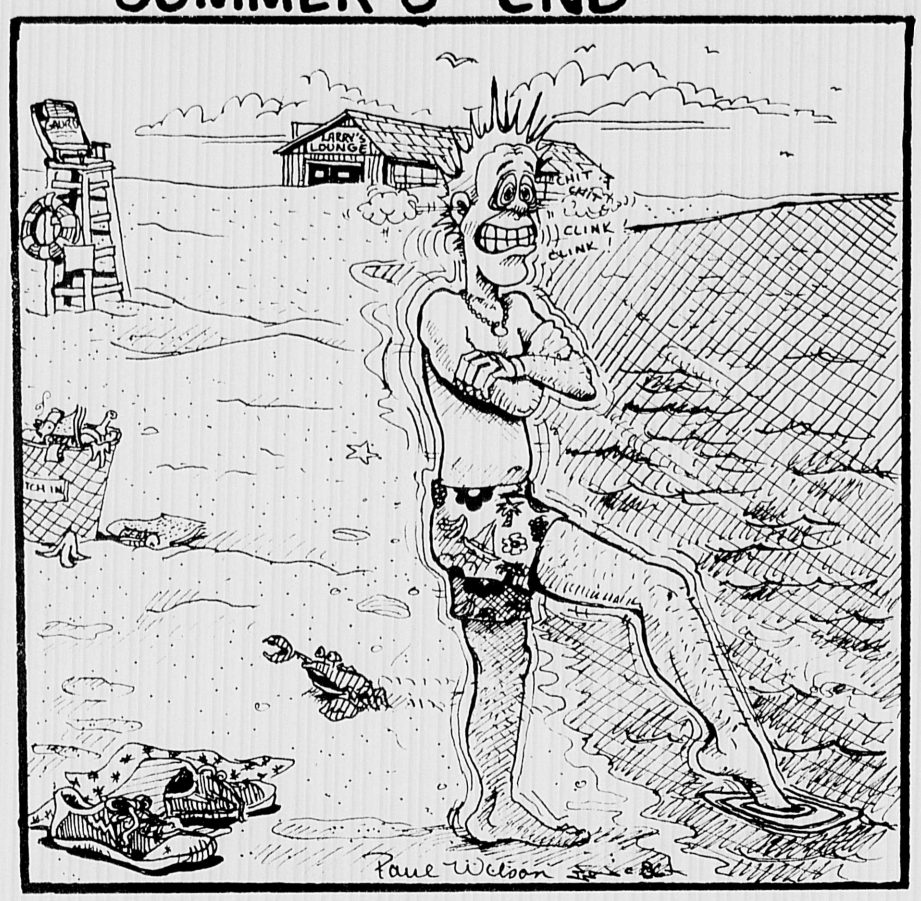
We are a bit surprised that this recommendation came as a surprise to anyone. At least 10 days before making the request, we discussed our intention with the executive director of the housing authority, with some members of the boards involved, and with the town manager, and no one asked us to decline from doing so.

What the Town Meeting committee recommends should occur now is that — between now and the fall town meeting — the elected boards should together address the issue and decide whether the best course of action would not be turned to a backup site.

If so, those alternative sites in order of preference and bring a recommendation (with options) to the fall town meeting for approval.

(Mortensen is chairman and Frank vice chairman of the special study committee on low and moderate income housing.)

SUMMER'S END



Sharing love brings many blessings

By TERRY MAROTTA

The story begins, I guess, with Bob's mother.

Her name was Alma and together with Bob's dad, she'd brought seven children along in the world before the cancer caught up with her at 47.

But in the two years it took for her body to be vanquished finally, she dwelled more upon the richness and variety of life's busy middle movements than on its closing chords.

She went peacefully, in the end, affirming life. "If by chance you wish to remember me," she wrote in the farewell prayer she composed for her funeral, "do it with a kind deed to someone who needs you."

She said goodbye to her children one at a time before she died; to Bob of course too, her eldest son, and to Bob's young wife Lisa.

She loved Lisa like one of her own, I guess because they shared a certain vitality, a readiness for mirth.

Bob and Lisa had married early, by today's standards, and had had their first child right away.

That baby arrived with a tiny pink birthmark at the base of her scalp; they all remarked upon it at the time, because it was identical in both shape and placement to ones that both Alma and her own mother had.

She loved that first grandchild — Alma did — and Bob and Lisa loved her too.

It was a pleasure in those early years, to be in the company of this young family, as a second and then a third baby were added to their store.

It was a pleasure later to see them in the big brick house they own, with roller skates in the front hall, cups of apple juice in the kitchen, and a trampoline the size of a small bedroom in the back yard.

Their life seemed a kind of American idyll. They couldn't have asked for one thing more.

But they did. They asked for another baby. Not one of their own making this time, not one to keep forever, necessarily, but one born in circumstances less lucky than their own had known.

They wanted a child to hold and love through the difficult first weeks and months of life, when more than at any other time perhaps, a person needs to feel that the world is a warm place where people will help and take care of you. They wanted a child to whom they could communicate this most crucial message; to share in what they sensed was their own blessed abundance.

They took a course in foster care; underwent the scrutiny of the state; and one day last June, they got the phone call from the hospital: a baby girl was waiting for them.

Her mother gave her birth, recovered for a day or two, and checked out without her.

She was wholly alive. She was entirely perfect. She was all alone in the world.

Bob and Lisa rushed to the attic and got down the cradle; dug out the baby clothes; and drove the next day to the hospital to meet her.

They found her in a ward, next to a teenager.

She came bearing only a name, a small cotton cap, and one thing more: a tiny pink birthmark at the base of her scalp.

"Mom must have kissed her on her way down," Bob said when, holding her to them, they'd recovered enough for speech to be possible.

And now she knows how to smile.

She may not drop anchor with Bob and Lisa for good, this little person. As foster parents, they know she may rest only for a while in their safe harbor, gaining strength for the voyage ahead.

But they can accept this, because they know that when love is given freely, it is given with the understanding that it will be passed on. I give it to you; you give it to someone else; we are all enriched in the process.

They know this because Alma told it to them at her own funeral.

Who can doubt, hearing this tale, that love does indeed conquer death? That the air around us dances with angels?

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to thank everyone who voted in the primary last Tuesday. An essential ingredient of democracy is the individual's right to vote and by doing so on such a cold, damp day, you earned my deepest gratitude.

It was a pleasure to meet so many friendly people at the polling sites throughout the day. I thoroughly enjoyed talking with you and hearing your encouraging remarks. It is through communication that good, accountable government occurs.

Thank you for your support, and please do not hesitate to contact me as we prepare for the future weeks. I look forward to seeing you at the polls Nov. 4th and would appreciate your continued support.

Sincerely,
Paul Casey

Mastrocola thanks voters

TO THE EDITOR:

My name is Renato Mastrocola and I was recently defeated as a candidate for the Governor's Council.

With limited funds and unlimited enthusiasm, I tried to meet as many voters as possible over the 18 communities involved in this contest, but on Sept. 16 the voters spoke and I fell short of victory.

Although disappointed, I consider the opportunity to seek a public office one of the greatest privileges a citizen has in our great democracy. I would like to thank the people in your community who listened to my positions and encouraged me to work harder.

As a candidate and a human being I cannot aptly describe the appreciation and fondness that I have developed for the people of the Governor's Council Sixth District.

To all who went out and voted, congratulations, and to my opponent, my best wishes.

Yours truly,
Renato Mastrocola

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Mail sorting waste of time

TO THE EDITOR:

And where is Art Buchwald when I need him?

Surely there is something funny about thousands of Winchester residents driving up to the Winchester post office mailboxes and dutifully waiting while the driver in front dutifully sorts "out of town" and "Winchester," just as the signs say to do.

tied, all the letters we spend sorting are mixed together in one container. In Woburn, they are re-sorted.

"This is insanity," I said.

"It's the system" the collecting mailman replied.

Now, all the postal employees seem very nice. Is it up to them to improve "the system," or must we?

Sincerely
Lenore C. Frazier

Kudos for flower care

TO THE EDITOR:

Have you noticed the beautiful plant box in front of the Coward Shoe Store? This is one of 17 plant boxes placed in the Center by the Winchester Chamber of Commerce to soften the severe lines of street and sidewalk.

It is obvious that Herb Smith and Millie Stigliano of Corward's have given this box of flowers plenty of TLC in the form of water and fertilizer. They have even added coleus, which they started from seed in their shop, to the standard planting.

If you will go inside, you will find a veritable green house of lovely, healthy plants. Herb and Millie will be glad to tell you how they "rescued" these plants from the jaws of death!

Three cheers to you, Herb and Millie, for making our town a more beautiful place.

Not so silly after all!

TO THE EDITOR:

In response to George Derringer's editorial in the Sept. 18 issue, it is obvious Derringer is unaware how important a primary may be to a candidate, whether opposed or unopposed.

Democratic candidate Paul Casey is running against a man who has not been challenged in 12 years. His name and face are new to many in Winchester and Stoneham voters.

Casey therefore must use primary day and the time before the primary to appeal to these voters. The primary also serves as a very good indicator of what a politician may expect in the general election.

As far as incumbent Republican Rep. "Whip" Saltmarsh is concerned, he too has a need for the primary. As stated before, this is the first time in 12 years that Saltmarsh has been opposed and must therefore remind the voters of his presence, lest they forget.

If either candiate did not work as hard as he had before and during primary day, he would certainly have more than his share of work to do in less six weeks to get the votes needed to win this election.

Now, Mr. Derringer, wouldn't that be silly?

MDC still needs tighter control

TO THE EDITOR:

Taking a long and hard look at the capabilities of the Metropolitan District Commission (MDC), one finds that the agency still lacks the capacity to uncover instances of fraud and abuse among contractors with which it does business.

Currently the MDC has established an internal audit unit which consists of one investigator on loan from the Metro Police division.

Operating as a one-man unit, he has a duty to respond to requests for information from the Office of the Inspector General and conduct internal probes in response to complaints of wrongdoing in the construction field.

However, the internal audit unit hasn't functioned as an effective deterrent against the deeply-rooted fraud and waste so prevalent in the MDC's past.

The consequences are quite serious. Over the past three years, the MDC has not identified or pursued a single instance of contractor fraud.

But, in this same period, Inspector General Barresi's office has reviewed 14 MDC construction and maintenance contracts involving seven different contractors.

In 13 of those 14 cases, the inspector general uncovered evidence of wrongdoing. Abuses included bribery of public officials, fraudulent billings to the MDC and false record-keeping by MDC personnel.

Although the contracts reviewed were a small percentage of the total construction and maintenance projects, the proportion of contracts which revealed strong evidence of wrongdoing suggests that MDC transactions with contractors continue to be highly vulnerable to fraud and abuse — and excessive in cost to taxpayers of the commonwealth.

An experienced interal audit director and staff reduce this vulnerability. Indeed, MDC Commissioner Geary has said his ability to uncover contractor fraud would be greatly improved by hiring a qualified director and internal audit staff.

However, MDC officials say they cannot hire such a director and staff at the current salary scales set by the state division of personnel.

It must be noted that in 1984 a very competent and probing director of internal audit was hired; he resigned after seven months, citing a salary dispute and lack of cooperation.

With this is mind, Geary seems somewhat insincere in his effort to curb MDC waste and fraud.

Primary needs campaign effort

TO THE EDITOR:

I was surprised to read Mr. Derringer's remarks in last week's Star which labelled as "silly" candidate Paul Casey's campaigning on primary day.

Although my own political experience includes little beyond voting, I nonetheless clearly recognize the importance of "getting out the vote" before and during the primary, even for a candidate unopposed in his party.

I appreciate the efforts of enthusiastic candidates like Casey who, while promoting their own candidacy, also provide the encouragement so many of us unfortunately need to exercise our precious right to vote.

The candidate who waits until after primary day to commence hand-shaking and sign-waving in earnest will indeed look silly, and what is more, will probably lose. Unless, perhaps, he is a well-ensconced incumbent.

Aberjona resident was misidentified

TO THE EDITOR:

It was nice to see a picture of Aberjona Nursing Center's Sept. 13 bake sale to raise money for the Mystic Valley Chapter of Living Is For the Elderly (LIFE) in The Star's Sept. 18 edition.

The picture appeared on page 9 but showed Laura McInerney buying a raffle ticket from Inez Taylor, not Bernice Whitney, another resident who was present at the sale at the same time.

Both residents were very understanding and it was an easy mistake for the photographer to make.

We are all grateful for The Star's support. Our residents love to see their pictures in the paper.

Thank you for setting the record straight and for your continued support.

Bake sale proceeds will be used to send three resident and chaperones to Washington, where they will represent nursing home residents in a national conference.

Aberjona residents especially thank Nelson's Bakery, Dunkin Donuts, Salvy's Bakery and the wonderful nursing staff at Aberjona for their very kind donations of tasty baked goods.

We also thank Bannister's Restaurant of Woburn for the luncheon gift certificate which was awarded. Thanks to all, we had a very fun-filled and profitable day.

Sincerely,
Susan M. Goodwin

DON'T GO AGAINST THE TIDE USE CENTURY ADS

Sen. Kraus, Anderson debate

By JOANNE BISSETTA

Sen. Richard Kraus (D-Winchester) said the state government will be devastated if referendum question No. 3 on the November ballot is approved.

The question is sponsored by Citizens for Limited Taxation and the Massachusetts High Technology council, the two groups that led the fight for Proposition 2½.

Question No. 3, the State Tax Revenue Limit, would cap the growth of state tax revenues to equal the growth of private wages and salaries.

This fiscal year, the increase of state revenues is expected to exceed the increase in wages and salaries.

Kraus debated Barbara Anderson, executive director of Citizens for Limited Taxation, Tuesday at Suffolk University.

Anderson said the tax cap is needed to make the state government work more efficiently and would reduce the surplus of funds in the state's coffers. She said the measure could have saved Massachusetts taxpayers money last year.

At the end of last fiscal year, the state found it had collected about $600 million more than it thought.

According to Citizens for Limited Taxation, most of that money was spent soon afterward. Anderson believes that if the tax cap had been in effect, taxpayers would have received about $450 million back in tax credits.

"This proposed tax cap would squeeze the government," said Kraus. "I don't think the Massachusetts taxpayers want to shrink the government when we have needs to be addressed, like education, local aid, and hazardous waste."

However, Anderson contended the tax cap would not adversely affect the budget.

"Nothing in this petition says that it will cut local aid," she said. "All we want to do is limit the increase of state spending to the increase of wages and salaries. Next year 9.9 percent growth is expected in wages and salaries."

Although the debate was about the referendum question, much of the discussion also focused on Proposition 2½, which was passed by a ballot question similar to the tax cap.

Proposition 2½ restricts the amount local taxes can be increased.

"One of the reasons Proposition 2½ has worked out the way it did is that the state poured money into towns," Kraus said. "If the tax cap is passed, one of two things must happen: Either the size of government must be cut down, or local aid must be reduced. About 19 percent of what the state and local governments spend now are federal funds, and those are disappearing fast."

Kraus said state government has become smaller since Proposition 2½. "We are not living in Taxachusetts anymore," said Kraus. He said further shrinkage is not necessary.

Anderson said that the tax cap would ensure that state spending will not increase. So when the economy is on shaky ground, taxpayers would not face tax increase to pay for programs formed in more prosperous times.

Anderson to speak Oct. 1

The Winchester Chamber of Commerce invites all to attend a luncheon at Lucia's Ristorante at 11:45 a.m. Wednesday, Oct. 1, when the guest speaker will be Barbara Anderson, executive director of Citizens for Limited Taxation.

Her topic will be state tax limit/surtax repeal petition, which is a referendum issue on the ballot in November.

President Richard Malcolm will also give a brief overview of some of the chamber's activities and would encourage anyone interested in attending the program to call the chamber office at 729-8870 for reservations.

PRAYER TO ST. JUDE

Most holy apostle, St. Jude, faithful servant and friend of Jesus, the Church honors and invokes you universally, as the patron of hopeless cases, of things almost despaired of. Pray for me, I am so helpless and alone. Make use I implore you, of that particular privilege given to you, to bring visible and speedy help where help is almost despaired of. Come to my assistance in this great need that I may receive the consolation and help of heaven in all my necessities, tribulations, and sufferings, particularly — (Here make your request) and that I may praise God with you and all the elect forever. I promise, O blessed St. Jude, to be ever mindful of this great favor, to always honor you as my special and powerful patron, and to gratefully encourage devotion to you. Amen.

WHS girl booters blank Arlington, Burlington

By DAVID DEMARCO

The Winchester Sachemettes had a relatively easy week of the girls soccer season, facing very little competition from either Arlington on Tuesday or Burlington three days later.

Winchester defeated the Spy Ponders 5-0 in a game that was over for Arlington when Lauren Suvak scored after only 4:25 in the first half.

Debbie Nowell, who leads in point totals for the Sachemettes, grabbed another from 15 feet out at 14:52.

Meghan Guarnotta got the next two goals for Winchester, putting her team up 4-0 at intermission.

Most of the play was concentrated in Arlington's end of the field. Winchester chose to defend the west goal with the wind blowing from the east, operating under the assumption Arlington would have trouble bringing the ball upfield.

As it turned out, Arlington would have been unable to penetrate the Sachemettes' defense with a hurricane blowing at its back.

Winchester's Guarnotta got her hat trick in the early moments of the second half.

From then on, it was "Experience Time" as younger players flooded the field for both schools.

"Arlington's defense was trying but was not aggressive," Guarnotta said.

Coach Chris Scanlon, explaining Winchester's success, said, "The bigger the field, the better we play. We move really well and the more space we have, the more opportunities we have."

Friday, it was more of the same — only worse, as Burlington could not compete with Winchester.

The contest was two minutes old when little Charlotte Reese put in her first goal and opened the floodgates.

Kim Small and Melissa Skehan scored and sophomore Amy "Little Scooter" Binding got her first goal of the seaon at the 39-minute mark to make it 4-0.

Reese put two more in the net to get the hat trick for the afternoon. The second half actually seemed more like target practice for the Sachemettes, who waltzed to an 8-0 win.

A challenge will appear tomorrow, however, when Winchester hosts a good team from Lexington at 3:30 p.m. in what should be an excellent match.

Tuesday, Sept. 30, Winchester will visit Belmont before coming home to entertain Woburn Oct. 3.

Soccer Sachems win two

By STEVE GOUDSOUZIAN

The Winchester High School Sachems played their first boys' soccer away game of the year Sept. 16 in Watertown. The game was played on a cold day with the wind gusting and the sun setting. The Sachems lost the toss and were forced to play against the wind and into the sun in the first half.

The Sachems went to Watertown with their usual cocky and ill-prepared attitude. The team had to be continually "yelled at" to concentrate. They took Watertown very lightly.

Watertown, with the aid of the wind, constantly launched balls into the Winchester end and had its forwards charging. The Watertown attacks were thwarted by the fullback foursome of Kent McCord, David Ducharme, Mark Bortman and Steve Goudsouzian. They kept Watertown at bay as goalie Scott Racek had to make only one good stop the whole game.

The Sachems struck for their first goal as center forward Mike Rice hustled after a cross and fitted the ball through the goalie's legs. The second goal was scored by Erbafina as he took an outside shot that slipped inside the near post and past the goalie.

The Sachems continued to have problems judging and controlling almost every punt and goal kick as the ball was lost in the sun and the wind seemed to move in every direction. The first half ended with the Sachems ahead 2-0.

The Sachems were robbed often by one of the referees. Winchester seemed to be called for every little thing. The Sachems had three goals called back because of the official's calls.

In the second half, the Sachems had their backs to the wind and were ready to blow the game wide open. Chris VerHaegen, who had been held quiet in the first half by an aggressive Watertown defense, exploded for three goals. Erbafina tipped an indirect kick which VerHaegen skipped a low shot in the far corner.

Goudsouzian, making an offensive rush, passed to VerHaegen who, in turn, passed to a streaking Rice. Rice dropped the ball back to VerHaegen as he placed a low shot past the goalie. He took an outside shot that burst off his foot and in the upper near corner.

Paul Cappadonna continued to score some goals for the Sachems by breaking in on a loose ball and putting it in a corner.

Stephen Reeve got his first goal of the year off an indirect kick. The ball was tipped by Rice as Reeve took the shot past the wall and in the goal.

The Sachems won the game convincingly 7-0.

They played again that Friday at nome against Burlington. The Sachems were not very healthy. Kenny Fowler and Karim Ek were injured and did not dress for the game. The team suffered from many nagging injuries.

Among the three Winchester captains, only VerHaegen was reasonably healthy. During the Watertown game, McCord hurt his ankle and Goudsouzian bruised his thigh. Both did not practice either Wednesday or Thrusday. Both were questionable for the game.

Coach Gene Bouley wanted both to try to play. While the two other captains could not play to their potential, VerHaegen exploded against a weak defense for four goals.

The Sachems started the game dominating and never stopped. Their crisp passing left gaping holes in Burlington's office. VerHaegen rocketed an outside shot past the goalie. Bouley pulled McCord out of the game.

VerHaegen scored off a direct kick. Bouley pulled Goudsouzian out.

Junior Reeeve moved from halfback to cover for Goudsouzian and senior Brian Riley played in place of McCord. Riely has been a sparkplug for the Sachems. His aggressive and spirited play has set a fine example for the rest of the team.

During one of the few times Burlington had any scoring opportunities, goalie Racek came out of the net to cover up a loose ball and was kicked in the head. Racek was replaced by Rice. Racek came back to play the second half.

The Sachems were forced to play with only three substitutes as McCord and Goudsouzian did not come back. The way the Sachems were playing though, nothing could stop them.

Rice took a shot that bounced off a Burlington defender and into the net.

VerHaegen crossed the ball where Erbafina put the ball away.

Burlington managed to sneak in two goals because of Sachem defensive lapses.

VerHaegen broke in and scored with the outside of his foot. He scored his fourth and final goal from outside.

The Sachems have a tough and busy week in front of them. They play Reading and Lexington away, on Monday and Friday, and they host Stoneham Wednesday.

Badminton Club starts new season

The Winchester Badminton Club will start its season Thursday, Oct. 2, at McCall Junior High School.

Play will continued from 8 to 10 p.m. each Tuesday and Thursday. There is a small charge for each session.

Badminton will become an Olympic sport in 1992 and some players may wish to get a head start, said Ray Jenkins, who offers more information to those who call 729-0807.

Cromwell leads Sachems in rout of Somerville High

By DAVID DEMARCO

Some things never change. That was the case Saturday as Winchester High School destroyed Somerville High 35-12 in the first football game of the year for both teams.

Somerville has never beaten Winchester and didn't even come close Saturday as Sachem halfback Darin Cromwell stole the show with four touchdowns.

Cromwell carried the ball 16 times for 114 total yard and an average of 7.1 yards per carry.

The first quarter ended scoreless as both teams seemed tentative, working out first-game jitters.

The second quarter began with a bang as Sachem cornerback Mark "Goon" Shaw made a key interception on Winchester's one-yard line.

The Sachem offense came together in response, marching to the end zone in just 11 plays.

The key play in the drive was an outstanding, diving catch made by split end Vinnie Benincasa for a 40-yard pickup.

Cromwell scored his first TD of the day on a straight power play with 9:37 left in the half. The Sachems proved they could move the ball, picking up 94 yards. Once the offense settled down, it would not be stopped.

Later, the Sachems marched 28 yards in six plays to put the ball at the Somerville five-yard line. Cromwell again got the call with 4:32 left, putting his team up 14-0.

With only 13 seconds left, Cromwell scored his third TD from the five-yard line.

Winchester led 21-0 at the half. The table was set for a blowout.

As the second half began, the Sachems received the kickoff and marched to the Somerville nine-yard line. Who got the call? Anyone could guess. Cromwell put the Sachems on top 27-0.

The only question Saturday's game produced was "How good is the defensive secondary?" The Sachems effectively shut down the run and the offense scored on almost every possession, forcing Somerville into a pass-oriented offense.

But poor secondary play was evident when Somerville scored its first touchdown on a deep pass over the middle to Bob Abbott for six.

The Highlanders chalked up 173 passing yards on the day while gaining only 50 on the ground.

The scoreboard had not even registered Somerville's new point total, however, when Winchester's Aaron "Brother" West took the ensuing kickoff, moved to the inside, saw the hole plugged, raced to the outside and scampered 72 yards for Winchester's final TD of the day.

Somerville came back with an Abbott 15-yard completion to make it 35-12 but it was much too little much too late for the overmatched Highlanders.

Winchester will open its Middlesex League schedule this week at Knowlton Stadium when the Sachems host Wakefield High.

PREVIEW: The Wakefield Warriors finished 6-4 last year and coach Bob Connors will run the veer to accentuate the great talents of tailback Tito Raymond, the heart and soul of the Wakefield team.

The Warriors will run, run and run again. But the big offensive line and the powerful arm of Kevin Lucey will be gone this year.

Winchester will have a decided advantage on both lines. The Wakefield offensive line has no experience. On the defensive line only junior Anthony Lisitano (6'1", 235 pounds) has much size.

If the Sachems score early and often, look for Wakefield to send Raymond on a lot of short pass patterns with the screen being called a lot in the huddle.

The Winchester defensive secondary should not worry this week; Wakefield has nobody who can either catch or throw the ball consistently.

Look for Cromwell to have another 100-yard rushing day and to visit the end zone often.

Game time Saturday is 1:30 p.m.

Field hockey comeback may be sign of the future

By DAVID DEMARCO

It's been a long time coming but this week the Winchester High School field hockey team made serious strides toward respectability.

It started Wednesday when the girls came away with a 0-0 tie in a game with Burlington.

"We had the ball in their end all afternoon. We just couldn't get it in," said Sachemette star Michelle Sweeney.

The Winchester offense has been a question mark so far with the Sachems going scoreless in their first four outings.

"I think we can score but they keep moving the net," said Sachemette Ritika Bowery.

Win or lose, this is a team that enjoys itself. Katie O'Connor took a more serious view, saying, "We need to work on the offense but right now our goalie is our strong point."

Against Burlington, the defense was again sharp, allowing only eight shots on net all day. And the offense is improving. Eileen O'Connor noted, "We did get a lot of scoring opportunities today."

Jennifer Bussell had an excellent day for the Sachemettes. She has taken the role of "enforcer," intimidating the offensive surge of the opponent.

Friday, it all came together for Winchester, which pulled one of its biggest upsets in a long time with a 2-1 victory over Reading High.

This was the miracle game of the season as the Sachemettes kept everyone on the edge of the seats, winning it with one minute left.

The first half closed with a scoreless tie, closely paralleling the even play of the first half.

With only six minutes left in the game, Winchester seemed doomed to another defeat when Reading's Trish Rogers gave her team a 1-0 lead.

With three minutes left, Sweeney came through with a well-placed unassisted score to tie the game 1-1.

Winchester would normally be very pleased with a tie but Eileen O'Connor had other ideas.

Only a minute remained when she scored the go-ahead goal for the Sachemettes in a 2-1 triumph.

The Sachemettes will host Belmont at 3:30 p.m. tomorrow and host Woburn Monday at the same time.

Next Wednesday, Oct. 1, the Sachemettes will travel to Wakefield for their only night game of the year, starting at 6:30 p.m.

As Therese Krajewski pointed out, "As we need now is moral support!"

Dickson to conduct WHS band at Gala

The Winchester High School Marching band makes things happen in Winchester.

Harry Ellis Dickson, associate conductor of the Boston Pops Orchestra, will appear musically for the first time in Winchester to conduct the band at the "Gator Gala" at 5:30 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 19 at the Knights of Columbus hall. The event will raise funds to send the band to the Gator Bowl Festival in Florida this December.

Dickson is well known throughout the world for performing and promoting fine music. He is founder, artistic director and conductor of the 27-year old Boston Youth Symphony Concerts, one of the oldest programs of its type. Thousands of young people have had their first taste of symphonic music through Dickson's concert series.

Dickson will lead the band in four marches. He will rehearse only a brief time with the band before the performance.

"It will just be a chance for me to get to know the kids, and for them to get to know me," Dickson said. "Musically they will be prepared by their director, Priscilla Miller."

Of Dickson's appearance, Miller said, "I watched his concerts on TV as a kid, and I have been to many of his live performances. I never thought I would have the chance to work with him. I hold him in the highest esteem as a musician and a musical educator."

A local musician from Cambridge, Dickson was active as a violinist and conductor even before he joined the

Harry Ellis Dickson

Boston Symphony Orchestra in 1938.

Dickson's success with the Pops has gained him many guest appearances throughout North America. The City of Somerville dedicated the Harry Ellis Dickson Center of Fine Arts and Humanities while the City of Boston dedicated the Harry Ellis Dickson Orchestral Suite at Madison Park High School.

He is also not above "telling all." In his books "Gentlemen, More Dolce, Please," and "Arthur Fiedler and The Boston Pops," Dickson revealed many amusing anecdotes about music and musicians.

Miller and students have begun preparing music for the Gala. As might be expected, she has prepared something extra for the Gala. "Everyone knows I like to make the band's appearances just a little bit different," said Miller, "and this one will have its own little twist."

Miller is well known for her halftime shows at football games. This reputation has grown in the eight years since she was appointed director of the band. For each football game, Miller and the band prepare a different field performance.

We try to put on a musical production each week, not just a marching routine," noted Miller. "Winchester was ahead of its time in this respect, because only in the past few years has that trend been growing across the country."

Asked why Winchester puts on a different show each week, Miller said, "Because the kids want it that way. They vote every couple of years on how they would like to do the football half-time shows, and they always vote to do a different show each week."

Miller believes students enjoy the mental challenge. "Over 85 percent of band students are taking honors and AP courses. They like to use their brains, and they like to apply that brain power to the band. In addition, many are on various athletic teams because they want to use their brains in physical activities," said Miller.

Miller comments, "I am a builder. I wanted to be a high school band director when I was a sophomore in high school. I think with the support of the town, and with the intense dedication of the students in the bands over the years, the WHS Band has grown into something the town can be very proud of. This growth has been especially impressive over the past five years."

Dickson has dedicated almost half of his musical career to working with young people. He has been described as "that rare soul; an adult who remembers what it was like to be young, who loves young people and understands them, and who wishes to share with them that magic kingdom of the mind where music is the key."

The Winchester High School band has grown into an organization bringing recognition and honors to the town. Sandy Rodgers, chairman of the committee raising funds for the Gator Bowl trip, said, "A lot of people in town, including many who do not have children in the band, have realized over the past few years that this organization is more than a school acitivity. They have seen the band rise to successful competition. They realize the band is an educational experience beyond the classroom."

Rodgers concluded, "Everyone who would like to witness this first for the town, Harry Ellis Dickson leading the high school band, should get tickets early. Everyone who thinks young people in the band merit support by the town should also get tickets early." The Gala will be a very special event."

Tickets are avalable at Henderson Stationers and from ticket chairman Lucy Peck, 134 Mt. Vernon St., 729-2494.

'Getting into college' talk slated at library

David Donavel

"Getting into college" will be the theme of a presentation at the Winchester Public Library by David F. Donavel at 7 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 2, in the library meeting room.

Donavel, who spoke to a capacity crowd at the library last year, is an English teacher and freelance writer with over 10 years experience counselling students through the college applications process. With Richard Smith, he is cofounder of College Application Professionals in Amesbury.

Donavel's presentation will focus on four topics: choosing a college, letters of recommendation, the interview, and the application essay. The presentation will be followed by a question and answer session. The program is free and everyone is invited to attend.

The library has other resources for college bound students, including comparative guides to colleges, study guides for the ACT, SAT, and College Boards, information about scholarships and financial aid, and college catalogs in book form and on microfiche. Ask the reference staff for help locating and using the library's resources.

"Spenser," BSO donate to Arts Festival auction

The TV series "Spenser: For Hire" and the Boston Symphony Orchestra are among the culturally diverse organizations and businesses which have already donated items and services for the Winchester Arts Festival auction Saturday, Oct. 18.

The auction will begin at 10 a.m. at the town hall and should end by noon, said recreation department organizer Ellen Knight. Proceeds will benefit the recreation department's new community arts program, including concerts, arts festivals, summer theater and winter music festivals.

Donations made to the Winchester Arts Association will also be auctioned at the same time with proceeds from them to benefit the association's programs and activities, including art scholarships, lectures and gallery maintenance.

Free literature about various arts orgnizations and events will also be available during the Oct. 18 auction.

Others who have already donated to the auction include the Museum of Fine Arts, Northeastern Records, Winchester Wine & Spirits, Henderson's Stationers, TSV Video, Maximilian's Restaurant, the Dover Grille, Temptations, Black Horse Bootery, Kean's Flowers, Karen's Embroidery, La Patisserie, Davis Fine Foods, Lucky Lady, Sassy Cissie II, Fells Hardware, Focus First, Beehive of Knots, Topsy Turvy, the Daisy Shop and the Winchester Players.

Individual donations have come from Yo-Yo Ma, T.J. Anderson, Arthur Griffin and Nadine Suhrbier.

More donations are welcome. Contact the recreation department at 721-7125 for more information.

Ellen Knight, auction organizer, and Wally Gagal, auctioneer, examine treasures to be offered at the Oct. 18 auction at the town hall. Knight is holding an autographed album donated by Winchester resident and internationally famed cellist Yo-Yo Ma. Proceeds will benefit the community arts program of the Winchester recreation department. (Wes Schmale photo)

NOVENA TO MARY, QUEEN OF HEARTS

O Mary, Queen of All Hearts, Advocate of the most hopeless cases, Mother most pure, most compassionate, Mother of Divine Love, full of divine light, we confide to your care the favors which we ask of you today.

Consider our misery, our tears, our interior trials and sufferings! We know that you can help us through the merits of your Divine Son, Jesus. We promise, if our prayers are heard, to spread your glory, by making you known under the title of MARY, QUEEN OF ALL HEARTS, Queen of the Universe.

Grant, we beseech you, hear our prayers, for every day you give us so many proofs of your love and your power of intercession to heal both body and soul.

We hope against all hope. Ask Jesus to cure us, pardon us, and grant us final perseverance.

O Mary, Queen of All Hearts, help us, we have confidence in you. (3 times.)

Train station art, concerts win grants

The Winchester Arts Lottery Council has awarded three local organizations grants totaling $2,400 through the Massachusetts State Arts Lottery program.

J.C. Lynch was awarded funding to paint a series of sequential life size figures on the walls along the Wedgemere train station. Included in request was her commitment to provide one year of maintenance.

The Winchester Public Library received support for the series of concerts it has planned for the coming year.

The Winchester recreation department was granted monies for the series of summer open-air concerts held this past summer.

The deadline for consideration in the Winchester Arts Lottery Council's next award cycle is Friday, Oct. 10.

Any Winchester resident interested in serving on the Winchester Arts Lottery Council is asked to submit a letter of application to the board of selectmen.

Carol Davidson, chairperson, may be contacted for additional information at 729-3292.

Three artists exhibit at Art Association

The exhibit currently on display at the Winchester Art Association Gallery once again combines the recent work of three area artists. The oil paintings of Frank Barnes, serigraphy of Brother Edward Rice, and color photographs of Faith Waltman will be shown until Oct. 9.

"While our media are very different, our subject and the way we treat them are very similar. This produces interesting contrasts in an overall harmony when we show together," said Waltman.

In their land and seascapes, Barnes and Rice are heavily influenced by Cape Ann and northern New England. Waltman frequently concentrates on the people and places of Martha's Vineyard.

The gallery is located at 585A Main St., Winchester Center. Hours are noon to 4 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday, and by special arrangement.

Trip to King Richard's planned

As part of the Winchester Arts Festival next month, the recreation department is organizing a group trip to King Richard's Faire in South Carver.

Participants will enjoy threatre, music, dance, food and other entertainment. Transportation and discount tickets will be provided by the recreation department.

People can sign up now by calling the recreation department at 721-7125 or the youth center at 721-7129.

Merchants Corner

Main St. Optical offers years of experience

Although his shop may be new to Winchester, owner/proprietor Dana Cohen is certainly no newcomer to the optical field, having taking over Medford Optical more than ten years ago.

Along with his years of experience, Cohen an optician brings to Winchester an optical shop that offers the ultimate in convenience. In addition to ample free parking right at the front door, Main St. Optical located at 600 Main St., has full lab facilities right on the premises. This enables them to offer complete eye examinations to their customers and to fill the customers' prescriptions for glasses and/or contact lenses.

Same day service is available and prescriptions for bifocals can be filled in three days if necessary, while most optical shops take several weeks.

Five years ago, Dana was joined by his father Frederick Cohen, and optometrist, who now shares the duties at the new Winchester location. Frederick is a contact lens specialist and offers all types of contacts including extended-wear-lenses.

The fee for-extended-wear-lenses includes an intitial eye examination and covers contact lense check-ups for one year.

Main St. Optical also stocks an extensive variety of eyeglass frames ranging in price from $30-$159. These include many designer frames including a wide assortment of Tura frames. All eyeglass frames are competitively priced and Dana encourages browsing in his shop with personalized service, but a no pressure atmosphere.

Whether it is for eye examinations, contact lenses, frames, or to fill a prescription from another establishment, Main St. Optical offers you many years of experience along with front-door parking and same-day-service if necessary.

Visit Main St. Optical for trusted service in eye care. Or call for an appointment at 729-8859. They are open Monday through Friday, 9-5:30, Saturday, 9-3.

State treasurer has unclaimed funds for Winchester people

State Treasurer Robert Q. Crane is attempting to return more than $2 million to 18,000 Massachusetts residents under the state's Unclaimed Money Law.

Crane said this money has been reported to the treasury by insurance companies doing business within Massachusetts. Included in the proceeds are unpaid benefits on health and liability insurance policies, unpaid life insurance benefits, customer overpayments and pension checks.

Under Massachusetts' Unclaimed Money Law (M.G.L. ch. 200A), accounts which have been dormant for at least five years are deemed to be abandoned and must be reported to the treasury. The treasury department then tries to locate the rightful owner or legal heirs to return the money.

"We are encouraged by the increase in compliance. Nevertheless, our efforts will continue until every dollar is returned," Crane said.

More than 6,000 accounts range $100 to $500; 347 accounts between $500 and $1,000; 175 accounts between $1,000 and $5,000; 11 accounts between $5,000 and $10,000 and 10 accounts more than $10,000. The remaining accounts are less than $100.

last spring, Crane released the names of 26,000 Massachusetts residents who were owed more than $13 million, most from unclaimed savings accounts.

Anyone who believes he or she may have a valid claim should call the Treasurer's Office at 367-7780 or toll free 1-800-632-8027.

Persons with Winchester addresses for whom Crane's office is holding money include:

Thomas Bates Jr., Jean Bellons, Alcide Blanchette, Paul Cincotta, Richard Debourke, Leo Dionne, John Dixon, Alfred Doucette;

Burt Eldridge, Ellen Fenoglio, Mary Fenoglio, Elizabeth Finch, John Fitzgerald, Robert Gates, Bertram Goldstone, Hildreth Hill;

Elisabeth Jackson, William Johnson, Neil Kerrigan, Jay Levinthal, John Lynch Jr., Dan Mahoney Jr., Donna Manganaro, Joseph Marino;

Vincent O'Reilly, Lawrence Quigley Jr., Robert and Ann Reinhagen, Cedric and Cedric Robinson, Ronald Salter, Carl Schwartzman, Michael Sheskey, Keith Slinn, Hidetsugu Tanae and Francis Tempesta.

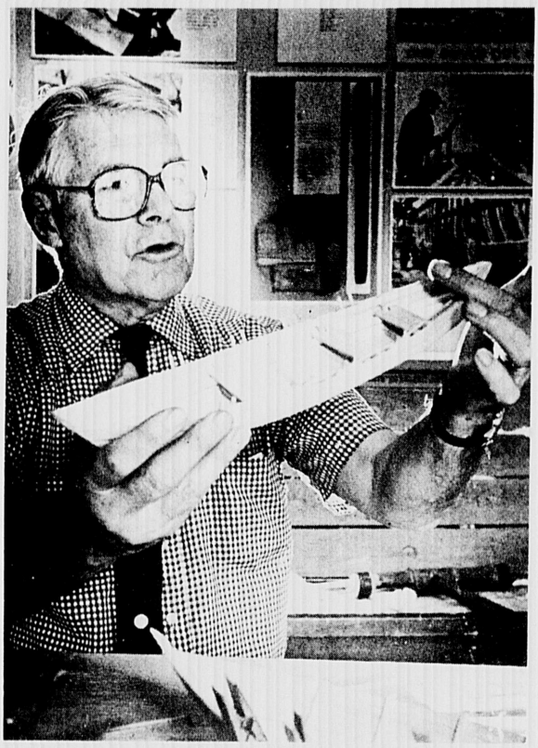
What To Visit



At left, top down: Jack Farrell eyes a model as he explains the reasons behind the Gloucester Fishermen's Museum; stuffed fish and models are exposed for close examination. Below, Farrell rescued all sorts of relics for the museum, including the companion statue for the famous Gloucester fisherman, informally called Tribute to the Wives of Gloucester Fishermen.

Treasure-hunt Gloucester's of

In many ways the Gloucester Fishermen's Museum is a museum in the making — a diamond in the rough.

Inside the building that was once a Sears Roebuck garage lie both the rare finds and the mundane objects of fishing — Gloucester's life blood for over 350 years.

Statues by Leonard Craske, sculptor of the famous Gloucester Fisherman, are displayed along with foghorns, mounted sealife, huge tuna skulls, rusted flashlights salvaged from the ocean floor, weatherbeaten fishing gear, model fishing boats made by local residents, calcified whalebones and other odd bits of the fishing industry which probably drifted in with the tide.

"We call this the Fishermen's Haul of Fame," said executive director Jack Farrell, "because everything we have here was literally hauled out of barns, attics, fishnets, what have you. People from all over have given us things. Nearly everything has been donated."

Farrell, an industrial designer, began the museum seven years ago with donated objects.

"The response was tremendous," said his assistant Jean Pena. "People still bring in things."

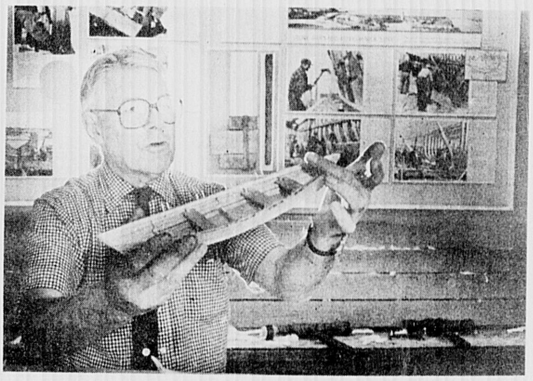
Little is tucked away in glass cases; nearly everything is displayed to be tried and touched.

Upon entering the museum, children are given a show-and-tell kit, in which to collect shells, pamphlets, bits of fishnet, scraps of cotton caulking and other souvenirs of their visit.

"Giving them things to do helps the kids become integrated with the museum," said Farrell.

There is almost as much to do as there is to view: kids love to blow the dory and schooner foghorns, wind and unwind the mile-long dory fishing line with its 400 hooks, plane a ship plank with 100-year-old shipwright tools, haul weights with different pulleys on a block and tackle, caulk a ship's oak siding with cotton batting and much more.

Usually there is some freshly made salted cod available for those who wish to taste what was once the nation's main export.



Fishing, of course, was messy business — as the fishermen's clothing shows.

On view is one weather-beaten oilskin jacket, which was made of cotton canvas dipped in linseed oil for waterproofing.

"Since the cloth was so stiff," Pena explained, "Fishermen had to wear what were called 'wristers' to protect their wrists from being cut by the jacket cuffs as they rowed their dories.

"On top of the wristers, they wore wool mittens, which were all-important to protect their hands from frostbite."

"When these were new," she said, holding up a pair of ecru-colored mitts, "they were boiled in saltwater for five to six hours. Then, the fisherman would season them by cleaning a fish and rubbing his mittens in the fish entrails."

One of Gloucester's local sea heroes, Howard Blackburn, tragically lost his mittens while bailing out his dory during a storm in which he and dorymate Thomas Welch were lost at sea.

"When Blackburn lost his mittens," Pena said, "he knew that his hands were going to be frostbitten, so he clamped his fingers around the oars and rowed for four days to safety."

Although Welch died of exposure during the treacherous trip to the Newfoundland coast, Blackburn arrived alive, with two blocks of ice for feet and his fingers frozen stiff around his oars.

Although he lost his fingers and toes due to frostbite, he returned home and started the successful and popular Blackburn Tavern.

Years later, Blackburn rigged a light sailing dory that he could operate, crossed the Atlantic alone with a pet dog, and sailed up the Seine to attend the Paris Exposition.

through 'Haul Fame'

Last spring, over 8,000 school children took part in one of the many school programs offered by the Fishermen's Museum.

The Marlinspike Seamanship Workshop, which the museum makes available to schools, includes workshops that are taught in the school classroom during the winter, followed by a schooner cruise on the Norfolk Rover in the spring.

The cost of the school program is $12 per student.

The museum displays pictures of Blackburn and a damaged sculpture which Craske created in tribute to him.

Another colorful saga in the annuals of the community's fishing history was the sighting of Gloucester's sea serpent in 1817.

"Some 5000 people claimed to have seen the sea serpent," said Pena."

The Gloucester sea serpent sightings of August 1817 were highly documented by local and North Shore citizens, scientists, naturalists and other renowned experts of the times.

For two weeks, according to contemporary accounts, the 50- to 100-foot creature swam around Gloucester Harbor, apparently pursuing a school of herring.

Although scores of boats, including whalers from Nantucket, came out to hunt the elusive creature, none succeeded, and no material evidence was ever brought ashore.

Children especially love to hear about the sea serpent, and kid's drawings of the creature line the entrance wall.

Gloucester, America's oldest seaport, was first populated in 1603. Pilgrims from Plymouth settled the area and built the first fishing stage at what is now Stage Fort Park, on Western Avenue. Old pictures at the museum show vast trays of seasalted codfish drying in the sun.

The town estimates that over 10,000 local fishermen were lost at sea while earning their living over the past three centuries. The famous Fisherman Statue on Stacy Boulevard, created by Leonard Flaske for the town 300th anniversary in 1925, was erected as a permanent memorial to fishermen lost at sea.

But the artist had created a second statue to stand with the fisherman: a statue of a woman, babe in arms, informally called In Tribute to the Wives of Gloucester Fisherman.

"Then, as today, in many cases, while the husband's away at sea, the wife takes care of the business end of things on land," Pena said.

"Although the artist intended this statue to go with the other, the townspeople in 1925 didn't want it put up.

"So, until two years ago, this statue was sitting in the Gloucester Fishermen's Institute basement.

"Right now," she added, "there are women in the community working to have this statue set up with the other one.

A small theater shows films about the seafaring life.

Features include scenes of a doryman's life from the movie Captain Courageous; a National Geographic profile, Portrait of a Fisherman, which shows the life of the Sanfilippos, a Gloucester fishing family; a voyage of a 72-foot dragger, Debbie Rose, and whale-watching.

The museum is not confined to its mere 2500 square feet of exhibition space.

The Fishermen's Museum offers a three-hour schooner adventure from 1:30 to 4:30 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Reservations are a must for the schooner trip, which costs $17 for adults; $10 for children 12 and under, and requires a minimun of 15 people to sail.

The Gloucester Fishermen's Museum is open 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. weekdays and Saturday; 1 to 4 p.m. Sunday. General admission is $2 adults, $1 children, $1.75 seniors, $5.50 for families, and free for mariners.

The museum is on the waterfront, at the corner of Rogers and Porter streets. For more information, call (617) 283-1940.

What To Learn

Acupuncture aids pain ailments and

It can happen to anyone at anytime — muscle aches, chills, fever, and other nasty flu-like symptoms that debilitate and devastate usually hearty beings.

Medicine cabinets are invaded for speedy relief, tea with lemon and honey is brewed, and plans for the day are put aside.

Yet the illness continues. It's time to call the doctor.

Or is it?

Growing numbers of sensible folk are calling, instead, their local acupuncturist.

Today's acupuncture advocates join millions — yes, millions — of patients who have enjoyed the effects of acupuncture throughout four centuries, says Shiva Barton, a naturopathic physician whose practice is located in Arlington.

Acupuncture, more than a medical import from China, has a history of healing which stretches back in time to the Shang Dynasty of 1766 to 1154 B.C.

Dependable warrior

It is respected as a dependable warrior against a host of physical and mental ills, and most recently, has appeared as an anesthesia for such critical operations as open heart surgery.

Simply put, the practice of acupuncture involves the insertion of fine steel needles — each the width of a human hair — at specific body points.

Thousands of body points exist, each with a specific affiliation to dozens of conditions.

Treatments last 20 minutes or longer and may occur only once or take place several times each week for extended periods of time.

Does it work?

But does it work, asks the traditional patient?

In most cases, yes, says Barton.

One woman arrived at Barton's office with a history of headaches — every day of her life for the past 30 years.

A combined plan of acupuncture treatments and nutritional guidance decreased the severity and frequency of these headaches, says Barton.

"It is outrageous to me that she had to suffer so much for so long," he says.

"I think certain problems — arthritis, hypertension, headaches — are curable diseases in most cases. We can reverse the conditions."

Barton describes his practice of medicine as "holistic," focusing on the people and lifestyles beyond physical pains.

He also admits to being viewed, along with fellow practioners of traditional Chinese medicine (TCM) as the "poor cousin" to modern Western medical doctors.

People arrive at acupuncture, he says, when they are at "the end of their medical rope."

"Desperation sends alot of people to so-called 'quacks,'" he says, adding that for him, the practice of acupuncture and TCM makes sense.

"There is no high medical status. The financial rewards are not as readily available as those medical doctors receive.

"But all you need to do is to treat one person that Western medicine couldn't help. That's the reward," Barton says.

Varied symptoms

Many patients seek treatment of arthritis, allergies, lower back pain, injuries or menstrual disorders.

Some patients view acupuncture as an aid to facial wrinkle removal, weight control, and stop-smoking campaigns.

Others arrive at acupuncture seeking answers to more chronic conditions, including heart disease, hypertension, diabetes, gastritis, asthma, hepatatis, sexual dysfunction and certain types of mental disorders.

An initial interview with an acupuncture practioner resembles a visit with a medical doctor, yet it includes some unusual twists and techniques.

For example, acupuncture points throughout the body may be palpated to find or confirm problem areas.

Examination of the ears provides further diagnosis of other parts of the body.

The tongue, checked for size, color, shape, texture and coating, confirms the internal climate of the body.

An unusual aspect of TCM diagnosis is the use of the radial, or wrist, pulse. According to TCM, six different wrist pulses exist, each with a specific location and depth.

Organ windows

These pulses are considered "windows" to different organs in the body and, through listening to the quality of each pulse, the practioner may diagnose the workings of each major organ in the body.

Some practitioners can even determine the patient's complete health history from pulse "listening," including types of diseases experienced in childhood.

The acupuncture plan is a personal one.

The physical evaluation and information by the patient leads the practioner to prescribe a specific program of acupuncture treatments, often accompanied by herbal remedies and a prescribed nutritional program.

The treatment for arthritis, for example, depends not so much on its results, but on its causes, says Barton.

Does the arthritis occur when it rains? In the hanging hot days or summer? Or during winter's cold and snowy blasts?

Treatment, whether for "hot," "damp," or "cold" arthritis differs in the placement and temperature of the acupuncture needles.

For sufferers of cold weather arthritis, heated needles may be used. An herb — moxa or mugwort — may be placed on the head of the needle and lit, producing a warm, pleasing sensation in the affected area.

Warm herbal drinks further facilitate the healing process.

Wanna quit?

Smoking — or the desire to kick the habit — bring many people to acupuncture. A common treatment in the war against the weed features an ear tack, which is taped to the back of the ear.

When the urge to smoke appears, the reforming smoker is advised to take deep breaths and press the ear tack.

Endorphins, the brain's own pain-killers, are then released, relieving the urge to smoke.

What To Learn

Want to learn? Local school offers classes

Want to become an acupuncturist?

The New England School of Acupuncture, 319 Arlington St., Watertown, offers a two-year, full- or part-time program.

Students take 14 class-hours per week plus clinical internships. During the program, students learn traditional Oriental medical theory, point location, acupuncture pathology, and they survey western medical sciences.

"We want students to become thoroughly familiar with western medicine teachings and the language, so they can interface better with western medical procedures," said Richard Feit, New England School of Acupuncture director.

Ideally, school applicants should have a B.A. degree, with a year of biology, psychology or sociology.

About 40 students enroll each year.

"We get a wide variety of people," said Feit, "including a lot of nurses and physical therapists."

Many physicians, he noted, have also enrolled in the school. Conversely, a small percentage of the school's graduates do go on to study western medicine at a medical school.

In order to practice acupuncture, students must graduate and pass a licensing exam required by the state of Massachusetts.

Currently, Feit says, there are no accredited acupuncture schools in the United States, "but we're working on accreditation."

Tuition to the New England School of Acupuncture is $4200 per year, and new classes begin Sept. 6.

For more information, call the school at 926-1788.

What's it like?

Acupuncture was a new experience for Cheryl Wold when she first saw Shiva Barton for her asthma condition last November.

"I had gone to see my regular doctor, who had wanted me to start on the inhaler," Wold explained. "I wasn't too excited about that, so I decided to pursue (acupuncture)."

After getting the go-ahead from her physician, Wold began going to Barton for treatment.

"Basically, I was a little nervous about the first visit; I wasn't sure if he was going to stick the needles in then or what."

During the first visit, however, Barton gave her guidance on diet, stress-management, and made an assessment of her overall condition.

"He spent a lot of time explaining how things relate — that's one thing that made me feel at ease — he really spent a lot of time assessing the situation, and it made me feel like he really understood.

Wold's three acupuncture treatments began with her next visit.

"The treatments take about 40 minutes," said Wold. "It doesn't hurt, though, that's important to say.

"At the beginning of each exam, he would ask a lot of questions, look at my tongue, and take my pulse. And then the treatment would begin. He told me ahead of time where he was going to put the needles and, after pressing with his fingers to find each point, he would stick about eight to 10 needles in different points.

"Then I would be lying down, relaxing, about 20 mintes," Wold continued, "until he removed them."

"I felt a lot better after two treatments," she added. "Not only would I go (for acupuncture) again, but I would recommend it for other people."

Tintypes: a hit

Tintypes is a musical celebration

REVIEW

Tintypes, at the American Stage Festival through Sept. 28, represents a homecoming, for in Milford, N.H., in 1978, the musical revue, under the banner of Bandstand, was born.

Inspired by the quaint little bandstand that still stands in the village oval and the Sunday concerts held there — a major social event in days of yore — Tintypes spans musically the sweet innocence from the mid-1800s to the first World War, paralleling the changes taking place in the country. The show moved on to New York, received a new name, was gussied up, received national acclaim, and the rest is history.

Tintypes is a musical celebration of close to 50 tunes best described as a kaleidoscope of Americana and the music of the American dream. It is ragtime melded with blues and spirituals, all of which spawned jazz during that neglected half-century between the Civil War and the Roaring Twenties — the people, the music, the stars, the mood — one of the most tumultuous eras in American history.

It is about the explosive growth in America's population, which doubled during that period, one-third immigrants. It's about the filthy rich and the desperately poor and the sowing of seeds for labor unions, Socialism and anarchy.

The transcontinental railroad and Carnegie Hall were constructed, roller-skating became the vogue, and politicians William Jennings Bryan and Theodore Roosevelt gave Wall Street heart palpitations.

During the show, when McKinley's death thrusts Roosevelt into the White House, he denounces the assassination, adding, "But if there's one thing worse, it's being morbid!"

Tintypes takes place in the melting pot that was New York City at the turn of the century.

The opening mime, David Cantor, presents a typical immigrant, complete with battered cap, tattered knapsack, and ill-fitting clothes — a sort of Yiddish Charlie Chaplin — and exposes him to a small group of American prototypes.

There's an elegant "swell" (William Linton) who flips the "greenhorn" a coin and later turns into a toothy, bespectacled "T.R." A society matron (Darlene Bel Grayson) becomes chanteuse Anna Held. A black woman (Betsy Joslyn) whose skin color puzzles the newcomer evolves into the upward-mobility hired girl of the period. And a female drifter (Joanne Borts) transforms into the radical Emma Goldman.

Many composers are singled out — George M. Cohan, John Philip Sousa, Gus Edwards, Victor Herbert, Bert Williams and Scott Joplin among them. A host of old favorites are rendered ranging from traditional songs and the Virginia Minstrels, to I'll Take You Home Again, Kathleen (1876) and Smiles (1918). The music and lyrics embody humor and innocence, sentiment and emotion.

ASF's mounting of Tintypes is notable and the contributions of musical director and piano accompanist Barry Koron are outstanding.

Audience pleasers included Stars and Stripes Forever and In My Merry Oldsmobile, both nicely staged by director Pamela Hunt and If I Were On The Stage (Kiss Me Again). Others included Nobody, a fine rendition by Joslyn, Then I'd Be Satisfied With Life, Bort's touching Jonah Man, the musical chairs antics of When It's All Goin' Out And Nothin' Comin' In, the fun routine by Linton in Teddy Da Roose, and the lovely Toyland by Bel Grayson.

Tintypes moves to Palace Theatre

When the curtain goes down in Milford on the American Stage Festival's Tintypes, three days later the curtain goes up for 12 more performances at the palace Theatre in Manchester, N.H.

Tintypes opens at the Palace Theatre on Wednesday, Sept. 24, and plays through Oct. 5 Performances are 8 p.m. Wednesday through Saturday, and matinees at 2 p.m. Saturday and Sunday afternoons.

Tickets may be reserved in advance by calling the ASF box office at (603) 673-7515, or in New Hampshire 1-800-233-8001.

New drama opens Huntington's fifth season

August Wilson's moving new drama, Joe Turner's Come and Gone, opens Wednesday, Oct. 1, as the first offering of the Huntington Theatre Company's fifth anniversary season.

Directed by Lloyd Richards, the Huntington production will be the second professional staging of this compelling drama, hailed by the New York Times as "hypnotic...a teeming canvas of black America" in its premiere in May at the Yale Repertory Theatre in Conn.

The show previews Sept. 27, 28, and 30., opens Oct. 1, and will run through Oct. 19.

Set in 1911, the powerful drama concerns the black experience in the early 20th century America.

The play focuses on Herald Loomis, a Tennessee laborer and church deacon, who has finally escaped Joe Turner's bonds and come north, determined to track down the wife he lost during seven years of illegal bondage.

In a Pittsburgh boarding house, he discovers a group of people who are also searching from their spiritual connection with a heritage lost during the long years of slavery and finally relearns the song buried deep within his own heart.

Richards, who also directed the show's premiere, worked with August Wilson on "Ma Rainey's Black Bottom," directing the premiere at Yale and the Broadway production that led to New York Drama Critics' Circle Award and Tony Award nominations in 1985.

Wilson began writing as a poet and has been published in numerous magazines and anthologies including Black Poets of the Twentieth Century. He began to write for the theatre in the late '70's, and has since completed seven plays. Wilson is an Associate Playwright with the Playwright's Center in Minneapolis and a member of New Dramatists in New York. He was recently awarded a Guggenheim Fellowship for Playwriting.

Trinity opens new season

Friederich Duerrenmatt's powerful tragicomedy, The Visit, opens the 1986-87 season for Trinity Repertory Company on Friday, Sept. 26 and will continue through Oct. 26.

The production will be directed by Adrian Hall, with production design by Eugene Lee. Light design is by John F. Custer and costume design by William Lane.

In The Visit, the great Swiss playwright Duerrenmatt makes full use of the modern stage to explore our deepest secrets and to entertain with unexpected irony and humor.

The story centers around the wealthiest women in the world who returns to the imroverished village of her youth with a bargain born of vengeance—millions of dollars in return for the death of the lover who abandoned her.

The cast includes company members James Carruthers, William Damkoehler, Richard Ferrone, Peter Gerety, David C. Jones, David Kennett, Richard Kneeland, Becca Lish, Howard London, Mina Manente, Brian McEleney, Barbara Meek, Nicolas Mize, Andrew Mutnik, Richard Oberlin, David PB Stephens, and Daniel Von Bargen, as well as Michael Cobb, Janice Duclose, Steven Jermanovich, Stella Reed, and Dan Welch.

Trinity also begins its 23rd season and the ninth year of its award-winning Humanities Program, The Dramatic Work as a Historical, Cultural Document, with The Visit. The Humanities Program provides the public with essays and post-performance discussions led by area scholars in conjunction with their eight-play subscription series.

For the Humanities Program, Dr. Rosalind Ekmann Ladd, Professor of Philosophy at Wheaton College, has written The Search for Justice, exploring this perennial philosophical quest from the view of several world philosophers both classic and modern.

In The Classics Re-Visited: Duerrenmatt's The Visit, Dr. S. Georgia Nugent, Assistant Professor of Classics at Brown University, examines the influence of classic drama and literature on The Visit. She also explores the theme of "the scapegoat" and its universal appearance throughout classic literary tradition.

Post-performance discussions are slated for: Sunday, Oct. 5, after the 2 p.m. matinee, by S.G. Nugent; Thursday, Oct. 9, after the 8 p.m. performance, by S.G. Nugent; Saturday, Oct. 11, after the 2 p.m. matinee, by Rosalind Ladd; and Wednesday, Oct. 15, after the 2

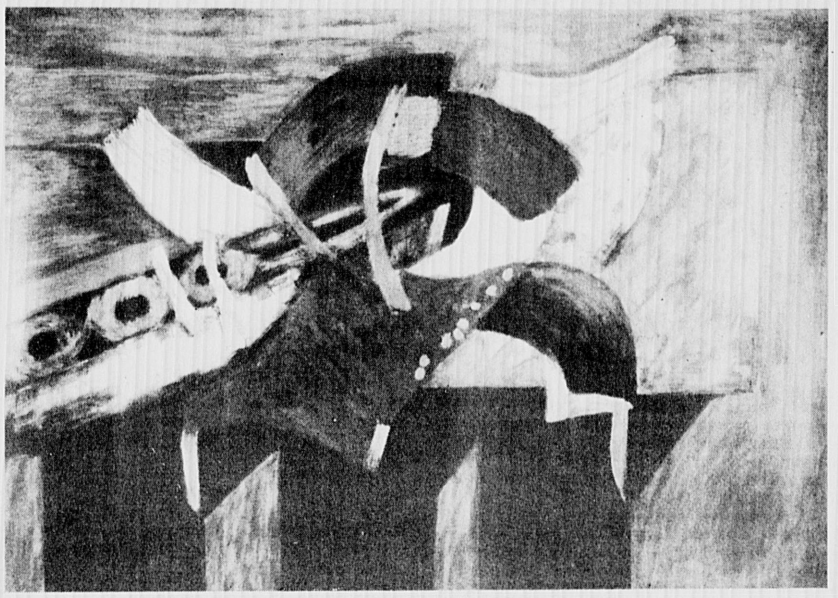
What About Art? By Meredith Fife Day



Fernando de Szyszlo's silkscreen, Untitled, is one of the works on display in the Peruvian artist's solo exhibition opening the fall season at Aleman Galleries.

New art shows this fall

Aleman Galleries, formerly Artconsult International, the Boston area's only private art gallery devoted to the work of Latin American artists, begins the fall season with the exhibition, Fernando de Szyszlo: Recent Works.

Szyszlo is recognized as one of the foremost exponents of abstractionism to emerge from Latin America during the 1950s. His style is often referred to as "abstract nativism," because of the combination in his work of the Western tradition of abstraction with the indigenous pre-Hispanic heritage of his native Peru.

Visual allusions to the landscape, formal references to Cubism and the eminent Latin American painter Rufino Tamayo, along with the literary focusing on indigenous themes, mark the acrylics on canvas, tapestries and works on paper by Szyszlo.

The exhibit may be viewed through Oct. 18. The gallery, at 30 Newbury St., Boston, is open 10:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and by appointment. Contact Carmen Aleman or Ricardo Barreto, 536-5978.

What To Do

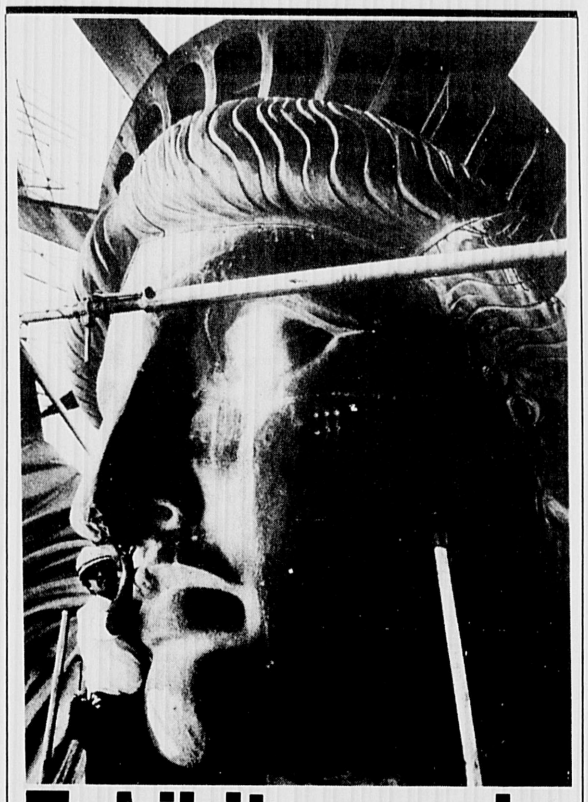

Exhibit reveals statue's history

Boston may not have Ellis Island, but it does have a bit of the Statue of Liberty in the new, traveling exhibit, Liberty: The French-American Statue in Art and History, opened Sept. 11 at the Boston Public Library.

The 100-year-old statue, called the "most special gift ever given by one country by another," occupies a special place in the hearts of both Americans and the French. Rarely has an artwork had such a social and historical impact on society.

This exhibition of more than 120 items explores major episodes in the statue's complex development as a symbol of liberty — an icon for all who immigrated to America — and as an important symbol of French-American friendship.

Among the photographs, models and watercolors on display is a watercolor original of the statue by the sculptor Frederic-Auguste Bartholdi.

There are drawings which trace the progress of the nine years that the statue was in the making. Other drawings examine the unprecedented technological challenges that were faced by engineers Viollet-le-Duc and Gustave Eiffel at the time.

One of the most dramatic pieces in the exhibit is a 6 ½-foot copper-plated finger which sculptor Bartholdi put on display for Paris audiences in 1878. The finger served to dramatize the colossal dimensions of Bartholdi's project and was used to raise money so the statue could be completed.

The Statue of Liberty was not Bartholdi's sole artistic contribution to the United States. Another of his well-known works is the frieze on the tower of Boston's First Baptist Church, 110 Commonwealth Ave.

Liberty was organized by the New York Public Library and the Official French-American Committee for the Celebration of the Centennial of the Statue of Liberty. It was jointly funded by five French and American corporations: Air France, Christian Dior, the French Committee for the International Expanse of Paris La Defense, Galeries LaFayette and Lazard Freres & Co.

After leaving Boston, 'Liberty' travels to Austin, Texas and eight other American cities before closing in December.

The exhibition is on view through Oct. 18 in the Boston Public Library, McKim Building, Research Library, in Copley Square.

For information about the exhibit and related special events, call 536-5400.

Statue stars in these films

In conjunction with the 'Liberty' exhibit, the Boston Public Library presents Co-starring Miss Liberty, a free film program in which the Statue of Liberty appears in a cameo role or serves as background to the film's plot.

The series begins Sept. 17 with the films, The Statue of Liberty, an Academy Award nominee directed by New Englander Ken Burns, and a documentary, We All Came To America.

Saboteur, Alfred Hitchcock's 1942 World War II thriller, shows Sept. 22.

The series continues at 6:30 p.m. Mondays with the following offerings: Park Row, Sept. 29; Funny Girl, Oct. 6; Escape From New York, Oct. 20; and Reno Williams — The Adventure Begins, Oct. 27.

Films are presented in the Rabb Lecture Hall, Boston Public Library, Copley Square.

What's For Seniors

Ills of elderly

Q. What diseases prey on the elderly? I see lots of United Way and other ads which show senior citizens as terribly ill. I am 62 and worry about my future years.

A. First — don't assume you'll have any illness, for you needn't have any if you work on preventive health care. Doctors finally are discovering preventive medicine and the value of nutrition and exercise. If your doctor cannot counsel you on positive nutrition and exercise, find another who can. It is what you do with your body that determines whether it is susceptible to disease and infirmities.

A Japanese study, reported in Prevention magazine, found that people who ate vegetables every day had a decreased risk of developing lung, stomach and other cancers. The 20-year ongoing study also indicates that the damage done by bad habits like smoking and spurning vegetables is reversible.

"A Harvard University study of 1,200 elderly people," states Prevention, "found that those who reported the highest consumption of carrots, squash, tomatoes, salads or leafy greens, dried fruits, fresh strawberries or melon, broccoli or brussels sprouts had a decreased risk of cancer."

The assumption that a senior citizen has to be in ill health is a myth, a cruel fraud.

An encore performance at Lyric Stage

Last year's critically-acclaimed production of C.P. Taylor's And A Nightingale Sang returns to the Lyric Stage for a four-week run, continuing through Oct. 12.

The show is a hilarious, sometimes bittersweet, but always charming play that follows a British working-class family through the years of World War II.

A somewhat daft grandfather, a mother given to wonderfully funny flights of religious hysteria and a shy but wise elder daughter comprise some of this loving and delightful family.

Through his clever use of songs of the period, Taylor makes And A Nightingale Sang a valentine to the homefront families that struggled and triumphed during a half decade of continuing crisis.

Following its Boston engagement, And A Nightingale Sang joins the Baltimore Theatre Project's World Theatre Season for a four-week run as the only American production invited to this prestigious international theatre festival.

Through the radiant performances of a professional cast led by Sandra Shipley's exhiliarating portrayal of the eldest daughter, this show was hailed the critics as one of the ten best of 1985.

Performance times are 8 p.m. Wednesday through Friday, 5 and 8:30 p.m. Saturday, and 3 p.m. Sundays.

Tickets range from $9-12 depending on the day, and may be reserved by calling 742-8703, or charge tickets by calling 497-1118. Special discounts are available for students, seniors, groups and war veterans.

The Lyric Stage Theatre on the Hill is located at 54 Charles St. in Boston.

Flames lights up Triangle's season

The Triangle Theater Company presents the world premiere of a new musical comedy, The Flames, to open their eighth season. The show begins at 8 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 25 and continues through Oct. 18. Thursdays through Saturdays, at the Paramount Penthouse Theater, 58 Berkely St., in Boston's South End.

Directed by Triangle's artistic director and founder, David M. Hough, with David Testa serving as musical director, the show has a book by Jeff Black and John Michael Barrett, with music and lyrics by Barrett, and additional music and lyrics by Cheryl Hoenemeyer.

Black is noted for his serialized comedy soap opera Passion Fruit, which appeared in Bay Windows. He's also the author of the critically acclaimed novel Extra Credit.

Ms. Hoenemeyer is credited with the music for Triangle's 1981 production of Nice Habits.

The action centers on a show-biz sister act. Some want to dissolve the act, while the central characters, Morganna and Glorianna, want to remain on the stage and are forced by circumstance and a lucrative will to make a comeback. They dig into the past, unearthing old friends, old lovers, and an old scandal along the way.

All seats are $10 and will be available at the door. For information or reservations, call the box office at 353-0434.

Carnival! is at Goodspeed Opera House

The family musical hit Carnival! brings the dazzle and enchantment of circus life to the stage of the Goodspeed Opera House in East Haddam (CT) beginning Wednesday, Oct. 1.

Originally produced by David Merrick in 1961 on Broadway, where it ran for 21 months, Carnival! is the third French-flavored musical of Goodspeed's 1986 season.

Love Makes The World Go Round is just one of the highlights of the CARNIVAL! score, written by Bob Merrill, who also composed the score for Goodspeed's 1984 smash hit TAKE ME ALONG. Michael Stewart, librettist of BYE BYE BIRDIE, wrote the book for CARNIVAL!, the romantic tale of a French waif who falls in love with a circus troupe touring the provinces.

Curtain times are at 8 p.m. Tuesday through Friday; 5 and 9 p.m. Saturday and 2:30 p.m. Wednesday matinee. For tickets call the Goodspeed box office at (203) 873-8668.

Citystep Dance celebrates urban life

Citystep Dance Theater performs a full-length show about the vitality of urban life Thursday through Sunday, Sept. 25-28, at the Boston Shakespeare Company Theatre, 52 St. Botolph St.

Citystep is a witty, poignant look at ten characters in the city who desperately seek self-definition in a world of unpredictable complexities. Funny and direct, Citystep beats to the pulse, pace and pressure of urban life.

The show is directed by innovative Harvard choreographer Sabrina T. Peck. For the past three years, Ms. Peck has led teams of area performers into the Cambridge public schools to teach and inspire children about dance and drama.

Three years ago, Peck directed a version of Citystep at Sanders Theatre and it proved so successful that it went on to a sellout at the Loeb Mainstage as part of the American Repertory Theatre's Monday Night Series.

All music for the show is original, composed by Boston musicians Don Braden, Adam Gorgoni, Brooks Whitehouse, and Norman Yamada.

Thursday through Saturday performances are at 8 p.m. and Sunday at 2 p.m.

Tickets are $8 for the general public and $6 for students, and are available at the BSC box office (617) 267-5600, Chargetix (542-8511) or at Bostix. Senior citizen and theater group discounts are available by calling John Lesher at 661-1166.

The Muir String Quartet, winners of numerous prizes, most recently the Grand Prix de l'Academie du Disque Francaise Musique de Chambre, are well-known throughout the United States and Europe, not only for their performances and recordings but for their exciting master classes at B.U.'s School of Music and at the B.U. Tanglewood Institute.

Acupuncture gains local following

(From page 5)

Common sense joins the anti-smoking campaign. The patients is advised to drink plenty of liquids and eat sensibly.

An herbal tincture, made from lobelia, a plant noted for its supposed nicotine-like substance, may also be prescribed.

Through the centuries, TCM practioners have identified thousands of medicinal substances of herbal, animal or mineral origin, which can battle an army of ailments.

Patients can brew up packets of herbal creations or pop the prescribed potion in pill form.

Farsighted entrepreneurs have even created freeze-dried herbal prescriptions.

Barton says the sale of ancient herbal remedies today represents a worldwide business of approximately seven billion dollars.

He views the practice of acupuncture and TCM as appropriate companions to more traditional and hi-tech medicine.

Specifically he applauds the life-saving role of today's emergency room people, processes and equipment.

Prevention a mainstay

Yet, Barton considers prevention, a mainstay of the ageless TCM, as a major ally against modern ailments, including today's top killers — cancer and heart disease.

"Nothing beats healthful prevention," says Barton. "And it's cost-effective."

Barton's practice often represents a partnership with the patient. The acupuncturist is a medical guide, an educator, a counselor and a cheer-leader.

"Besides knowing remedies to problems, I show how the problems relate to lifestyles," he says. "I work with people to change their behavior."

"I'm into people being healthy and eating well. That does not necessarily mean being skinny," says Barton.

He considers each patient's weight as a sub-topic to the current physical problem. Barton recommends use of a daily diet diary which stresses individual eating habits.

"I'm not a fanatic," he says. "Nothing will help or hurt you if you only eat once in a while."

Foods of commerce — defined by Barton as sugar, white flour, refined foods, red meat, salt and coffee — have contributed to ill-health.

"Developing countries can't afford to have heart disease or cancer," he says. "They can't afford the fancy, processed and fast foods we have."

Children benefit

Even children can benefit from acupuncture and TCM says the Arlington acupuncturist.

Such conditions as asthma and hyperactivity can be assisted. Acupuncture also aids rehabilitation of broken bones once casts are removed.

"I've seen children with chronic sniffles," he says. "They shouldn't have to be that way."

Barton attributes America's current pursuit of the ancient Chinese practices to, initally, Nixon's visit to China in 1972.

Recent advances in technology have even brought forth laser acupuncture, says Barton.

"It is here. It is happening," he says of this ancient medical art, adding that according to the Massachusetts Acupuncture Society, more than 200 acupuncturists currently practice here.

Their estimates suggest close to a quarter of a million acupuncture treatments occuring within the state each year.

Our Children

More computer use

Q. My husband brought home a computer a few months ago, and for a short while it was exciting to have it. Our children loved the games, but that didn't last long. Since then it has just been gathering dust.

Because it cost a lot of money out of our limited budget, this situation bothers me.

Any suggestions?

A. A visit to the place where it was bought might be in order, with questions like these: What other capabilities does the equipment have? How about some uses for you and your husband, as well as for the youngsters? If it serves few purposes beyond the game involvement, what possibilities are there for an inexpensive trade-in that can broaden the family participation?

A few concrete, practical answers may help you get more satisfaction from the investment.

Q. Many times I've heard how important it is for parents to stimulate creativity among their children, especially when the kids are young. I always agreed with that idea — until now.

Our 4-year-old loves the crayons we gave him, but I didn't anticipate that he would use the wall for them! Our home is a mess, and I don't know how to get out of this situation.

A. Washable crayons and large sheets of paper may help out. So might substitute creative activities suggested by his preschool teacher, ones that would relate to what goes on there.

If he doesn't go to a preschool, how about seeking one that has a competent staff, excellent program and good facilities, and that you can afford. Then, through a parent-preschool partnership you may be able to start a creativity program at home with which you can live comfortably.

What's Healthy?
Physicals first; sports second

Why do school sports teams often require children to have physicals before they can play?

Most doctors like to give young athletes a thorough examination before they become involved in sports. The main reason is to assure that the child has no health problems that may hinder his or her participation in the sport, and at the same time make sure that the child is free of medical conditions that may be worsened by the activity.

The typical sports exam begins with a medical history. The doctor will ask you or your child a number of questions. The doctor needs to know if there is a history of such diseases as diabetes or hepatitis in your family, and will probably ask whether your childd has had any broken bones, sprains, torn ligaments or spinal injuries. He or she may also ask about eye problems, ear injuries and allergies.

After completing the medical history, the doctor will probably try to size up whether the child is physically cut out to play the sport. Sometimes children or their parents want them to get involved with sports that are simply physically inappropriate. For instance, a short, slim child probably shouldn't play football.

The third part of the sports physical is the examination itself. The doctor will examine your child's heart, lungs, eyes, ears and genitals, and will check for any muscle and joint problems. In short, the doctor will examine all of the body systems that need to be in working order for the child to participate safely in the sport of interest.

Before you take your children for a sports physical, explain to them they they must be totally open with the physician. Sometimes children hide injuries because they're afraid they won't be able to play if they admit to pain. Make sure your child realizes that hiding even a minor pain may result in a serious disability.

Finally, if your child does join the team, keep an eye open for signs of injuries that he or she may be trying to hide. Don't hesitate to talk to the coach about your child's health and fitness. Good communication between parents, children, coaches and physicians is essential to a young athlete's continued well being.

WHAT STAYS WITH HOUSE?

Real estate is usually defined as the land and everything attached to it, such as: buildings, trees, shrubs, etc. The buyer normally gets all of the real estate, but none of the owner's personal property. A problem arises when personal property has become a part of the real estate. This is called a fixture and does pass with the real estate.

There are three usual tests which must be satisfied. Has the personal property been permanently affixed to the real estate? Is it intended to became part of the real estate? And finally, what is the local custom? Some fixtures might include: shades, heaters, ranges, screens, storm windows, and lighting fixtures.

It is important that the seller spell out specifically in his sales agreement exactly what he intends to give to the buyer as part of real estate. This will save misunderstanding at the closing, and sometimes save a sale.

Louise Ruma-Ivers is the immediate past President of the Greater Boston Women's Council of Realtors, and a past Director of the Marketing Institute for the Greater Boston Real Estate Board. She is a member of the Arlington Historic Districts Committee.

Dot Stein is a Vice President of the Greater Boston Real Estate Board and a Director of its Multiple Listing Service. She was a long-time Arlington Town Meeting member, and a member of the Arlington School Committee.

Home help tips: use color to cheer walls

Q. I am moving into a newly constructed apartment building where all the units are freshly painted white. The floors are wood except in the kitchen and bathroom.

The model is very beautifully decorated in all white with elegantly modern furnishings right out of a magazine. While I very much admire the overall effect, it isn't me. I want to live with more traditional surroundings.

I cannot repaint or wallpaper, according to my lease. What can I do, if anything, to live with white walls without feeling like I'm on a stage set? — E.V.

A. White walls need not restrict you. Sometimes very colonial-style homes are created with whitewashed walls. The walls are simply the backdrop.

Make your statement with your furniture, window treatment, rugs and accessories. Choose fabrics and designs of furniture that give you the warmth of tradition — fine natural woods in light maples or gleaming mahoganies, heavily textured wools or linens in plaids or solids or stripes, small finely executed floral prints on polished cotton.

Accent with brass or silver, leather, hand-carved wood, hand-crafted ceramics and flowers for a traditional feeling.

Even in a modern room with white walls, a brilliant color on the floor can add drama. For example, a clean crisp look is achieved with white walls, bright red carpeting and contemporary or traditional furnishings.

The key is not so much the colors of the background elements as the furnishings that are chosen.

Q. I have just moved into a new home and have spent the entire budget on the down payment and some basic furnishings for the living room. I do want very much to furnish my husband's and my bedroom in a very elegant manner.

I had earlier planned to buy new bedroom furniture, but that is impossible. I'm stuck now with our old Hollywood headboard and an old hand-me-down chest.

Can you please help me patch up my lost dream until it can come true? — R.R.P.

A. When buying a new home, the best plans sometimes go awry. If you are handy with do-it-yourself projects (or if you are willing to learn) you can compensate very cleverly.

Starting with a basic bedroom, you are probably going to need window treatment immediately. Start with window shades the color of your walls (or off-white if you can't match). They are inexpensive.

When you can, buy some lace yardage and sew simple hems at the top and bottom, hanging the lace over the window on a plain curtain rod.

As you accumulate a few dollars, go to the fabric shops that sell mill ends. Buy elegant fabric in a rich design and colors you wish to carry out in your room. Simply hem lengths of this fabric and slip over painted wooden drapery bars, creating panels of fabric on each side of the windows. Trim the panels in rich braid.

Buy ample fabric to cover your bed headboard. Use the same fabric for some skirted tables that can serve as bedside tables for lamps, radio and a clock. Choose a plain comforter for your bed.

'Post modern' helps make money

To developers, post-modern architecture is another way to make a buck. At a time when office space vacancies are running more than 20 percent — or four times the desired level — builders have found that distinctive designs can produce more dollars.

Few of the nation's largest developers are commissioning post-modern designs, but many builders are borrowing some post-modern touches — distinctive tops, portholes at ground level and pastel-colored walls and interiors — for their commercial projects.

"We only live once — let's go get the best," said J.R. McConnell.

The 39-year-old whirlwind developer in Houston is planning a billion-dollar project in Galveston, Texas. The 450-acre "Grand Beach" project will include housing, offices, shopping and golf courses.

And for an architect, he chose the "prince" of post-modernism, Michael Graves, whom he described as "among the top architects of the 20th century."

"I've done everything from Greek Revival-type architecture to extreme leading edge," McConnell said, but he said he and many other developers have tired of the steel-and-glass boxes that have populated so many of America's central business districts in the last 30 years.

"It's the easy way out," he said of the traditional office designs, "throw up a building and make money building the building rather than making money over the long-term operation."

Universities, cities, non-profit organizations and homeowners across the country are among those who have embraced post-modern design to a large extent, hiring star post-modernists to design civic centers, malls, museums and campus buildings.

Standouts nationally include:

• Piazza d'Italia square, including out-of-scale replicas of ancient Roman architecture, which was designed by Charles Moore and completed in 1979 for an Italian-American association in New Orleans;

• The jukebox-like city office building for Portland, Ore., by Michael Graves, completed in 1982;

• AT&T Building with a Chippendale-like top in New York, designed by Philip Johnson and John Burgee and completed in 1983;

• Bank of the South West in Houston, a prismatic office tower with needle-like beacon on top, designed in 1982 by Helmut Jahn;

• Museum of Contemporary Art, ready for opening in December in Los Angeles according to a design by Arata Isozaki, who provided for pyramid-like roofs.

Developers who are using all or some post-modern concepts see that previous approaches to office buildings produced many bland results in the nation's skylines, even though buildings were financially successful. Nowadays, they say that unique designs have become crucial to successful leasing in the overbuilt office market.

Houston's Gerald Hines, another of the top developers in the country, has hired Graves and other post-modernists as well as more tradition-oriented architects. He said he can survey the Houston skyline and pinpoint buildings that filled quickly and those that stand empty. Many of the failures lacked unique design, he said.

"We don't think good design costs that much more if it's properly controlled," he said.

But Steve Williams, the San Diego partner for the Trammell Crow development company of Dallas responsible for a black-glass Imperial Bank tower, said cutting-edge post-modern design is not for every city.

"A lot of our partners don't think that they're in a sophisticated enough market that needs to take on a trendy design," Williams

Post modern design is spreading

said. "The challenge in San Diego is that we're in a (rental) rate-sensitive market. We don't have a lot of corporations willing to spend a lot of money on their corporate headquarters downtown."

Charles Froland, vice president for research at another commercial leasing agency, Grubb & Ellis Co. in San Francisco, likened post-modernism to any other consumer product. The old international-style modernism became commonplace and post-modernism caught on in major office markets and is spreading to smaller cities and active suburbs. But he cautioned:

"It's subject to fadism. It's like anything in retailing. Clock towers are a big thing. How many clock towers can you put in before it's overdone? How many peaks and domes and so forth can you put on buildings before people say, 'Blah!' or whatever."

However, various developers and architects say they are borrowing some of post-modernism's whimsical ideas to add interest and uniqueness to their office and retail projects.

"Modern buildings failed primarily because of a lack of concern with making urban spaces, addressing the ground or pedestrian needs and making interior spaces and entry sequences," said Joseph A. Gonzalez, a design partner for the architectural firm of Skidmore, Owings & Merrill in Chicago. "Developers are sophisticated these days and know what's going on, not only in their cities but what various architects are doing."

However, Gonzalez said that SOM, which pioneered the modern international style in 1951 with the Lever Bros. building in New York, is not interested in designing pure post-modern buildings like those by Michael Graves.

William Caldwell, a Troy, Mich., developer, is president this year of the Urban Land Institute, a Washington, D.C., think tank that counts many of America's biggest and best developers and architects as members.

"'As long as corporate America will desire and be willing to pay for it, I think the better developers will continue upgrading their architecture whether it's post-modernism or some other form," Caldwell said.

Herb Nadel, a Santa Monica, Calif., architect designing the Market Street Square apartment project in downtown San Diego, said many of his clients resist adding "some wild thing" to a building project. "They resist it because they think the market is not receptive to things that are extremely unusual."

However, he said, post-modernism has succeeded in one improvement he backs: "Clients have gotten away from more simple forms and are going to more interesting shaped buildings."

As one example, he cited a design for a Mercedes-Benz dealership that has been completed in Hollywood. The steel-gray, rounded tower is a departure from steel-and-glass boxes but it is not painted in post-modern pastels or decorated with irrelevant flourishes typical of many post-modern projects.

Nothing could be more traditional than Sotheby's, the international art auction house in business since 1744. But, as if it had received a new shipment of Faberge eggs, Sotheby's has commissioned Graves to design a 27-story residential addition to the New York headquarters at York Avenue and 72nd Street.

At the opposite end of the country, Emily Jackson sits in her Graves-designed branch library in San Juan Capistrano, Calif., and marvels at the continued interest, still 2½ years after completion.

"We still get people driving from far away, just to use the library," Jackson said. "People don't come just to check something out. They do their taxes here, write letters, because of the privacy offered."

The San Juan branch library has about 70,000 volumes and is designed with the nearby Spanish mission in mind but with enough touches to mark it as definitely post-modern.

"If you do anything new or different, you are going to be taking a risk," she said. "But the benefits can be wonderful."

Tips: how to discourage burglars

Deterrents to home burglary can be as simple as messing up a closet or trimming a hedge.

Most home burglaries take place in a matter of moments, with burglars making off with merchandise that is easy to pick up and remove quickly. Since they don't know how long a home owner will be gone, burglars break in, grab what they can carry — usually TV sets, stereos, VCRs, cameras, clothes — and then run out.

And that is where the messy closet comes in. Hangers placed every which way in the closet instead of in one direction create a terrific tangle if you try to take them off the hanger rod all at the same time. So, if a burglar takes a liking to your collection of designer shirts and evening wear, he'll either have to carefully take them out one at a time, which he's unlikely to do, or leave them alone.

Trimming a hedge to deter burglars is based on the concept of crime prevention through environmental design. This concept, supported by the Insurance Information Institute and the Independent Insurance Agents of America, aims to reduce a neighborhood's vulnerability to crime by increasing the residents' abilities to observe each other's homes, children and property.

Other burglar-preventive measures designed for the exterior of a home include making certain the street is well lighted and leaving a porch light on when you go out in the evening.

Also, when you purchase a new stereo, TV, VCR or something a burglar might find very attractive, don't leave the box lying next to your garage or trash can for all the world to see. Get it out of sight and get rid of it as quickly as possible.

Everyone knows about leaving a light burning when you're out so that a burglar will think you're in. But, if you're gone often and leave the same light burning all the time, the light becomes a giveaway that you're not home. It's all too predictable. Instead, buy a variable timer that will turn lights on and off at different times so that burglars are more likely to think someone's home.

Of course, there are plenty of safety gadgets for inside the home. Install extra locks on doors and windows, making sure all doors leading to the outside have deadbolt locks and a solid core. Install a sophisticated alarm system that will sound off if someone tries to break into the house, or get a system that automatically alerts the police station.

A TAXING SITUATION

Some lending institutions require the buyer to set up an escrow account. This is a fund to which the borrower makes regular contributions. The lending institution is thereby assured that the buyer's real estate taxes and insurance are sure to be paid. It may be a new experience for a first time homeowner to be called upon to pay these expenses. Since not all homeowners are entirely prepared to handle these costs, the lending institution demands that an escrow account be established to protect its investment. This can benefit the homeowner in several ways. The lender takes care of all of the headaches and paperwork for the homeowner. Lastly, unexpected expenses will not force the homeowner to borrow additional monies just to pay bills.

Buying real estate is a most intricate matter today. At CENTURY 21 COLLINS REALTY, INC., our experience and familiarity of current financing trends allows us to discuss and point out various financial options that could well allow you to make a more prudent and happier choice of real estate investment. Come in today and let us discuss your goals and financial considerations. We can also show and sell any home that you may see listed with MLS. For knowledgeable assistance every step of the way you'll find us at 783 Massachusetts Ave., 648-6900. We are open daily, evenings and weekends.

How to get up to $150,000 for your house without selling it

Simply apply for a Home Equity Line of Credit with Winchester Savings Bank.

A Winchester Savings Bank Home Equity Line of Credit can give you the largest line of credit you've ever had . . . from $10,000 up to $150,000. Cash that's instantly available anytime. For anything you want. Make home improvements. Buy a new car. Make investments. Purchase more property. Pay for education. Or cover life's unexpected (and often expensive) emergencies. And once you have a Home Equity Line of Credit and need money, you simply write a special Home Equity check. You'll never have to apply for a loan again.

Not only will you have instant access to your money at any time, you'll pay less for it. Our rate is just 1¼% above the prime rate, as published in the Wall Street Journal, and is adjusted monthly. And since the prime rate is tied to current money market conditions, you'll always be assured of receiving a competitive rate.

No application fee. No "points". No annual fee.

Unlike home equity loans offered by many other banks, there are no application fees at Winchester Savings Bank. Nor are there any "points" to pay. You'll only be charged for the costs that are typical of any mortgage, i.e., appraisals, title searches, and recording fees. We'll even waive the appraisal cost if the assessed value on your tax bill can be used.

How to apply.

To apply for your Home Equity Line of Credit, or for more information, just mail the coupon or call 729-2130.

And see how easy it is to get up to $150,000 for your house without selling it.

How to figure your Home Equity Line of Credit.

Just follow these simple steps and you'll know exactly how large a Home Equity Line of Credit you're eligible for at Winchester Savings Bank.

Appraised value of your house (owner-occupied 1- to 4-family house or condominium) $_____

Multiply appraised value by 75% (x .75) $_____

Subtract the outstanding balance on your existing mortgage(s) (–) $_____

Your maximum Home Equity Line of Credit $_____

You may choose to apply for the maximum line of credit or any lesser amount above the $10,000 minimum. And naturally, you pay interest only when you borrow and only on the amount you borrow—not on the total line of credit.

YES, I'd like to get from $10,000 to $150,000 for my house without selling it. Please send me more information and an application for Winchester Savings Bank's Home Equity Line of Credit.

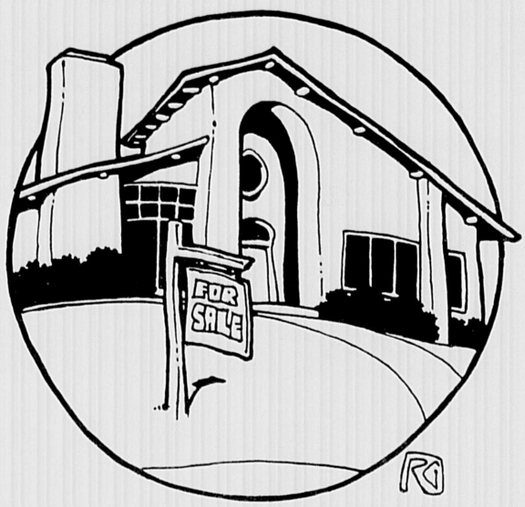
Experts disagree about 15-year mortgage option



A new option for home buyers — the 15-year mortgage — is gaining new popularity, according to Realtors and bankers.

For a mere 15 percent extra payment per month, they say, buyers can own their homes outright in 15 years and save 15 years of extra interest required on a 30-year mortgage.

But some accountants argue that the choice is not so clear-cut. They say that holders of 30-year mortgages can pocket a sizable amount in a savings account, compound the interest and maintain maximum liquidity if economic problems hit the family.

When all is said and done, said Fred Davis, an investment consultant, "there doesn't appear to be an advantage either way."

But in general, he said, the higher-income family would be better off with a 30-year mortgage and a lower-income family could benefit more from a 15-year mortgage.

However, the results in the marketplace appear to be just the opposite. Higher-income, money-savvy people are opting for the shorter mortgage. Lower-income, first-time buyers are signing up for 30-year and adjustable-rate mortgages because that is the only way they can afford to buy.

The shorter-term mortgage used to be the industry norm. But when the Great Depression hit, the federal government created programs to encourage more home ownership and the 30-year, fixed-rate mortgage became the standard for the next half century.

Then came the high-inflation, high-interest, recession-ridden early 1980s. And the 30-year standard mortgage became just one of many options in the home ownership supermarket.

With inflation low and interest rates stabilized, home owners now can pick the mortgage of their choice.

Get out your calculators and lots of yellow pads, because the differences come down to what is best for your personal financial situation.

To understand the principles, assume the following: a $100,000 home, $20,000 down payment, $80,000 mortgage, 35 percent federal income tax bracket and 12 percent rate for 30-year, fixed-rate mortgages.

The monthly payment on a 30-year, fixed rate mortgage for this house would be $823 in principal and interest. At the end of one year, the interest paid would be $9,548; the total paid on the principal balance, $290.

By Year 7, at which the typical family sells its house, the total interest paid to date would stand at $66,131; the principal balance still remaining, $77,009.

A 15-year mortgage carries a lower interest rate but a higher monthly payment. Current rates stand at about 11.75 percent. The monthly payment works out to $947, or $124 more than the 30-year mortgage — a 15 percent premium.

In the first year, interest paid totals $9,290 ($294 less than the 30-year loan) and principal paid so far is $2,077 ($1,787 more than the 30-year loan total and approximately the same as paid in the first seven years of the longer mortgage).

By end of Year 7, the 15-year mortgage holder will have paid $58,487 in interest ($7,644 less than paid on the longer loan) and the principal balance left to pay would stand at $58,944 ($18,065 less than with the 30-year mortgage).

By the end of the 15-year mortgage period, all $80,000 would have been paid off (the 30-year mortgagee would still owe $68,565).

Sounds like a simple choice: Pay a little more per month for 15 years and own your house then.

"But it's not that simple," said Jim Parker.

A certified public accountant who works for Hewlett Packard, Parker has been massaging the numbers as he and his wife, Charlotte, contemplate buying a new home in Southern California. He provided the computer printout and analysis used here in comparing the mortgage alternatives.

He finds that the extra payment made each month on the 15-year mortgage is hardly peanuts.

Over 15 years, that extra $124 in monthly payments totals $22,320. Invested in a money market account with an after-tax interest rate of 4 percent — what Parker calls the "after tax opportunity cost" — the cumulative savings amounts to $50,690.

If the thrifty home owner had left this fund untouched all those years, he could pay it all toward the remaining balance of $68,149 and owe only $17,459.

In 1985 dollars, that $17,500 is worth only about $6,808 — assuming the lower amount were invested today in an 8 percent-bearing account.

"You could be doing something with your money," Parker said. "The 15-year mortgage holder saved $17,459 (in equity buildup by making higher monthly payments), but it's worth only $6,800 in 1985 terms."

He said the home owner thus has two financial choices:

— Make higher payments on the 15-year schedule, a decision that leaves less money in his pocket every month; or,

— Save the money either for other purchases and unexpected expenses or pay off the majority of the balance in 15 years.

In the first seven years, Parker and other experts said, the principal buildup on the 15-year mortgage is so low that it does not make sense to have paid the extra $124 per month. But if a home owner plans to live in the same house for 15 years or more, the shorter mortgage may be a good strategy.

Jim Kuhn, a tax accountant, said he favors the 15-year mortgage, no matter what the extra monthly payment will be, because it means lower interest payments in the long term.

'If you can afford to cut down on your period of time by increasing monthly payments or making periodic payments and you can carry it, you're a hell of a lot better off," Kuhn said.

Historic Shores Give Berth To An Incomparable Community.

A spirited parkside community is about to be launched on the banks of the Mystic River. Boasting superb views over the river, an expansive and verdant park next door and the Boston skyline beyond, this site is rich with the proud history of Medford's shipbuilding era.

The 89 townhouses at Shipside Green are uniquely sited around beautifully landscaped greens opening out to the park and river's edge. Several blocks away from Medford Square and just minutes drive to I-93 or the Wellington Circle T Station, Shipside Green offers unusual access to both Route 128 and downtown Boston.

The architecture provides three distinct floor plans, each with a fireplace and its own striking view from a balcony or private garden.

Unihab, Inc., a highly regarded Cambridge real estate development firm, is now preparing to offer for purchase a select number of condominium residences. Shipside Green is designed, developed and marketed by Unihab and will be ready for occupancy this spring. For more information regarding Shipside Green's initial offering, call (617) 396-4200.

Audi Remanufactured Parts. Built Like New. Priced For Less.

Remanufactured parts are better than "rebuilt" or "reconditioned" parts. They may even be better than original parts since technical advances are often incorporated into the remanufacturing process.

Each unit — alternator, water pump or one of over 300 other parts — is disassembled, cleaned and tested to exacting standards. During reassembly, parts that do not meet these standards are replaced. Then the assembly is tested again to make sure it works as well as the original in every way.

Our remanufactured parts carry the same 6-month/6,000-mile limited warranty as new Audi Parts.* The only thing that isn't like new is the price.
